HEART STRINGS

By EDWINA L. MACDONALD
COPYRIGHT, 1932 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS
Lovely, young Patricia Braithwaite agrees to marry wealthy, middle-aged Harry Blaine because the father she adores is in financial straits. She hopes, however, that handsome Jack Laurence, a young camper whom she only met once—and the only man she ever wanted to kiss her—will rescue her from Blaine. When Jack fails to appear, she turns, in desperation, to Jimmie Warren, her Aunt Pamela's fascinating husband. They become infatuated and Pat breaks her engagement. Aunt Pam is suspicious but blames herself for warning Pat that love fades, inferring that her marriage to Jimmie had failed. Feeling that Pam no longer cares, Jimmie and Pat see no wrong in their "love." Then Jack appears, but Pat tells him he is too late—the emotion he awakened, blossomed to love under another's kiss. Jack, claiming he is the one Pat really cares for, refuses to give up, and the next day moves to the hotel in which she also is quartered.

CHAPTER NINETEEN
Jack stepped out of an elevator. "Don't tell us that's your date," whispered Mary Lou, her round face glowing.
He crossed to them. Patricia introduced him.
"Mr. Laurence," Ida echoed, "does your name happen by any chance to be it? You are Jack Laurence! I saw you play Yale three years ago. Girls, you know Jack Laurence. Oh, tell us about it."

Mary Lou, seeing his face change, caught his arm to her; "Don't answer. She's a rude woman."
Ida, realizing her mistake, possessed herself of his other arm. "Mary Lou's right. It's your affair."
They hustled him away to play ping pong which he had just deserted in high boredom. He was an expert player and they took turns against him. It was clear to Patricia that there would be no conflict between Jack and Jimmie over her if the girls could prevent it.

"Pat, there's no use in your going back to the hotel," Pamela said when Mr. Braithwaite's train pulled out. "I'll send my maid over to pack your things and Ben can fetch them tonight. Who was the stunning sheik you were talking with on the wet veranda when we drove up?"
"Jack Laurence."
"Not the Jack Laurence?"
"The."
"Where on earth did you meet him and when? I didn't see him around yesterday. Hotel pick-up? If so, you're swift. Or he is."

A malicious smile lighted Pat's blue eyes. "Beach pick-up. He's the tramp I told you about yesterday who quoted Browning and explained a marvelous opera to me and gave me a campfire lunch by the side of the road, or rather the sea. You said I'd gone sun-mad and made him up. I thought so myself. But there he is, no longer a tramp, but guest of an expensive hotel, with all the girls cutting each other's throats over him, and there's no sun or moon to account for him. So he must be real."
Her words raced pell-mell in time with her racing pulses. Warren looked up as if about to speak, but sank back, silent. Patricia felt a thrill of triumph.
"Too bad of me to carry you off," murmured Pamela. "His father is the senator from Virginia. Very important people. When did he get back? And from where?"
"I'll introduce you, and he can tell you all about it. It's a thrilling tale. I won't spoil it."

suspend foreclosures for that period and that the board had telegraphed all state authorities requesting similar suspension. He promised the loan system would be functioning before expiration of the two months.
The president was warmly applauded as he entered the conference chamber. Henry M. Robinson, California businessman, and close friend of Mr. Hoover introduced him, with the comment: "We are all gathered here to get a better understanding of what may be done with agencies in Washington."

On the platform with the president were members of the cabinet and a group of business executives, including Owen D. Young. On the wall behind the president was a huge map of the world, portraying commerce routes.
The small auditorium was filled except for the balconies.
Mr. Hoover spoke deliberately, his hands clasped in front of him as he read his speech. When midway through some laborer started a rusty hammering in an outside corridor, where repairs are being made. The noise was quickly silenced.

Denies Knowledge of Ten Per Cent Parole

Indianapolis, Aug. 26.—(UP)—Michael J. Foley, member of the state prison board of pardons and paroles, said today he had no knowledge of a purported movement to parole ten per cent of the inmates of the state prison as an economy measure.

"I have not been advised of such a plan," Foley said. "As far as I know the rules of the prison will remain unchanged and prisoners' applications for paroles will come before the board after they have served minimum terms with good conduct."
