Overthrow of Siam's Monarchy Laid to Economic Depression

Prajadhipok, Last of Absolute Monarchs, Ousted for Inability to Find Solution to World Problem. Economy Cuts Antagonized Army.

QUEEN RAMBAI-BARNI IN WESTERN DRESS • THE KING AS A SPORTSMAN

The latest black mark to be chalked up against the old scapegoat Depression is the overthrow of King Prajadhipok, last of the world's absolute monarchs. While the King and his queen, Rambai-Barni, are held as prisoners by the revolutionaries, reports come from authentic sources at Bangkok to the effect that it was Prajadhipok's dismissal of several highly-paid army functionaries, as a feature of his economy program, that precipitated the uprising. It is further asserted that the object of the revolution is to abolish the absolute monarchy and to establish a constitutional government with Prajadhipok still king, but shorn of much of his power. This was but anticipating the aim of the king himself, for the ruler of Siam is known to have been working towards the establishment of a government of the people by the people for some time. So Prajadhipok proved his sincerity by at once endorsing the aim of the insurgents. Educated at Eton, England, it is hard to discern anything Oriental about Siam's king, that is in mannerisms or viewpoint. Last year, when he visited the United States for an eye operation, he took a keen interest in American methods of business and government and since his return to Siam, has striven to give his country the benefit of the experience gained upon that occasion.

WASHINGTON—Since the demon of depression reared its ugly head and drove prosperity into hiding around that corner, it has been blamed for many domestic, national and international catastrophes. The latest black mark chalked up against the slump is the revolution in Siam and the overthrow of King Prajadhipok's absolute monarchy.

For more than a year Siam has been feeling the acute pinch of the economic crisis that has the world in its clutches and the King's inability to cope with it has been a sad blow to the prestige he enjoyed in the eyes of his people. For Prajadhipok is not only the ruler of Siam, but is also the spiritual leader, believed to possess almost divine powers.

When the last budget failed to balance, Prajadhipok, instead of uttering a magic formula calculated to put the ship of state on an even keel, made the mistake of coming down from his Olympus and appealing to the common people, telling them that increased taxation and drastic economies were necessary if Siam was ever to get another look at prosperity.

The King himself began the economy drive by dismissing a number of highly-paid army functionaries, thereby taking the first step off his throne. For it is sound statesmanship to keep the army on one's side if one wants to continue ruling. Only a short time ago, Prajadhipok convoked a meeting of army officers in an attempt to justify the drastic cuts, and the fact that he failed to placate the officers is credited with being the reason for the revolutionary conspiracy.

The aim of the revolutionaries was the immediate abolishment of the absolute monarchy and the establishment of a constitutional government under the figure head of King Prajadhipok, who with Queen Rambai-Barni, was held prisoner by the rebels.

On receiving the demands of the chiefly as an aviation unit. King Prajadhipok ascended the throne in 1925 on the death of his brother, King Rama, who left no male child. He showed a genius for government from the start and was so immersed in the affairs and well-being of his country that even when in the United States he conducted the affairs of his kingdom by long-distance telephone from the home of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, at Purchase, N. Y., where he was a guest while convalescing from his eye trouble.

Are you a well-informed person?

Every day this newspaper is filled with news. And our experience is that the news which interests you most is the news which affects you most. When one of your friends has participated in a minor accident, you are more interested in that than in a major accident in another city.

Advertising, too, is news of the first importance. It affects you. It is intimate, local news addressed to you. It deals with your comforts, your pleasure and your business. It saves you time by telling you where the merchandise is. It saves you money by announcing fair prices. It is the guide to efficient spending. When you fail to read the advertisements, you do not keep up with news that is most important to you. You miss many opportunities.

The best-informed people are those who read the advertisements regularly. In fact, in this modern age, when each day brings forth new things which directly affect you, you cannot ignore the advertisements in your
