NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that Monday, May 2, 1932 will be the last day to pay your Spring installment of taxes. The county treasurer's office will be open from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M. during the tax paying season. All taxes not paid by that time will become delinquent and a 10% penalty will be added. Those who have bought or sold property and wish a division of taxes are asked to come in at once.

Call on the Auditor for errors and any reductions. The Treasurer can make no corrections.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty of delinquent taxes resulting from the omission of tax-payers to state definitely on what property they desire to pay, in whose name it may be found, in what township or corporation it is situated.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, the law is such that there is no option left for the Treasurer but enforce the collection of delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of delinquent lands and lots will take place on the second Monday in February 1932 at 10:00 A. M.

County orders will not be paid to anyone owing delinquent taxes. All persons are warned against them.

No receipts or checks will be held after expiration of time, as the new depository law requires the Treasurer to make daily deposits.

Particular attention, if you pay taxes in more than one township mention the fact to the Treasurer also see that your receipts call for all your real estate and personal property.

In making inquiries of the Treasurer regarding taxes to insure receipt do not fail to include return postage.

JOHN WECHTER
Treasurer Adams County Indiana.

THIMBLE THEATER

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lily Lou Lansing, pretty, young telephone operator, lives with her married sister in moderate circumstances. She is torn between desire for an operatic career and love for wealthy Ken Sargent. Following a party at Ken's home, Lily Lou realizes they are unsuited socially and decides to give him up. Ken overrules her objections and she accepts his proposal of marriage. A few days later they are married at Woodlake.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

"Now where do we go?" Ken was asking.
"I think we ought to see mother and dad first."
"All right!"

Lily Lou's heart began to beat nervously when they drove into Woodlake, and turned off the main street, into the road that passed the Lansings' house.
It had never seemed so shabby. Even the flowers in the front yard looked ragged in the heat. The vines were powdered with heavy yellow dust, and old Thomas, the cat asleep on her mother's rocking chair on the porch, was minus an ear.

The screen door was unlatched—nobody ever locks doors in Woodlake... but the house seemed empty.

"Mother!" Lily Lou called. "Mother!"

She ran straight through the house, out to the back yard. Ken followed, more slowly. He knew that Lily Lou was afraid they were all out... he despised himself for hoping they were...

"Lily Lou—why—where did you come from?" Mrs. Lansing, scraps of blue and white checked cloth sticking to her old-fashioned white apron, emerged from the front bedroom, thimble still on her finger.

"From Oakland, Oh, mother—I'm so glad!"

"And Mr. Sargent, too... I'll just... But why, why... did you get the day off, Lily Lou? Has anything happened? Has May..."

"No—no—no bad news," Lily Lou beamed. She couldn't hold back her news any longer. She held out her hand on which the circlet of diamonds twinkled. She was laughing, and tremulous — "Oh, mother—we're married—Ken and I—"

It took a lot of explaining. Mrs. Lansing didn't understand at first. She was hurt—"You mean you're married already—you didn't have anyone at the wedding? Oh, Lily Lou!"

"But it was so sudden—we decided all at once. Oh, mother—say you're glad—"

Mrs. Lansing wiped her eyes with the hem of the white apron. Kissed her daughter, colored a little, and kissed Ken... Lily Lou was happy again. "Now you are glad—I know you are, mother!"

In the midst of it dad came home. He was wearing his old corduroy trousers, that squeaked, and a faded blue shirt. Lily Lou hurried herself at him, hugged him tight, rubbed her satiny cheek against his sandy bristles—"Dad! congratulate us—I mean congratulate Ken—We're married, Ken and I—just now!"

He wasn't as pleased as her mother. He said, "She's very young," looking sternly at Ken.
"I think her mind is made up," Ken said, a little stiffly, and then he added, "You don't have to worry, sir, I'll make her happy. It's the only thing I want—to make Lily Lou happy—"

Lily Lou followed her mother into the kitchen. "Let's just have something cold—" she suggested, "it's too hot!"

"No biscuits? It wouldn't take long for biscuits, dear—"

So they made biscuits, though the fire in the old range heated the kitchen red hot. Mrs. Lansing brought a ham, baked golden brown and dotted with cloves and peppers, from the cooler on the back porch.

"I was going to take it to the church supper tonight—it's the annual Men's Dinner—but the ladies said to get along without it. They always have twice as much as they need anyway. Oh, Lily Lou! To think it's your wedding supper..."

They ate on the long dining room table, with the best linen table cloth, and all the best dishes, brought down from the top shelf. "We ought to have sent for Bess," Mrs. Lansing worried. "Or your Uncle Eph. It seems selfish, not to have any more than just us—"

"No—not selfish—just nice."

Ken said, "We're going to be selfish about our wedding. Why shouldn't we be? We got married to please ourselves, and we're telling you first, and after supper I'll send a wire home to my folks, and Lily Lou's sister, and then we'll be on our way—carefree—"

Mrs. Lansing got Lily Lou alone in the kitchen. "Dear, if you'd like to stay here tonight—your room—it's just been cleaned. I could pick up the sewing scraps in a minute—"

But she was visibly relieved when Lily Lou said that Ken had made other plans.

She kissed Lily Lou tenderly when they left. Dad could hardly bear it. He just waved, and then he went out back to feed his chickens, pretending it was just nothing—girls get married every day.

Ken's spirits rose as they left the town behind. "Now for the telegrams!"

Lily Lou looked over his shoulder when he wrote them. Added "Love" to May's.

"Can you stand a country hotel, honey? Or do you want to drive
