New Serial Story By Rafael Sabatini To Begin Saturday In Daily Democrat

Cast off from the present. Leave behind this workaday world of time clocks, rent and taxes. Run the Jolly Roger to the masthead and set sail under the blue skies of romance. Cruise along the Spanish Main of the seventeenth century in "The Black Swan," the long awaited new story by Rafael Sabatini, the man who wrote "Scaramouche." The Daily Democrat will run it serially beginning Saturday, November 19.

No week-end cruise to nowhere this. It is back to the most colorful, the most exciting times in the history of the American continent

French mariners who called themselves buccaniers and who dedicated themselves to looting the proud Spaniard.

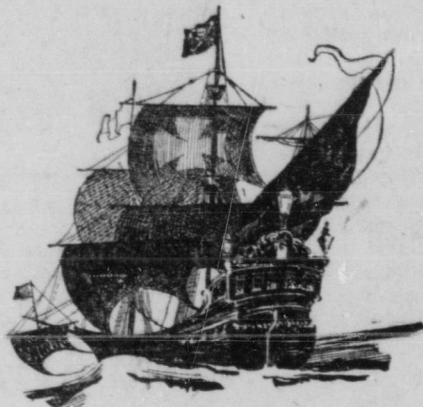

But the fighting will not be all for gold. The twanging of the guitar will ring in the starry nights of that cloudless clime and clear Gallic voices will soar in serenades, even as the troubadours of a more distant age. Bright swords will flash in brilliant and deadly duelling over a woman's honor.

It is for Priscilla Harridane that swords are drawn. Accident has placed this young and beautiful daughter of the British governor on this mad piratical expedition of the "Black Swan." But it must be fate that has placed the chivalrous, gallant Charles de Bernis, younger son of a titled father, who dedicated himself to protecting her from a collection of pirates as

They are real historians, the buccaniers of the Morgan, who took Panama cut throats and massacred persons, is the same man came Sir Henry Morgan, the of the island of Jamaica. Tom Leach and his crew, when the Span ended buccaniers, en continuing with outlaws.

Piracy—that's the most exciting activity that came under the head of Set sail in the "Black Swan" and times when and sword-play will turn sails Nov. 19. Don't miss
