CALVIN COOLIDGE

Again the people of this nation bow their heads in sincere sorrow because of the death of a great and good man.

Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States, former Vice-President, former Governor of Massachusetts and who held many other positions of great trust and responsibility, died at his residence at Northampton, Massachusetts, yesterday about noon.

The news flashed over the country and shocked a world already deep in gloom because of the many tragic and burdensome events of the past few years.

He became ill while at work at his desk. Ever industrious and always thinking of how best he could serve the people of his country which he loved, it was fitting that he should be so engaged when stricken. Great honor will be paid him and his work will live on during the centuries to come for his integrity, his honesty, his deliberate manner of weighing subjects of greatest importance made him an outstanding figure.

Because of his high standing and his keen intellect he was constantly serving in various ways to aid the nation in its present economic affliction. As a member of the committee to work out a program for the substantial relief of the railroads and as a confident of the great business executives in the country, his advice was listened to and his decisions accepted by the millions who believed in his wisdom and his integrity.

Few men have been so often called to serve and few have performed so creditably as did this man each time he was chosen. "Silent Cal" he was called because his words were few and always carefully chosen. He gave earnest thought to such subjects as were brought to him and then firmly gave his decision in understandable language. He was admired by every one regardless of political affiliation and loved by rich and poor alike.

He climbed from farmer boy through various positions of trust to the presidency and wore his honors quietly and simply. His death causes grief throughout this land and his assistance and advice will be a loss to the many who had learned to depend upon his sagacity.

Senator Dill, Dem., of Washington, proposes that a jury of twelve be selected and have seen before them a certain number of bottles of 3.2 per cent beer. The jury shall then proceed to drink and an audience will observe whether the 3.2 brew has any effect upon the participants. The selection of the jury might be quite a factor in the result, for with certain ones it would simply be a costly experiment—costly merely as to the amount of hop they could consume without showing any outward evidence. It will probably take more than a jury to settle the liquor question which was one of importance two thousand years ago and will be one of importance two thousand years hence. Intemperance, however, is not alone confined to drinking. A person may be intemperate in eating, or thinking or talking or exercising. The word temperance covers a wide and much abused field.—Columbia City Post.

No President of the United States ever completed a term in that high office with more satisfaction than must have come to Calvin Coolidge. At the close of his career as President, a degree of prosperity existed unprecedented. His prestige was such that it was generally assured his party would disregard the third term tradition and renominate him, but with characteristic simplicity, he issued his famous statement: "I do not choose to run," and all efforts to draft him proved fruitless. Since that time however he has written much, spoken occasionally and worked incessantly to render aid in every way he could that his country might come through the depression and the sun again shine upon a happy land.

The board of county commissioners has appointed Charles J. Voglewede as a member of the board of trustees of the Adams County Memorial hospital, to succeed Frank Heiman, who has served since the hospital was built and who declined reappointment. Mr. Heiman has proven a valuable member of the board and Mr. Voglewede, who is recognized as one of Decatur's leading business men, will serve wisely in this important post. The selection is an excellent one and will meet the approval of the people of Adams county.

The income tax reports have arrived and as usual are causing a few headaches. There would be few to bother about it this year if it were not for the fact that congress has changed the exemptions so that now a single person with a net income of more than $1,000 must pay four per cent on all over that, while the exemption for married people has been cut from $3,500 to $2,500. The corporation tax is now 13%.

The Indiana legislature is off to a good start and if Governor McNutt and Lieutenant-Governor Townsend will keep the members moving until their program is put through we are sure the people will arise as one body and say "well done, good and faithful servants."

