ONG COURTSHIP

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Chester Guzik asserted in court that he had given a "fish" for giving his heart expensive presents. Miss Rose Solosky, 20, had been engaged for two years and then split. Guzik said he had given Miss Solosky the following: Seven dresses—$62.50; shoes—$24; rings—$74; a diamond ring—$350; a necklace on her neck—$25; a diamond for her mother for coat—$75; a diamond set for her mother—$75. "I had an agreement that if ever we broke up I would get the presents," Guzik said. "The last got was the ring and the set. The ring was taken."

Solosky claimed Guzik had taken the ring. She has assault and battery charges, admitted a bump on her chin, and a report the charges. George A. L. Steiner dismissed the charges, commenting that it was not of being "too long in love."

Senator Reed, Rep., Pa., follow-lion dollars of currency. If the demands of trade called for more currency, we have a perfectly sufficient method of getting it through the federal reserve system.

Finally, it is the wrong basis. It is a reversal to the financing of post-civil-war days to issue currency of this kind. It would be a departure from the sound financial thought that was exemplified in the Federal Reserve system. It would be a step backward in our fiscal policy."

Reed contended the demands of business are not adequate today to use existing currency. He believed the prerequisite to a new flow of money into trade channels is revived confidence rather than a greater supply of money.

He cited the fact that the treasury reported on June 24 that the aggregate of currency in circulation was $5,505,000,000 (B) almost $1,000,000,000 (B) more than a year previously and $1,800,000,000 (B) more than in June 1929.

In reply to a request by Reed for a treasury opinion on currency expansion, he received a letter including the following:

"Our interest at this time is not to the amount already in circulation, but rather, in the return flow of idle funds from hoarding back into active employment in the banking system."

forecast exclusively by the United Press yesterday. The United Press understood that he had a great desire to preside over the Washington embassy. He retained most pleasant memories of his two visits to the United States, as a member of the Italian debt funding commission and on a visit to President Hoover.

Grandi's heavy program of work has weighed heavily on him. He has been losing weight, and was expected to take a long rest.

Mussolini replaced Grandi and Minister of Corporations Bottai. New ministers included: Prof. Pietro di Francisci, of the University of Rome, minister of justice; Guido Jung, minister of finance; Francesco Ercoli, of the faculty of Palermo University, minister of education; Minister of Colonies de Bono; minister of air, Gen. Balbo; minister of war, Senator Gizzera; minister of marine, Admiral Siriani. Eight undersecretaries were included in the reorganization.

Grandi has the advantage of youth and good looks over the usual galaxy of statesmen who gather at international conferences. Bernardo Shaw called him "the dynamic Mr. Grandi, who speaks with pontifical authority." He is only 36 years old, a handsome, charming man who was a genuine "boy diplomat" when he first became Italy's negotiator abroad in 1922.
