MINERS PARADE AT PRINCETON

Placards and banners reading "We demand no wage reduction" and "We demand old age pension," were carried by the miners. A large motor truck loaded with miners, apparently from the Dixie Bee vicinity, displayed the dummy of a man, badly mutilated, on the front. A miner on the truck, pointing to the dummy, remarked "He used to work at the Dixie Bee."

The miners proceeded to the fair grounds, where their meeting was held. The parade was orderly.

chief clerk of the department. While announcing himself please with recent business developments, Chapin declined to make any prediction. He said:

"Naturally, like every other American, I am gratified at the unmistakably better tone that prevails in our industry and marks our trade.

"Concerning the future trend I will not be so bold as to venture a prediction—but one thing is very certain, we must all exert ourselves to the utmost to strengthen all favorable factors and to make the inevitable 'turn' come as soon as possible.

"The resources of the commerce department, which is designed solely to help business, should be a potent instrument in aiding an advance along the upward road."

International Financiers Worried By South American War Threat

Five Western World Powers Plead for Mediation and League of Nations Prepares to Take Steps to Settle 50-Year-Old Quarrel.

The eyes of the financial world are anxiously watching latest developments in the fifty-year-old dispute over the Chaco Gran, control of which has precipitated Bolivia and Paraguay to the verge of war. The map in the above layout graphically depicts the vast 50,000-square mile tract which affords Bolivia a valuable waterway to the Pacific. President Jose P. Guggiari of Paraguay issued a mobilization order recently after spirited fighting took place between the garrisons manning the forts that face each other on the imaginary boundary line across the center of the Chaco. With hundreds of millions of dollars invested in industries in both countries the world's financial interests were pinning their faith on the influence of the League of Nations. Five Western Hemisphere countries forwarded a plea for a suspension of hostilities to Bolivia. Both President Guggiari and President Dr. Salasmanca of Bolivia declare that the armed forces of the other country provoked the skirmishes in the jungle. If mediation is accepted by Bolivia a similar petition will be sent to the Paraguayan executive. Four years ago the influence of other countries staved off a war between the two republics.

New York. — Hundreds of millions of American dollars invested in South America may be lost if the bitter conflict between Paraguay and Bolivia continues.

Thus it was with a great sigh of relief that Wall Street heard a few days ago that the League of Nations had acted to bring about a suspension of hostilities between the two South American republics.

But meanwhile the war clouds blackened in the dispute over possession of the Gran Chaco territory. President Jose P. Guggiari of Paraguay was summoning men, women and children of his nation to stand "erect as one man and help the fatherland" in the struggle. Hundreds of Paraguayan women in the town of Concepcion asked permission to take up arms in the fight, pledged themselves not to use powder, rouge or perfume until the "war" is won.

While Guggiari was signing a mobilization decree, Bolivian soldiers were capturing two forts in Gran Chaco. Fierce fighting marked the offensive.

The big peace hope of international financiers lay in Geneva. In both countries vast sums of foreign capital are invested in railroads and industries. Because the Chaco, a huge jungle is isolated, Wall Street believed a large scale war between the two nations quite unlikely.

To hurry any sizable amount of munitions to the territory would mean importation through neutral countries. And the bankers pointed out that such moves would be opposed by neighboring countries as well as the League of Nations. Chile could prevent Bolivia importing arms by merely barring arms shipments over her lines.

The optimism was also based on the fact that though the argument between Bolivia and Paraguay has existed for half a century, neither nation has ever actually declared Chaco. Like bad children, each country told the world that the other power had struck the first blow.

Get the Habit — Trade at Home

Stand by Veterans

Here are some of the women and children who have followed the bonus expeditionary forces through all their experiences. Just now they are quartered with several hundred of the veterans in Chicago, waiting to receive word to journey on to their homes. Left to right—Mrs. Edna Bean, California; Mrs. O. A. Sallier, Texas; Dorothy Lammers, 8, and her mother, Mrs. Mabel Lammers, Iowa; Mrs. William Fitzgerald, California, and her children, Grace, 3, and Robert, 6, and Mrs. Edith Lannon, Washington.

"Who Goes There?"

says the wise shopper

Challenge of the sentry on guard, abrupt and imperative in the dark. "Advance and give the countersign!"

To the woman in the home, alertly watchful over her household budget, passwords are important. Everything offered for sale is subject to suspicion unless it bears the countersign—the familiar trade-mark—the name of a manufacturer or merchant whom she knows.

Every day she studies the advertising columns. From them she determines values, and decides what she will buy and where. She knows that advertised goods are safe goods, backed by the reputation of the maker and the merchant.

When she goes shopping—whether for a bottle of ketchup or for a pearl necklace—she challenges each product with a "Who goes there?" And if it has the password of advertised excellence she makes her purchase without hesitation.

The advertisements in this paper are a safe guide to buying. Read them every day. Keep in touch with the latest news of price, style and quality. Then buy with the assurance that you will get your money's worth.
