Reunited After 55 Years

Eau Claire, Wis., (UP)—Peter Stouff, 81, and his brother, Theodore, 78, who had not seen or heard from each other for 55 years were reunited here recently. A newspaper item in an Archbold, Ohio paper led to the reunion. They came to Wisconsin together 56 years ago, but Theodore returned to Archbold and later moved to Illinois.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"
THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY
BY ANTHONY ABBOT

Copyright, 1931, by COVICK-PRIDE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Lola Carewe, "The Night Club Lady", and her guest, Christine Quires, are mysteriously murdered in the former's apartment. Scorpions were the instruments of death. The police suspect Guy Everett, the last person to see Christine alive. Lola had blackmailed Everett. He, however, claims that Christine discovered a plot to kill Lola and feared for her own life because of her knowledge. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt learns that a young Paris bank clerk, named Basil Boucher, loved Lola. After robbing a bank to buy her a ruby, Basil disappeared. His parents sold medical laboratory specimens. Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, became hysterical at the mention of Basil, calling her daughter a beast and saying Lola never loved him. Edgar Quires, Christine's brother, left his Rochester home for New York following the receipt of a telegram the day of the murders. Christine was to have inherited wealth shortly. Suspicion also points to Dr. Hugh Baldwin when it is disclosed that he purchased scorpions. He had stated heart failure caused the deaths. Colt, calling to question Baldwin, finds him dead—from a scorpion bite! Mrs. Baldwin reveals that she knew her husband was involved with Lola. Detectives report Baldwin met a man who gave him a box. In Baldwin's desk the Commissioner finds a statement in which the doctor explains he accidentally poisoned Gaylord Gifford, Lola's husband. Lola's knowledge of this placed Baldwin in her power. She forced him to supply narcotics which she used to victimize her friends and later blackmailed them.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

"THIS is the woman to whom I have been shackled in an unholy pact for the last several years. Will it seem to be strange if I confess that she has exercised over me a horrible and fantastic influence? How can we desire that which has made us suffer torment? No psychoanalytic theory has made that mystery clear to me, for they answer me only in words and I suffer in my nerves and tissues. I am a home-loving man. I dearly love my wife and children. I could be happy and content, making a modest living for them and living out my life in the quiet paths of my profession. It is Lola who has broken my wife's heart. It is she who has brought a cloud of suspicion, a plague of unhappiness into my home. How, then, is it that when I am alone with her I try to hold her in my arms? It is this, as much as anything else, that has made me so hate my own life that I am quitting it. I feel unclean. Yet—for whatever value it may be to the psychologist—let me record it here and now that I did passionately desire this woman, who has held me in bondage and has treated me with contempt, with studied and continued insolence.

"It was a queer relationship. I furnished drugs to many strange people. But even this was not the full extent of my operations.

"All of this has been going on, ever since my friend died—my friend, Gaylord Gifford, whom, unintentionally, I killed. In those years of what I may call my serfdom to Lola Carewe I believed that I knew the full extent of her wickedness. But recently my eyes were opened. I learned then what I had not before even dreamed of—that in the range of this beautiful creature's crimes not even murder was excluded.

"Specifically, what brought me to this realization was a demand that she make upon me. It was an order that could have only one meaning. I was told that she wished me to obtain, through some laboratory supply agency, an insect whose bite would be instant death. She confessed to me that someone very important to her meant to commit a murder—I tell you, she brazenly confessed this to me.

"I was horror-stricken at this demand. I looked at her, as she sat before the fireplace in her living room, as if she were a fiend from hell. The devil, I thought, must be a woman; I had always believed him a man. What reason could Lola have for a poisonous insect—unless murder were stirring in her own heart, her own head, yes, and her shapely white hands? She was the one who meant to kill!

"I uttered a positive protest. I told her I would not do what she asked. It was the first time that I had refused to do anything for her, since she had me in her power. But she did not take my rebellion seriously. The very calmness with which she heard me revolt against her demands caused me to feel the weakness of my stand. Since I had been taking orders from Lola Carewe, I had been wading deeper in crime all the time. Now she could denounce me to the police, not only for the death of her husband, from which I could have extricated myself, disgraced it is true, but at least free—but now I was guilty of half a thousand offenses that would send me to the Federal prison in Atlanta. She told me not to be silly. I finally told myself that she was right. I believed then that a freedom bought by a murder would be better than to go to prison and fasten on my family the penalties of my crimes.

"I did not stop to reason, then, that I would be only opening the door to further enormities. Once Lola had been enmeshed in a murder plot, I would, indeed, be owned by that woman. She could order me to kill as often as she liked.

"But this I did not realize, then. I suppose I did realize it, to tell the truth, but overriding all such saner calculations was the one desire to protect myself. I was afraid of Lola Carewe. Besides, what danger was I running to provide her with the little thing she asked—an insect whose bite was positively deadly? How was I to know what she would use it for?

"It was with such base and specious reasoning that I persuaded myself. I went to a Spanish youth whom I knew—Ricardo Villafranca is his name—and talked to him about my quest. Ricardo is the proprietor of one of the laboratory supply houses with which I have dealt, in the past. He specializes in Central and South American specimens. Ricardo told me that he believed a certain scorpion, very frequently found in the Durango region of Mexico, was the most certain in its death-dealing proclivities. He had one which he showed me and upon my paying a fee, he let the scorpion free from its box and attack a dog. The death of the animal from that bite was swift and terrible; in all my experience as a physician I have never seen anything quite like it. More than once there has been one of the frightful creatures in a little box on my desk here, close to my ear. I could hear a soft noise that it made in the box. Death within the reach of my hand—and making a soft noise!

"But I must not let my morbid state of mind intervene between my purpose and this page. I must write the truth about Lola Carewe down on paper. At any moment I am liable to be killed. For I did not realize that when I went on the errand of buying her deadly insects, she had fully resolved that I was to be one of her victims.

"How did I know that? All in due course, my friend—who whom I do not know, but whose eyes now fall upon this manuscript. I gave the orders for the Durango scorpions. I told Lola that delivery was promised within four weeks. I remember that it was on Thanksgiving Day that I made her that promise.

Miller Will Not Sell Ranch To Capone

Marland, Akia, July 19—(UP)—Col. Zach I. Miller, sole survivor of the famous Miller Brothers, is not negotiating with Al Capone or other hoodlums for sale of his 101 ranch.

Neither does he plan to revitalize with Gangland spoils his famous Wild West show which failed at Washington more than a year ago. "Unofficial agents" of the ranchman were quoted as saying Colonel Miller planned to visit the detested Chicago gang chief at the Atlanta Penitentiary tomorrow to arrange a sale of the ranch.

Produces New Fruit

Wichita, Kans., (UP)—By crossing a Russian cherry tree and an olive. H. J. Hansen, local resident has produced a tree that bears sweet fruit. The crossing was done years ago and the result is a prolific tree. Most cherry trees in Kansas bear sour fruit, but the fruit of Hansen's creation is quite different.
