Replica Endangers Children Cohoes, N. Y.—(U.P.)—Efforts are being made to have this city either discard or repair the Replica of Hendrik Hudson's famed vessel, the Half Moon. Charles Frament, a member of the Common Council, contends that the lives of children are endangered by falling timbers from the replica which was given to the United States by the Netherlands during the Hendrik Hudson celebration in 1909.

CONTINUE HUNT FOR MISSING DRY LEADER

tive the man he met and spoke with was Robins.

"I was walking north on State street," he said, "and met Robins just as I was passing the Palmer House. I recognized him and said, 'Hello, Mr. Robins.' He answered my greeting, nodded and continued on his way.

"I had seen him just a few weeks ago at the time of the national political conventions and thought nothing of his failure to stop and chat with me.

"Robins was walking alone. He carried no brief case or satchel. He wore a black slouch hat and grey suit."

Mrs. Bryant previously had told authorities of seeing Robins about a half an hour earlier Thursday afternoon at State and Adams street, a block south from where Haupt reported seeing him.

"He was preoccupied," Mrs. Bryant said. "He was hurrying along and appeared worried. I was about to speak to him when the traffic light changed and I had no opportunity."

Both Haupt and Mrs. Bryant have known the missing man for nearly 20 years and were positive they could not have been mistaken in their identification.

A night-long search of Robins' old haunts failed to bring any trace of him.

Adding to the belief of investigators that Robins was in Chicago was the fact he had an appointment here early this week with dry workers.

He failed to appear at this conference. Robins also had been scheduled to attend a prohibition convention here late this month and make several addresses.

Indiana Air Lanes Grade 99.9 Per Cent

Indianapolis, Sept. 10.—(U.P.)—A grading of 99.9 per cent was given Indiana air lanes by department of commerce representatives today after a triangular flight which included Indianapolis, Lafayette, and Terre Haute.

L. C. Elliott, airways extension superintendent, and F. R. Neely, chief of the aeronautical information bureau, made the two hour flight last night, inspecting more than 200 miles of beacon lights and emergency landing fields.

Only defects found by the inspectors were three lights burned out at the boundary of the Waynetown emergency landing field and a beacon west of Indianapolis set a few feet too high.

Hollywood Lost Great Friend By Tragic Death of Paul Bern

Suicide Studio Executive Was "Father Confessor" to Everyone in Trouble. Had Helped Many to Achieve Success on Screen.

With BRIDE ON WEDDING DAY

Hollywood.—It is an ironical fact that to all but a select few the real qualities of a man remain hidden until he has gone down the "bourn whence no traveler returns," beyond the plaudits of a world that cherished a gem unknowingly.

Today the one topic of conversation in this city, where romance is manufactured by the yard on celluloid strips, is the tragic death of Paul Bern, husband of the glamorous, platinum-haired Jean Harlow. Even here, where life and death are but secondary to the great goal of ambition, Bern's death is mourned not only as a loss to the industry for the good of which he had toiled, but also as the loss of one who had been a friend to all who had ever sought his aid.

Paul Bern was known as the "Little Confessor" of Hollywood. He had earned the title by his selflessness for those less fortunate than himself and for his understanding of the human problems confided to him by the great and near great who had run into trouble. He was, in fact, a big brother to his fellow-workers in the film industry, especially to those hundreds of boys and girls who come to Hollywood to chase the Will-o'-the-Wisp of fame, to find only disillusionment.

It is a certainty that Bern saved many a discouraged aspirant to film glory from the fate against which he was powerless to protect himself. It is a matter of history
