Tangled Lines Caught Salmon. Kelso, Wash., (UP)—Pearl Anderson and Phil Heaward were fishing for salmon near each other in the Cowlitz river. Their lines became tangled much to the disgust of each. Then a big chinook ran into the tangled lines, became so enmeshed he was hauled ashore and divided between the two anglers.

Fred A. Wiecking. Past State Commander of the Legion. Mr. Wiecking lives at Bluffton.

Ollie A. Davis. DEPARTMENT ADJUTANT. State Adjutant of the American Legion.

V. M. Armstrong. American Legion Chairman of the new Veterans' hospital at Indianapolis.

man and opening speaker of the state convocation.

Thirty-one delegates to the national convention, two from each congressional district and seven at large, will be selected. The 1,451 delegates to the state convention will meet in district sessions Wednesday night. Harry C. Fenton, secretary of the state G. O. P. committee, said today that 4,500 persons were expected to attend the Tomlinson hall meetings.

Four years has changed the scene and instead of an instructed delegation to vote for a "favorite son" for President, one will find "Jim" Watson, favorite son of the 1928 delegation at Kansas City, in 1932 delegation Indiana votes to go unopposed for President Hoover.

FLIER'S SAFETY STILL UNKNOWN

A lookout for Hausner without success. The air ministry, officials at Croydon airport near London, and at Baldonnel airport near Dublin had no news of the flier.

At 9:46 a. m. (EDT) the blue-eyed, sandy haired little amateur flier, formerly a motion picture operator, will have been 24 hours out from Floyd Bennett airport, New York. The St. Rosa Maria carried no radio equipment.

Hausner's take-off was at 9:46 a. m., Friday. His Wright-motored Bellanca plane made a graceful run down the concrete runway and sailed out into the Atlantic mist.

It was accompanied as far as the Rockaways by another airplane, occupied by the flier's wife, Martha, Father Paul Knappock, pastor of the church which Hausner attended as a boy, and Pilot John Coyne. Hausner waved goodbye to his wife and disappeared in the cloudy skies.

Before the take-off, Hausner ranked as an amateur in aviation but confident of success, said he would head for England and from that point, would aim for Warsaw. If his ship was not in good condition over England, he intended to land at Croydon airport here.

Hausner said he expected to reach Warsaw in 44 hours. The St. Rosa Maria carried 535 gallons of gasoline, just enough fuel for the long trip.

The route Hausner planned to follow is lined with about 50 passenger liners and freighters reported in the North Atlantic lanes. All vessels have been notified to keep a sharp lookout for the big red plane.

Hausner took some chicken sandwiches, coffee, water and fruit with him on his long hop as well as six parachute flares.

Before his takeoff Hausner and his pretty young wife made their home in the hangar at Floyd Bennett field where the flier awaited favorable weather reports after his first unsuccessful attempt on May 28.

On that attempt, the unheard flier returned to the airport six hours after taking off, driven back by fog and a broken navigating instrument. For several hours he was forced to fly "blind" in hazardous weather conditions.

Hausner is 32, a naturalized American citizen. His home is in Linden, N. J. He is extremely taciturn about his flying and during his stay at the airport, talked little to reporters.

His wife is staying at the home of her brother, Walter Bates, in Jersey City during the flight. She cried a little after her husband had been off, but was sure he would succeed.

RAIL OFFICERS SEEK MILITIA

and were augmented by approximately 400 Clevelanders. They obtained free rides on 10 freight cars furnished by the New York Central on the trip from Toledo. Their aim now was to obtain a ride to Pittsburgh on the next lap on their journey to Washington to support bonus legislation.

The "Army of occupation" was tattered and hungry, but moved with Military precision and discipline as it took over the railroad yards and roundhouse last night.

A bugler sounded "assembly" and the men fell into line while Field Marshal Pace made a short talk assigning various groups to their posts.

About 150 men employed in the roundhouse and machine shops were told to lay down their tools. The invaders instructed the employees go down to the shops and might remain if they wished.

Most employees of the roundhouse remained chatting genially with the score of ex-service men assigned to firm a guard there. Two or three employees, working on books and records, were allowed to continue.

Other groups of the invaders climbed on freight cars, cabooses and locomotives and instructed the crews that operations were at a standstill.

"Keep an eye on everything here," Pace instructed. "Don't give them a chance to sneak a train out of the yards."

Some of the invaders were well acquainted with railroad operations and procedure and at the advice of these men one of the first steps was to search breakmen and other employees, removing signal flares, known as "fuses," from their pockets. This action was to permit the invaders to stop any trains passing through the yards.

"There'll be no depredations or destruction of property," Pace instructed his men. "I want that understood and I want you to keep careful watch to see that no one comes into the yards that doesn't belong here."

A general committee of about 100 was appointed to oversee the yards. The executive committee of about five or six held frequent consultations, in the roundhouse or seated on railroad ties.

On any major decision Pace demanded a vote of all the men present. The proceedings were carried out strictly in accordance with parliamentary law.

Many of the men slept in a near-

Welcome

Mayor George Krick. In behalf of Decatur citizens, Mayor Krick extends a hearty welcome to all American Legionnaires who will gather here Sunday for the Fourth District conference and Eighth district reunion. Mayor Krick also urged Decatur citizens to display the flag Sunday afternoon and to observe the traffic regulations over the line of march for the parade.

by field. Some who had money bought loaves of bread and pails of coffee which were distributed.

Decision to seize the yards was reached after the men had waited downtown all yesterday afternoon as attempts were made to arrange transportation for them to Pittsburgh.

All railroads but the Pennsylvania refused transportation. Consultation was not had with Pennsylvania Authorities. When it was learned that Pennsylvania freights were to leave the yards last night, Pace suggested that the group take possession of the yards.

"Boys," said Pace in a speech, "In 1917 when they wanted soldiers they came and took up. It's 1932 now and we want transportation." He received unanimous support. The group moved out without attempting to find an evening meal.

Decision of the ex-service men to continue their "occupation" of the yards was made in defiance of orders by safety director Merrick and police officials and in the face of appeal for militiamen.

The yards had been "dead" more than 12 hours at seven o'clock this morning. Railroad men said the situation was without precedent, that it was the first time in history here that train-service had been tied up, except by the elements.

Call for National Guard was made upon Governor White when police officials here early today hesitated to take action, asserting that there "was no violence and no interference with mail trains except one which has been moved." The train was delayed for more than an hour before leaders of the "army" agreed not to hold it.

At a 4 A. M. conference between railroad officials and leaders of the ex-service men, it was reported that no agreement could be reached.

J. A. Appleton, general superintendent of the Pennsylvania lines in Ohio, issued a formal statement in which he said:

"The demand for transportation made on the railroad by the armed bonus marchers is refused. The ground that granting of such demand would be contrary to the protection."

Police were summoned to be reserve at precinct stations and the yards after Pace informed authorities the men would stay in the yards until they were given transportation.

A sullen spirit prevailed the evening in the yards this morning. The men were hungry. Save for a few loaves of bread which were passed out during the night, they had not been fed since before noon yesterday.

Pace and other leaders observed were worried, feeling that the situation would get out of control. Qurels and near fights broke out among the men. Leaders themselves often disputed loudly.