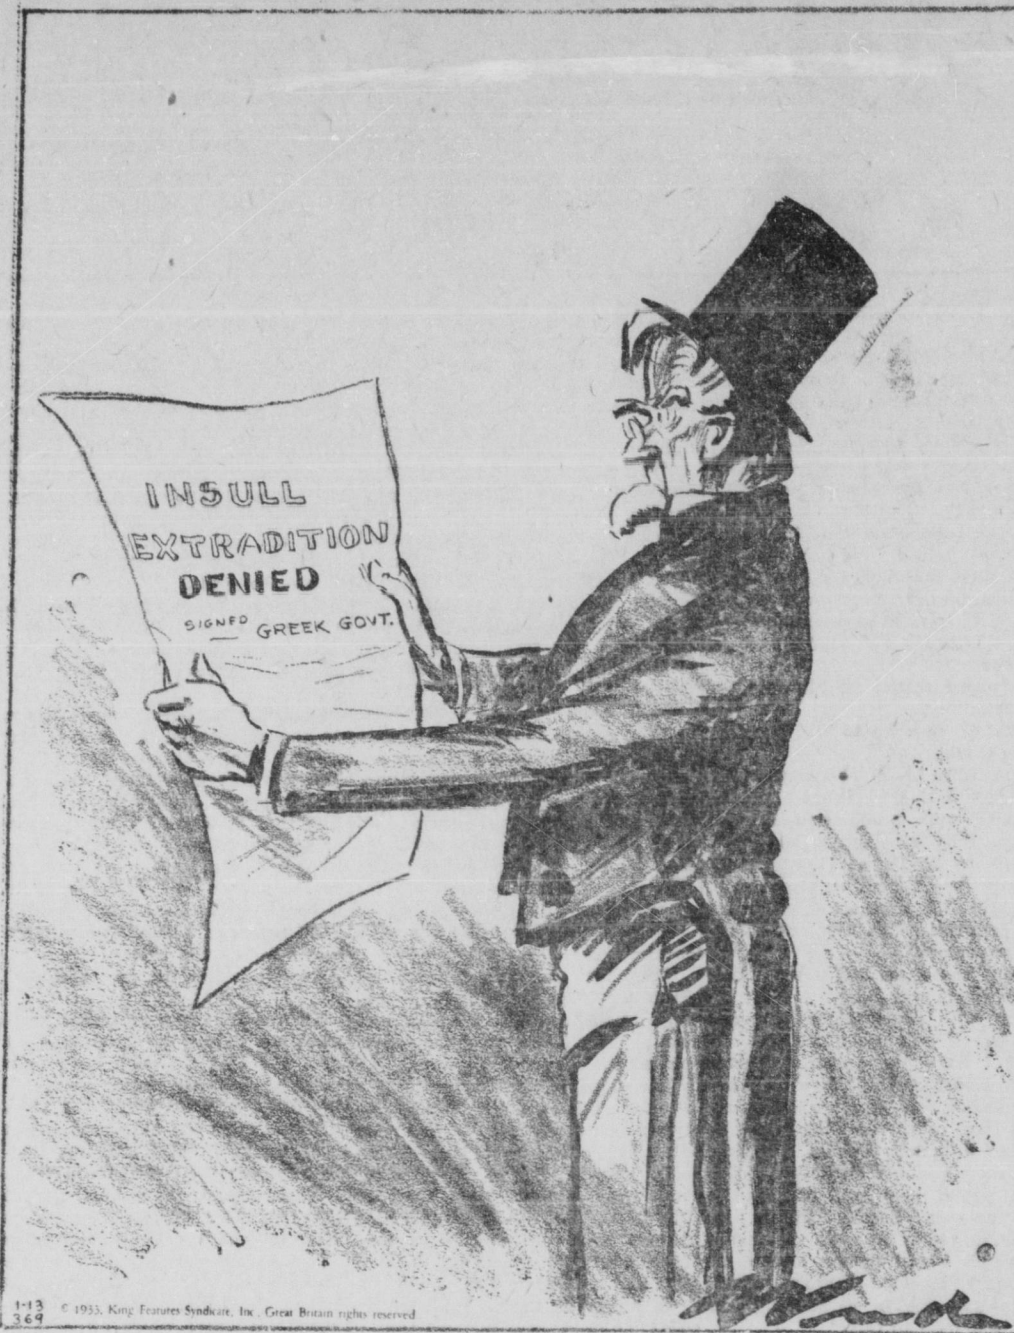

Of course every one here is happy that the state highway commission has taken over the road from here to Willshire and from there west through Monroe to the Wells county line. It will mean the saving of maintenance on about twenty-two miles of road and will mean excellent pavements over these important arteries of trade.

Yesterday was the largest subscription day since the campaign opened and we are hoping to break that record today and tomorrow. This is the time to renew and we hope every one who takes the paper through the mails will do so promptly.

And again this nation has not a single living ex-president. For some reason those who fill this great position do not seem to live long. Mr. Wilson was stricken before the end of his second term, Mr. Harding died in office and Mr. Coolidge lived but four years after he gave up his task.

