The Iron Age found production for the steel industry unchanged at 14 per cent of capacity, although "encouraging signs of prospective business improvement are not lacking."

Small losses were noted in general Motors, Western Union, Vanadium, Radio Corporation, Union Pacific, International Telephone, New York Central and Union Carbide.

Those who sit indoors in comfort in the cold New England winters may thank two Boston men, James Jones Walworth and Joseph Mason, who back in 1844 went into business together and "agreed to risk their money in a scheme for installing a new heating device in business houses and residences." To this company belongs the early development of steam and hot water heating of buildings.

Dad to Fly, Mother to Cook and Kiddies to Study on Ocean Flight

Flying Family of Famous Hutchinsons Planning Transatlantic Hop, With Stops in Labrador, Greenland, Iceland and Faroes.

Within a few days, according to announcement, the "Flying Family," made up of Colonel and Mrs. George Hutchinson and their two daughters, Kathryn, 8, and Janet Lee, 6, will be bringing their two-motored amphibian down on some point north and east of Washington, D. C., north and west of London. Already this convivial family group has flown 100,000 miles over land and sea. But the 4,600 miles stretching out between the American and British capitals will be the glorious climax. With eleven stops between Washington and London, the flight will lack the spectacular angles of a non-stop dash. But there are plans which place this projected flight in a class by itself, chiefly the division of labor aboard. Chief pilot will be Colonel Hutchinson, assisted by Peter Redpath, navigator, formerly associated with Harold Gatty of round-the-world fame. John Ruff, veteran mechanic, will be along to care for the motors. Mrs. Hutchinson, besides the housekeeping chores, will devote several hours each day to tutoring the children. She does this on land. She does it in the air. The children have never been to school and have never had another teacher. The coming trip, according to Mrs. Hutchinson, will be conducted as a regular course of study for Kathryn and Janet Lee. The route will be through the maritime Provinces, Labrador, Greenland, Iceland, Faroe Islands and Scotland. Having reached Europe, the "Flying Family" will hop, by easy stages, to Paris, Berlin, Rome, Madrid and Nuremberg, Bavaria, where Kathryn and Janet Lee want to watch the making of the famous dolls and other toys.

Seabury was handicapped by a Tammany hall gallery, by partisans who roared at every Walker rally, and by hostile members of the Hofstadter investigating committee for which he was counsel. And to date, it appears that an investigation some claimed was intended to "put Roosevelt in the hole" has developed into a political drama in which the usually soft spoken executive is stage director and star.

Pastor's Love Poems Lead to Cell on Wife Murder Charge

19-Year-Old Bride Whom Rev. Berrie Married 2 Months After First Wife's Death Admits Verses, Sets Stage for Murder Trial.

MUSKOGEE, Okla. — A cell in the County jail was the residence of the Rev. S. A. Berrie, 52, fiery preacher, indicted for the alleged murder of his first wife last March.

The minister's second wife, Mrs. Ida Bright Berrie, originally held with the preacher after an autopsy showed traces of poison in the dead woman's stomach, was at liberty after the grand jurors found that she had no guilty knowledge of the alleged crime.

Mrs. Berrie died last March after collapsing in her husband's church during a lecture. No suspicion attached at that time to the minister.

Two months later, however, he married Ida Bess Bright, demure 19-year-old teacher of one of his Sunday School classes.

Then the first Mrs. Berrie's sister, Mrs. Clem Trotter, became suspicious. She kept her suspicion secret for some time, then went to the office of Phillip K. Oldham, county prosecutor, and urged that her sister's body be exhumed for examination.

Autopsy showed traces of an unnamed poison, said to have been ingredients of a sleeping potion.

Investigation revealed that the middle-aged minister had been enamored of the pretty Sunday School teacher before the death of the first Mrs. Berrie, and this circumstance prompted Prosecutor Oldham to lay the facts before the grand jury.

A search of the minister's study after his arrest revealed several verses penned to Miss Bright.

"Could I just hold you in my embrace
And kiss your rosy lips,
And look into your baby face,
And like the bee that honey sips,
And joys that life both give,
To me no other one can be,
For you alone I live,
Oh, why can't we be free."

Also the following:

"That day when love's bud shall blossom
Into the flower of wedded life,
When in my arms I shall hold thee
As my darling, loving wife."

Besides these amorous passages, which Prosecutor Oldham attributed to the pen of the Rev. Mr. Berrie, the minister is the author of well-known hymns, including "In Beulah Land," "I've a Precious Savior," and "Over in the Glory Land."

"These accusations are silly," the preacher said. "I don't know anything about the poison, except that Mrs. Berrie was jealous and irritable and had threatened suicide."

The second Mrs. Berrie, bowed by grief, is in seclusion.
