"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON
COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lily Lou Lansing, pretty, young telephone operator, lives with her married sister in moderate circumstances. She is torn between desire for an operatic career and love for wealthy Ken Sargent. Following a party at Ken's home, Lily Lou realizes they are unsocially and decides to give him up. Ken overrules her objections and she accepts his proposal of marriage. Next day, they go to Woodlake, Lily Lou's home town, for their license.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

It was Monday—"Blue Monday," May called it. Back in "Woodlake" it would be "wash-day," with shirts flapping on clotheslines, and mother with clothes-pins in her mouth, and the copper boiler steaming on back of the stove.

And it was her wedding day... the day she was going to marry Ken.

Lily Lou, wide awake in a second, turned over and buried her face in the pillow. She could hear May and Raymond moving around, getting ready for work. They mustn't know she was awake.

"Lily Lou! We're going—hurry—you'll be late!"

May's voice. The slam of the front door. The sound of their hurrying feet, and the rumble of the engine, as the car started, reluctantly, in the garage just under Lily Lou's room.

When they were gone she sprang out of bed, and ran to the mirror. Suppose that little rough place on her chin turned out to be a pimple! But it wasn't—it was perfectly all right. Lily Lou sighed with relief. She stood with her bare feet, chilly on the varnished floor, and earnestly studied her face in the hand glass. Thank goodness... It would have been terrible to look a fright on this day, of all days...

From the top dresser drawer she took out the little pink glass boxes of bath crystals and dusting powder she had bought in an extravagant moment. They had been intended for May's birthday next month... but there would be lots of time to get May something else.

She dumped a generous handful of crystals into the slowly filling tub. It smelled very nice... not just what she expected from the label "June Roses"—but very nice.

She dressed, more leisurely than she had ever dressed, enjoying the silence of the house, the luxury of the fragrant powder and the feel of new silken underthings.

It would have been nice to have all new clothes. A girl dreams of all new things, for her wedding... Lily Lou thought of Irene and the hope chest, brimful and running over... But Irene didn't have Ken! Besides, she had two new pairs of chiffon stockings besides the ones she had on, and the lace topped slip that Bess made last Christmas, and that pair of ivory Chinese damask pajamas she bought in Chinatown last summer, and then decided were too grand to wear... And her coral silk sport suit was pretty... Wonder if May would mind if she borrowed her new Panama hat to wear with it? Surely not, for a wedding!

Would that be enough to take? The suitcase was only half full. Ken hadn't said how long they'd stay... Probably just go up to the lake to be married, and then back to town to break the news to the family, and have a real wedding trip afterward... after the family knew, and he could get away from the office...

DEATH OF FOUR WOMEN PROBED

Lou Thompson, telegraph company employee who died Saturday.

Morris said that F. S. Roach signed a statement today that Dr. Thatcher performed an illegal operation on Mrs. Roach two days before she died last week.

The prosecutor charged that Thatcher also performed an operation on Mrs. Frank Lee, 17, of Wichita Falls, Tex., another student which preceded her death here Tuesday. Morris planned to

"In the face of this company... an honorable estate instituted of God in the time of man's innocence."

Mrs. Burpee clutched at the fur collar of her coat... She was too warm, certainly she was too warm... Lily Lou forgot to listen to Mr. Shaver. She was afraid that the heat and the coat were going to prove too much for the obliging witness...

"Pronounce you man and wife."

Mr. Shaver had stopped talking. She was married. Mr. Shaver continued to stand there, holding the book. To one side, his wife and the over-warm witness waited...

"You may kiss her," Mr. Shaver said benignly and waited with interest.

"Ahhh!" sighed Mrs. Burpee. Even the minister's wife came to life and uncrossed her hands which she had held folded and motionless during the ceremony.

Lily Lou fought down a hysterical desire to laugh. Ken had turned scarlet, even to his ears. He leaned over and kissed her awkwardly.

Then the congratulations began. Mr. Shaver pumped her hand energetically. "I wish you all happiness, I surely do!"

She felt the dry lips of the minister's wife brush her cheek. Then a hearty moist smack from Mrs. Burpee. "May all your troubles be little ones, dearie! I hope you'll be happy, I sure do!"

At last they were out in the air again. Lily Lou took off her hat, brushed back her damp hair.

"Whew! That's over. Last time I ever got married, Mrs. Sargent!" Ken drove around the corner, and halted under the shade of an immense walnut tree.

Lily Lou stiffened for a moment—Ken shouldn't kiss her like that... in the broad daylight, with the two tow-headed little boys staring from a fence... "You're mine, all mine now," And Lily Lou forgot the little boys, and the heat, and the sunlight...

"Oh, Ken, Ken, my dearest... I love you so!"

Her wedding ring was a circlet of diamonds, as she had hoped it would be. She had once known a girl who had one, and she had wanted hers to be like it, not just a diamond and then a space, and a space and a diamond the way May's was, nor plain, engraved platinum like Bess's.

Sound Thought Stressed

Richmond, Va., April 28.—(UP)—Sound reasoning based on experience and not theory should be the basis of government, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt told the conference of governors here.

The Democratic presidential candidate's speech concluded the busiest day of the session for the state executives who also were addressed by President Hoover on nationwide tax reform, and heard a petition for the release of Tom Mooney, convicted of bombing San Francisco's war-time Preparedness parade.

wreckage of the frame house and extricated Bradburn and his son. Neither was believed seriously injured.

The accident occurred on an up-grade where the Grand Trunk tracks join the main New York Central line. The right-of-way was torn up for more than half a mile by the plunging cars. Inspectors were unable to determine cause of the accident but believed an open switch might have been responsible.

The train was bound for Chicago from Montreal and Detroit.