This county has received a check for $36,511 from the state, our share of the gas tax from March to December and needless to say the cash will come in mighty handy. Just at present the regular funds of the county are at rather a low ebb and this will ease things up considerably.

Sam: "It's All Greek to Me"

Looks like every thing and every body has to get down on expen-tures. The appropriation as requested by the state board of agriculture for the state fair has been cut from $137,000 to $90,000 and they will have to get along on that.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., ... From now on, when you get into a new reel picture, you may be teaching some Hollywood star how to act.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., young boss of Universal, has instructed the cameramen of his company to be on the lookout for shots of people showing their reactions to various emotional stimuli. These shots will be sent to the Hollywood studio, and when similar situations come up in a story, the entire cast of future Universal pictures will be asked to examine these real life studies of human emotion. The first celluloid text-books selected for the novel acting school are scenes of the grief-stricken men and women affected by the recent mine disaster in Moweaqua, Illinois. "There is too much mugging in pictures," declares young Laemmle. "I believe that art can be made as realistic as life. This new plan may help us to achieve that end."

One of the better wisecracks of the week was made by Bert Hanlon. A certain Hollywood star was pretending to be very reluctant about signing autographs in front of Al Levy's Tavern. "Look at that," snapped Hanlon. "And you know darn well he'd be glad to sign his autograph on a bubble."

In these days, it's a tonic to see anyone optimistic and happy. Marjorie Rambeau is the personification of both.

The other day I went out to visit Marjorie and her husband of a year, Francis Gudger. She looks five years younger than when I saw her last and she radiates contentment. She told me: "If I ever did anything decent and right in my life, I'm being repaid for it now."

Many times after her marriage and retirement from acting, I have wondered what outlet Marjorie found for her abundant energy. You'd never guess what it is—needle-point. While her husband was hunting and golfing, Marjorie taught herself this feminine art. She has become very proficient. I've seen a bag and a tapestry to prove it.

Now, of course, she is back in Hollywood to make her return to the talkies. "It's rather a thrill," she said, "and besides I wanted to spend the holidays with mother."

Chances are Marjorie will stay on to make another picture for Charles R. Rogers. As a former vice president of the old Samuel Goldwyn Company, her husband knows about and sympathizes with the feelings of actors. But they have a rendezvous with hunting pals in the late spring. Once the Hollywood interval is over, Marjorie will return to her needle-point.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE: Claudette Colbert is leaving for New York Tuesday—that is unless she yields to the persuasion of the Edward Small Company, which has been pleading with her to play the feminine lead in "I Cover the Water-Font." You hear around that Max Miller's fascinating book will be greatly changed in its screen form. The producers hope, however, to retain the flavor of the original.

With a big New Year's celebration planned, Director Ray Garnett had to leave here Saturday on the Chief, his destination Germany. He'll direct the interiors for Universal's "GOS Iceberg" and get the picture into shape. Patsy Ruth Miller plans to dispose of their Hollywood house and join him later in Berlin.

In a letter from Nice, Sidney Chaplin says he has several offers from producers, but, to date, has not even had a talkies test made. He asks questions about Hollywood, but is indefinite about returning to this country. ... Here's an illuminating item. The play, "Clear All Wires" was done in a single set. When Lee Tracy does it as a picture, however, it will have 48 sets.

You should see the 50 car star sapphire that Bill Powell gave to Carole Lombard for Christmas.

Joe E. Brown will be honorary toastmaster tonight when alumni of the University of Pittsburgh entertain the Pitt team at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood. Gloria Stuart is official mascot of the team and Regis Toomey, Pitt graduate and former member of the Cap and Gown club, will figure prominently in the celebrations. Vince Barnett, Dick Powell and Ginger Rogers, all former residents of the Smoky City, will be on hand too.

DID YOU KNOW— That Stuart Erwin, who used to do a wise-cracking character then, played in most of the theaters west of the Rockies before he entered pictures.

Pillows

When pillows and bolsters begin to have a musty smell, nothing is better than to put them in the sunshine for a day. Though it is well to avoid a real hot sun which sometimes brings out the oil in the feathers.

Teapots

A musty flavor will be given to the tea if made in a metal teapot that has not been used for some time. This can be prevented if a lump of sugar is placed in the teapot before putting it away.

Chilled Feeling

Nothing is better for a chilled feeling than to drink a cup of hot milk, as hot as can be borne.
