FLEDDERJOHANN FUNERAL HELD

clean habits and living inspired others to heart purity. His happy cheerful disposition brought sunshine wherever he went. He had a faith in humanity, that created humanities faith in him. He could always be found in the center of every movement that had for its purpose the glory of God and the good of man. Factions were united in him, for he lived in abiding peace. While Rev. Fledderjohann lived a very active, busy life, he always had time for his family. From an outside viewpoint, his family life almost attained perfection, and his wife and children will call him blessed. Our Ministerial fraternity has lost a warm friend and counselor. The community will miss his directive suggestions. In the name of the ministers of Decatur, Protestant and Catholic, I would express to the Zion Reformed church our sincere sympathy for the loss of such an effective minister. To the wife and children and the rest of the relatives we extend our deepest sympathy, and assure you of our sincere prayer that the God of all Comforting Grace may sustain you during this experience of inexpressible sorrow and loss.

BACCALAUREATE BACCALAUREATE HELD SUNDAY

"Steal Away." Miss Eleanor Repert presided at the piano. The benediction was given by Rev. C. R. Lanman, and the recessional for the graduating class was played by Miss Gerber.

In opening his sermon Rev. Vance expressed his pleasure in speaking to the young people and then stated, "You have been carried along, largely, upon the resources of others but from now on you will come more and more to rely upon your own fund of knowledge and experience acquired through these years of work and study."

"A good name is the foundation and basic element in any life. Upon it one builds the structure of life skyward and heavenward. A good name is invested with a personality that lives above the petty things of this life."

"The deeds of great men have been written across the pages of history and are read and studied by all. The name of a good man or woman is not only remembered for the time being but their good lives on and on through out all eternity."

"Some would strive to write their names high in the halls of fame, but better still, we ought to see that it is written high in the pages of God's Kingdom."

"Great riches bring great cares with them, expose men to danger, and add no real value to a man. A fool and a knave may have great riches, but a good name makes a man easy and safe, supports a man wise and honest, redounds to the glory of God and gives a man a greater opportunity of doing good. NOW SHOWING—"THROUGH WITH WOMEN"

"EMBERS OF LOVE"
By HAZEL LIVINGSTON
COPYRIGHT 1931 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS
Lily Lou Lansing, young and pretty telephone operator, gives up her opportunity for an operatic career to marry wealthy Ken Sargent. Ken's parents had hoped their son would marry the socially prominent Peggy Sage and threaten to have the marriage annulled. However, the young couple go house-keeping and are ideally happy. Then Ken loses his position and, one night, Lily Lou hears him sobbing. Next day, Ken's father calls and informs Lily Lou her marriage has been annulled. Feeling Ken no longer needs her, Lily Lou accepts a railroad ticket and $500 from Mr. Sargent and goes to New York. She rents a furnished room and through Maxine Lechman, one of the boarders, secures a position playing the piano for a dancing teacher. Later, she and Maxine go to live with the wealthy Mrs. Paula Manchester, whose hobby is befriending young artists. Word comes that Ken is engaged to Peggy Sage and Lily Lou is depressed. Shortly after, Lily Lou is stunned with the realization she is to become a mother. She longs for Ken, thinking how proud he would have been, but refrains from writing him. She loses her position but Dwight Gwin, the noted vocal instructor, employs her as his accompanist and promises to give her singing lessons.

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Gwin was a miracle worker. No wonder that he could pick and choose his pupils. He slaved, he inspired, he roared, he reduced his students to tears, to profanity, to the depths of despair.

He walked the floor. He wrung his hands. Tears of rage, of delight, of disappointment, glistened in his small, dark eyes. His hawk nose twitched with distaste when some one flatted. His wiry graying hair could writhe under his anguished fingers.

Unless he wasn't interested. In that case he would walk the floor, jamming bits of bric-a-brac, small objects of art on his chests and tables, with the air of an amateur discoverer for the first time. His pupil could sing anything, any way he wished. Unless it was someone in whom he had hope of real achievement he hardly listened at all.

But if he was interested, nothing was too much trouble. He'd take a line, a phrase, a trill over and over. "Again, please—once again!"

Lily Lou could never decide which was the most tiring, trying to accompany someone who couldn't stay a key and whom Gwin wouldn't trouble to correct, or playing one phrase over and over and over until her fingers ached.

But she loved it. She slaved. She earned. She took to heart everything he said. Every song she accompanied she sang in her mind. Her old dreams of success were with her again. When she heard Faust at the Metropolitan, she was Marguerite. From her place in the balcony she silently sang every note.

