COURT HOUSE

A case some what unusual, was filed here today by Attorney McCrea of Fort Wayne, entitled Ohio Farmers Insurance Company vs. Jacob Bossert, et al, subrogation, demand $200. The complaint recites that July 17th 1932, Lawrence Leimgruber was driving his Chevrolet car on the Linn Grove Pike when Glen Bossert driving a car at a high rate of speed and coming from the opposite direction, crossed a culvert. Bossert's car skidded and and finally struck Leimgruber's machine, damaging it to the extent of $126.35. On July 20th, Leimgruber assigned his claim for said damages to the Ohio Farmer's Insurance Company, who ordered suit filed to collect same with attorney fees and costs, amounting to $200.

'Capitalization' of Great Name Starts Feud Among Roosevelts

Mrs. ALICE ROOSEVELT LONGWORTH — COL. THEODORE ROOSEVELT
"Some to the fascination of a name surrender judgment hoodwink'd," according to some philosopher of long ago, and present indications are that the line is receiving a deal of credence ever since Franklin D. Roosevelt, Governor of New York, was nominated by the Democratic Party for the Presidency of the United States. There are many opponents of the Democratic nominee who feel that he has a great asset in the name he bears, as the very sound of it brings back recollections of the colorful Theodore the First. Among these opponents are the members of the "Right Wing" of the Roosevelt family, who are all staunch Republicans. They charge that Franklin's supporters have variously represented him as being the son of the Rough Rider President, the brother of the same, and as the great Theodore's first cousin, whereas, they point out, he is merely the sixth cousin of the Bull Moose chief. Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the late President, has signified her displeasure at what she imagines to be the capitalization of the great name by announcing her intention of supporting President Hoover, and has written a statement sharply defining the relationship between her distinguished husband and the man desirous of wearing his mantle. So, also, has Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, widow of the late Speaker and daughter of "Teddy," who is to campaign for the G. O. P. candidate. Theodore, Jr., Governor of the Philippines, has made known his intention of returning to the United States to take the stump for Hoover, so a lively campaign is in the offing. Franklin D. will have the support of his wife, a Roosevelt in her own right. But, says the layman helplessly, what is Franklin to do? Change his name to Al Smith?

Washington — When William Shakespeare propounded his famous query, "What's in a name?" many years ago, when he was almost known as Greta Garbo, he little dreamed that the question would have an important bearing on the future of these United States.

Yet, the time has come when an illustrious name if fated to become the bone of contention in a Presidential campaign, and Will of Avon's query may bring him more renown than his sad story of the melancholic Prince of Denmark. It all began with the nomination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt by the Democratic Party for the Presidency of the United States. Ever since Franklin conceived the idea of becoming President Roosevelt II, the illustrious tree, whence sprung the great "Teddy," has been rent asunder as if by lightning. Branches of the sturdy plant have fallen to the left, into the camp of the Democratic nominee, and branches have fallen to the right, into the territory of President Hoover, and the war is on.

The main grievance of the "Right Wing" Roosevelt is the extent to which Franklin is using the hallowed name which Theodore the First inscribed on the annals of international fame. They charge that when the Democratic nominee was seeking delegates in the campaign that led to his victory at Chicago, his supporters represented him as the brother of the great Teddy in some corners of the country; in others he was called the son of the Rough Rider President, and in others, as Theodore's first cousin. These claims have not been permitted to go unchallenged by the Roosevelt group that comprises the Republican wing of the great political of one he regards as a pretender. Meanwhile, the Left Wing is not going to tamely submit to the verbal variances of the direct line Roosevelt. Franklin D. has made it clearly understood that it is his purpose to derive any benefit he can from the name he bears. After all, it is his own name, so what? Shoulder to shoulder with her husband, the talented wife of the Governor, who is a Roosevelt in her own right and a nearer relation to Theodore the First than her husband, intends to fight the same issue ever inch of the way. Mrs. Roosevelt is an effective campaigner of politics, so of colorful campaign is in the offing, with the United States at last taking Shakespeare seriously.

"Who Goes There?"

says the wise shopper

Challenge of the sentry on guard, abrupt and imperative in the dark. "Advance and give the countersign!"

To the woman in the home, alertly watchful over her household budget, passwords are important. Everything offered for sale is subject to suspicion unless it bears the countersign—the familiar trade-mark—the name of a manufacturer or merchant whom she knows.

Every day she studies the advertising columns. From them she determines values, and decides what she will buy and where. She knows that advertised goods are safe goods, backed by the reputation of the maker and the merchant.

When she goes shopping—whether for a bottle of ketchup or for a pearl necklace—she challenges each product with a "Who goes there?" And if it has the password of advertised excellence she makes her purchase without hesitation.

The advertisements in this paper are a safe guide to buying. Read them every day. Keep in touch with the latest news of price, style and quality. Then buy with the assurance that you will get your money's worth.
