Shark's Companion

The largest man-eating sharks sometimes attain a length of 30 to 40 feet. It is not true that the female shark is blind. The pilot is a member of the mackerel family and only about 12 inches long. It is a voracious ship and also sharks guiding the sharks to their food. It swims close in front of the shark, but probably does it to feed or fragments scattered by the shark and also to seek protection from its enemies.

COSTES SEEKS NEW ROUTE

Paris.—(U.P.)—Dieudonne Costes, who has just completed a flight of 22,000 miles between here and Equatorial Africa, declared that the purpose of his flight was to establish a practical route linking North Africa with Equatorial Africa over the desert.

"The route chosen," said Costes, "is the Tunis, Bilma, Lake Tchad route, which clips 1,500 kilometers from the Reggan, Niamey, Lake Tchad route."

Costes declared he had collected valuable information on the trip and was convinced that the most important feature of the future air route over the desert was to link it with a permanently established system of beacons along the land route of Lake Tchad.

"In the future," Costes continued, "it will be necessary and certainly more practical that a small plane precede the automobile pioneers in their course along the desert, in order to show them the route which has been chosen by air. As soon as these two routes are known and established, the joining of the two routes must be made permanent by a system of signals and relief stations. The perils of desert flying, or desert autoing, will disappear as soon as these two works are accomplished."

Costes is head of the mission charged with establishing this direct air route and of synchronizing the road route for automobiles, which will mark the modern caravan route.

BEAVERS OFFER STATE PROBLEM

Harrisburg, Pa.—(U.P.)—The State of Pennsylvania is in the position of the central figure of "Pigs in Pigs" in regard to beaver within its territory.

In 1917, when beaver almost were extinct in the state, two were imported from Wisconsin, and three years later 20 were brought in from Canada.

Today the beaver population numbers 4,800 and they live in 988 dams of their own construction, according to the state game commission.

Complaints of damage caused by beavers are flooding the commission offices. These complaints include damage to valuable trees on private property; burrowing under fields; flooding private lands and important highways; retarding operation of mills; and use of man-made reservoirs.

In 1931, these complaints led to the destruction of 178 beaver dams and the removal to other places of 220 animals. So far in 1932, trappers working for the commission have caught 67 animals. These are exchanged with other states for different kinds of game, or are re-stocked in more desirable areas.

Barber Bugs Visited Oregon

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

She moved into the apartment that Maxine had fallen heir to. Get permission to have a small upright piano. It was the only thing they ever really quarreled over.

"A grand would have given us a little class! But that thing—ugh!" "I know, it isn't very beautiful. But I've got to live cheaply. You don't know how poor I am. The only clothes I have are the grand evening things Madame Nahman gave me, and I can't wear them on the street."

Maxine grinned. "Oh, something will turn up!" Back home in Woodlake, if she had read about a girl coming to New York, and falling into the sort of luck she had had, she wouldn't have believed it. You either had luck, or you didn't. Maxine, who practically lived by her wits, being, strangely enough, a technically good girl, took everything, and gave nothing but her personality.

She and her small circle were the sort whom traveling salesmen from Columbus and all points west invariably met and take to dinner, a show, and roof cabaret afterward. The number of blind dates that Maxine acquired was something that never failed to astound Lily Lou, who steadfastly refused to accompany her.

"Why not? Free meal, good show—I make 'em get the best seats, and pick the shows! Dance a bit afterward if they can dance, eat some more, and then leave 'em. Not so bad—for a plain looking girl? And you—with your looks..." Lily Lou laughed. "No, I couldn't. I just couldn't do it. I—I don't know—Early bringing up, I guess."

The next few months would be ghastly. Even doing all her own laundry, and all the cleaning in the apartment, and cutting her food down to almost nothing, she didn't see how she'd manage.

Gwin was staying at his Long Island home during the summer months, and only came in one day a week to teach. Lily Lou hesitated when he made out her first weekly check. "I can't take a week's pay for a day's work," she said dejectedly.

"You must live. How much are you paying for the baby's board?" "Fifty."

"And your rent?" "There's none. The apartment belonged to a girl who—who married or something, and went to Europe, and the lease isn't up until November, so Maxine and I—"

"I see." Gwin wiped away a smile. "So there's just the food, and one doesn't want to eat much this hot weather. I spend quite a lot on coffee though—to get out to Jamaica Park to see the bubchen, but I'm hoping to get church work—"

"He wheeled on her sharply. "I won't coach you if you force your voice!" "I won't force it. I'll be careful."

"Careful, eh? I've told you what happens to coloraturas who break down!" "But Gwin, I'll be careful. It isn't as though I were just beginning. I know how to keep my voice forward now—"

"All right. Choose between the church and that Metropolitan chorus idea you and Tony were raving about."

"Choose between them! Why, one's a thing to do for pay, and one's a chance to break in—"

"Exactly!" "But even you said I had to eat!" She went home, more shaken than she had been since the old days when she first faced the bubchen's coming. If she could only have stayed with Nahman until summer was over... But no use to cry over spilt milk.

Well, she'd get a job. She thought and Mrs. Henry Bloemker and daughter Irene, and Henry Hildebrand.

SOLO PIANIST WALKS STREETS AND PRACTICES

Star of Boston Symphony Gives Self Mental Rehearsals

By Martin Kane,
UP Staff Correspondent.

Boston, May 26.—(U.P.)—A pianist, who practices his art while walking along the street, is Jesus Maria Sanroma.

Sanroma, who holds the unique position of solo pianist to the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a post created especially for him by Conductor Serge Koussevitzky, does much of his practicing mentally—away from the piano.

"Often," he says, "I take a walk and go through a composition. This is a great help to memorizing. I can't explain how I do it, for I don't see my fingers strike the notes, but in my mind I seem to be playing the music."

Stuck on Chopin

"I remember once when I was to play a Chopin piece and didn't feel very sure of it. As I walked along the street I went through the whole business in my mind. At one place I got stuck and couldn't get out of the difficulty. As soon as I turned to that part, saw what was wrong, and it never bothered me again."

Sanroma was born in Porto Rico 28 years ago. At nine he had shown such remarkable gifts for the piano that he was hailed as a boy prodigy and toured the island in concerts. Governor Yager of Porto Rico became interested and the re-

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN

The Compost Pile

Place the Compost Pile in a corner of the Yard and Shield From With Shrubs.

Humus is important because it adds greatly to the water-holding capacity of sandy soils and makes clay soils more workable. About the average home there is sufficient plant material such as leaves and grass clippings to make a compost pile which would supply all of the humus that can be used advantageously about the home.

Place the compost pile in a secluded corner. Shrubs may be used to shield it from view. The plant material to be decomposed should be put down in layers, with thin layers of soil between. A few handfuls of lime and complete plantfood should be sprinkled in the plant material as it is put on the piles. A small quantity of decayed material or manure scattered through the pile will hasten decay. The compost pile should not be allowed to dry out.

Allow the composted material to decompose quite thoroughly before using it. Such material can best be used in the flower and vegetable garden.

The use of compost on the lawn is not recommended. Surface applications of manure or of no value and often cause weeds and disease. Manure is particularly objectionable, especially from the point of introducing serious human diseases (lockjaw) and gas gangrene (tetanus). The use of complete humus increases the humus content of soil, since it encourages the growth of both the top and the root system of plants. A certain percentage of the root system decays each year. This decomposed matter becomes a part of the humus. Experiments have shown that considerable percentage of the humus added to the soil in this way, in fact, this is about the only way to incorporate humus in the soil to any extent after the once established.