Gwin gave her sheaves of tickets. Plays. Operas. Concerts. "They're given to me. You may as well use them," he said.

Sometimes she worried about that. Gwin gave her too much. She was getting too indebted to him.

But just about the time she'd begun to fear that Maxine's sly innuendoes were right, and Gwin was sentimentally interested in her, he would fly into a rage over her poor German or Italian, and for a while she would be convinced that he almost hated her.

may relieve the bodily wants of others, but by a good name we may recommend the better things, higher ideals, spiritual values to them.

Among the quotations which were given by Rev. Vance were as follows: "Take the Bible as your chart and compass, it is better than the advice of man for no human wisdom, no man made philosophy is equal to its wisdom."

"Health is better than gold. Home building is better than social standing, jewelry and refinery, and worldly pleasures which too often blights soul and body and sacrifices character. The making of a life is of more importance than the making

BOOTLEGGERS HAVE LEARNED FEW NEW TRICKS

Old Enforcement Officer Recalls Indian Territory Days

PCNCA CITY, Okla. (U.P.)—Modern methods of retailing illicit liquor have shown but slight improvement over the ingenious bootlegger of pioneer Indian Territory days.

In Oklahoma, where the term, "bootlegger," originated, tricks of the illicit liquor traffic were used widely before other sections of the country adopted prohibition. The cleverness of the Oklahoma bootlegger of 1906 was revealed here by a veteran enforcement officer, who declined to permit mention of his name.

Cleverness was the weapon of the early day liquor purveyor to the Indians, in contrast to the brazen run runner of today, with his fleets of trucks, yachts and gangster "muscle men and gunmen."

A recent national survey revealed that women of middle age are the most troublesome law violators. The same was prevalent in Indian Territory.

Shortly after the federal government enacted a "bone dry" law in Indian Territory, the lawless taste for the "white" brought him much grief. Liquor was overruled by "duccers." Later, they were known as "bootleggers," they usually carried liquor in boot tops.

The term spread to the state as prohibition spread. Adoption of the 18th Amendment became a national law. Original bootleggers in Texas, Missouri and Indiana did a thriving business in the Indian country.

Women's clothing was adapted to bootlegging. The gay 90s, with the waisted skirts and bustles. The ample figure, with corset and places of concealment unknown today.

On many occasions, when arrested on suspicion of being a bootlegger, was seen carry liquor on the top of her head and within her bustle.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

Green Peppers the Cook's Friend

Examining a nationally known cook book recently, some fifty recipes were noted that called for green peppers. These included appetizers, salads, soups, stews, pot roasts, sauces, in fact about everything except desserts, breads and pastry. The green pepper is used both raw and cooked and both for flavor and decoration. It is becoming the twin of the onion in culinary use.

Its use is relatively modern. It is well within the memory of the present generation when the green pepper meant nothing in the daily diet. The chief use of peppers was limited to the hot types for mixed-pickles and seasoning.

Peppers are easily grown in the home garden. They may be dried for winter use or canned as pimientos. They are the most tender of the vegetables and no chances of cold weather or frosts should be taken with them. They are about the last plant that should be set out. This should not be done until there is absolutely no danger of a frost. Seed can be sown in the open ground for the late crop.

Plants raised in frames or in the house give the early crop and all seed houses keep plants in stock which may be purchased very cheaply at planting time.

Give the peppers a foot apart in row, full sun, rich soil, and an abundance of moisture. They seem to like moisture on their tops as well as at the roots, and the sprinkler can be turned on them to good advantage. With other vegetables it is more efficient to take the nozzle off the hose and let the water trickle slowly between the rows and soak in.

In buying pepper seed be sure that you select a sweet or cool type. The accident of using a hot instead of a sweet pepper which happens in cooking is not the fault of the cook, but of the seed you are the victim. Grow a pepper in a different part of the garden from the sweet peppers to any not mixups. Select the "matted types" if you plan to use them as "pimientos." The pimiento will give this material.

Give your peppers good attention and keep them in good growth. You will be rewarded with more and better quality produce. Advise all, do not let them get too moist during the hot weather. They will reveal in the heat of summer.

Prohibition Is Flayed

Columbus, Ind., May 16.—(U.P.)—Prohibition was depicted as "a drag on the pocketbooks of our taxpayers that has multiplied their burdens enormously" by Lawrence F. Orr in an address before the Ro-
