Cement Train 170 Miles Long (Boulder City, Nev., —UP) Some engineer with a gift for figures has estimated that a train of sufficient size to transport all the cement to be used in construction of Boulder Dam would have to be 170 miles long. Such a train would be composed of 27,500 average size freight cars.

THIMBLE THEATER

"EMBERS OF LOVE"

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON
COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lily Lou Lansing, young and pretty telephone operator, gives up her opportunity for an operatic career to marry wealthy Ken Sargent. Ken's parents had hoped their son would marry the socially prominent Peggy Sage and threaten to have the marriage annulled. The young couple go housekeeping and are ideally happy. Then Ken loses his position and, one night, Lily Lou hears him sobbing. Next day, Ken's father calls on Lily Lou. He tells her with the news that her marriage has been annulled, and gives her $500 and a railroad ticket to New York. Feeling that Ken no longer cares, Lily Lou leaves. She arrives in New York and takes a furnished room. Lily Lou is just about desperate searching for work when Maxine Rochon, another lodger, offers her a position playing the piano for a dancing teacher. She and Maxine go to live with the wealthy Mrs. Paula Manchester, whose hobby is befriending young artists and boarding them reasonably in her sumptuous home. Letters and clippings from home inform Lily Lou of Ken's engagement to Peggy Sage. She is broken-hearted but tries to forget. One day, at work, Lily Lou becomes ill.

CHAPTER THIRTY

Lily Lou went out into the hall. She walked to the fire escape in the rear, and opened the door that led out to the rusty iron landing. Someone opened the door of the studio next to it. It was Dwight Gwin, the big, gray-haired man who coached professionals. "Hello," he said, and then he stopped and stared at her curiously. "You're not ill, are you? I wouldn't go out there if I were you. Wait! Take my arm!" Lily Lou saw the tall, loose-jointed figure coming toward her, and motioned him back, her already overstrained nerves jangling at the thought of one more prying question. "I'm quite all right, thanks," she said. "Just—warm!" She took another backward step and grabbed at the rail. It wasn't there. Nothing was there. She closed her eyes, as the whole world seemed to slip away beneath her. A short man and a tall man were standing in the room where she lay. Lily Lou saw them, silhouetted against the window. They seemed to be talking. The short man jerked a thumb in her direction. She caught the word "she". Because her eyelids were so heavy, she closed her eyes again. It was easier to think with her eyes shut. They were talking about her, she was sure of that. She lay quite still, trying not to be frightened. Everything was all right. Something had happened, that was all. She'd remembered in a moment. Painfully she recollected. The heat in the dancing class, and coming out to the fire escape for air. She must have fainted... silly! faint. The Lansings never fainted... and, oh, dear, how miserable it made you feel... She knew where she was now. Dwight Gwin's studio, full of Italian antiques, red velvet and tarnished gilt, and a built in fountain in the middle of the floor. She'd peeked in lots of times when the door was open. She closed her eyes hastily. They had discovered she was conscious, and she didn't want to talk—not yet—not just yet— A firm, cool hand closed over her wrist. It was no use pretending. They knew she was awake. She opened her eyes and smiled apologetically. "I'm awfully sorry," she said. "I'm afraid I fainted. It was nice of Mr.—Mr.—" Farmer Receives Five Cents For Hog Fort Ripley, Minn., May 12.—(U.P.)—Magnus, farmer, shipped a 215-pound hog to market. pace with the solemn funeral tread.

Most elaborate precautions, similar to those enforced when Doumer's successor was elected at Versailles, were taken to prevent possible attempts at violence. Early this morning police made a house to house inspection of balconies along the route where bombs or arms might be hidden. The streets between the Elysee, Notre Dame cathedral, and the Pantheon were lined with troops standing shoulder to shoulder with fixed bayonets.

The funeral procession was two miles long. Schools and business houses were closed. Mourning was observed throughout the nation.

The most solemn part of the ceremony took place at Notre Dame, where the president's body was placed on a catafalque 17 feet high, draped in black, beneath a canopy of black lined with the tricolor of France. Candles cast the only light on the scene.

Requiem mass was said by Cardinal Verdier, archbishop of Paris. The procession then climbed the hills above Paris to the Pantheon, where Doumer's body will rest until it is removed to the family cemetery for burial beside his sons who died in the World war.

Police were particularly strict in guarding the Prince of Wales, King Albert, and other royal representatives. They would not allow photographs or journalists even to approach any member of the royal party from the time the members of ruling houses reached Paris.

Thousands of Parisians and pilgrims from all parts of France assembled along the funeral route before dawn, squatting on boxes and stools and eating sandwiches as they held their vantage points. Balconies of hotels and other public and private buildings along the route were rented two days in advance. There were many tourists among the spectators.

Floral offerings from all parts of the world were carried in six funeral cars drawn by black horses. Wreaths were received from President Hoover and tary of State Stimson.

The King of Annam, Indo-China, where Doumer was governor-general, was mourning for the late president, the president's son, Paul Gorgonoff, Russian, placed his cell at St. Peter's chanting a prayer "for the repose of the soul."

Detectors were sent to interview Russian who insisted that Doumer was an impostor, a real Dr. Gorgonoff was Bolshheviks soon after the revolution.

Don't let them count you out!

A "run-down" body can't stand up under work and worry

Maybe that "tired feeling" is due to a lowered blood count. Worry, overwork, diet neglect or some sickness often reduces those precious workers that make for strength. S.S.S. is beneficial in regenerating hemoglobin and red-cells in the blood... improving the appetite... aiding digestion... building firm flesh—all so important to charm and personality.

S.S.S. builds sturdy health

Gain new strength... S.S.S.—it has been proved... 100 years. Because it is safe, fresh, tonic, bars and breaks any drug store. In two weeks' time and double—the latest economical and is sufficient for weeks' treatment.
