THORNHILL IS CHOSEN COACH

Fols Alto, Cal., Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Clint E. "Tiny" Thornhill, who became an all-American tackle in Pittsburg in 1916 under the tutelage of Glenn S. "Pop" Warner, has been chosen to succeed his former mentor as head football coach at Stanford.

For the past 11 years Thornhill has been line coach at Stanford, developing the forward wall while Warner devised the deceptive spin plays for which he is famous.

Benie Nevers, Stanford's all-American fullback in 1925, was named first assistant. Thornhill said the present coaching staff would be retained.

Thornhill, now 33, played with Jack Sutherland on Warner's Pittsburg team in 1916. It was rated "the highest team Pop ever produced."

Sarazen Is Favorite

Los Angeles, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Gene Sarazen, British and United States open champion, found himself a favorite today to capture the annual $5,000 Los Angeles open tournament.

Tonight will tell the story! The battle of battles Bluffton and Decatur! Will we be there? And how!

oOo
BEAT BLUFFTON.

oOo
Whenever the Yellow Jackets and Tigers get together, it's some party. Don't neglect to see the ball game tonight. If you do, you will always regret it. As to the outcome, well, come and see for yourself. We refuse to predict.

oOo
Looks as though quite a number of Bluffton fans will be among those present this evening. Our friend Buck reports that of the 100 tickets sent over this week, less than 25 were on hand Wednesday evening. That should make the party even better.

oOo
And for the Tiger fans who can't get here, arrangements are being made for a telephoned play-by-play report to be sent back. Guess they really are taking the game seriously. Well, so are we.

oOo
BEAT BLUFFTON.

So far as season records go, the Yellow Jackets have much the better record. Decatur has lost three games out of ten, to Hartford City, Winamac and South Side. The Tigers have won only three games to date, defeating Portland, Columbia City and an Alumni team. However, the Tigers held Hartford City and South Side to lower margins of victory than the Yellow Jackets. Try and

oOo
George Laurent's Decatur Commodores will swing back into action next week, acting as hosts to St. Mary's of Huntington here Tuesday night, January 10. Games scheduled for the past two weeks were postponed because of the death of Father Seimetz.

oOo
Tuesday's game will be a chance for the Commodores to gain revenge from Huntington.

St. Mary's defeated the locals at Huntington November 30, 26 to 14. Monday Huntington participated in a blind tourney at Vincennes. Huntington was defeated in the first round by Reitz Memorial of Evansville, and in the consolation game by Gibault of Vincennes. St. Simons of Washington won the tourney.

oOo
The Commodores flashed some real basketball in their last game, when they defeated Paul White's New Haven Bulldogs, 18 to 11. And playing New Haven is no bed of roses for any ball club this year.

oOo
The Commodores have won three games out of eight, after dropping their first three starts of the season. The locals hold victories over Berne, Delphos and New Haven, and have been defeated by Jefferson, Kirkland, St. Marys, Ossian and Elmhurst.

POLICE ARREST THREE BANDITS

Men Suspected of Killing Indianapolis Clerk Are Held By Police

Indianapolis, Jan. 6.—(U.P.)—Three men were held by police today, suspected of being the bandits who shot and killed Chris C. Wade, 50, deaf grocery clerk, when he failed to hear their command to "stick 'em up."

The suspects were taken into custody at Brownsburg by Marshall Everett Huddleston. He became suspicious of their actions and called Indianapolis police.

Wade walked into the grocery store where he was employed near Ben Davis just as three bandits were preparing to hold it up. One of them ordered him to put up his hands.

He failed to hear and obey the command and was shot without warning.

Wade was the father of two small girls. His wife died six weeks ago.

Those under arrest gave their names as Raymond Jutt, 30; Robert White, 34, and Archie Lawson, 29, all of Indianapolis. Police said White told them he had served a five-year term in Illinois prison on charges of assault with intent to commit murder.

CABIN VILLAGE HOUSES JOBBLES

Toledo, O., (U.P.)—A tiny village of one-room cabins and huts is grown among the scrub oaks of the Maumee flats, not 20 miles from the heart of Toledo.

It is a settlement built by the victims of the depression who cannot afford to close themselves or their families in the city. There are nine men in the settlement, two of them have wives and children. They built the village on the worthless sandy soil of the flats during the past summer. Now they are facing winter in it.

One of the men has a job on the country roads. He earns $2.40 a week and turns it into the general fund. The others work for nearby farmers in exchange for provisions.

They get flour from the Red Cross. A baker in Whitehouse O., makes bread of it for two and one-half cents a loaf. A farmer for whom the men cut wood, pays the baker. Fuel comes from the woods around and water from a well they dug in clearing.

Last Year's Ring Stars

By BURNLEY

THE THREE FISTIC STAND-OUTS OF 1932--WHAT DOES THE NEW YEAR HOLD IN STORE FOR THEM--

MAX SCHMELING--

--HIS KAYO OF WALKER AND THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE SHARKEY DECISION MADE SCHMELING A POPULAR HERO--WILL HE REGAIN HIS TITLE IN 1933?

© 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

MAX BAER--WHO HOPES TO BOX SHARKEY OR SCHMELING THIS YEAR.

TONY CANZONERI--

--OUTSTANDING FISTIC CHAMPION OF 1932--HE SHOULD RETAIN HIS TITLE THIS YEAR.

OF THE thousands of ring warriors who traded leather inside of the hempen strands last year, only three really ranked high in the estimation of the fight public because of their performances in 1932. Lightweight champion Tony Canzoneri and the two Maxes, Schmeling and Baer, were about the only stand-outs of one of the duller years the fight game has ever known.

Fight fans are hoping that 1933 will provide more ring thrills than its dreary predecessor was able to produce, and the three aforementioned ring stars are expected to figure in some spectacular battles during the next twelve months.

No matter how you look at it, 1932 was a miserable year for boxing. The heavyweight championship changed hands on a disputed decision after Sharkey and Schmeling had waltzed through fifteen of the duller rounds ever seen in a heavyweight title bout. Many people thought the German had been robbed of his title, and as a result of this widespread indignation over the decision, Schmeling became much more popular in defeat than he had been while champion.

Later in the year Max increased his prestige still more by belting out Mickey Walker in eight heats, giving little Michael quite a going-over while the butchery lasted.

Joe Jacobs is now saying that Schmeling intends to fight Baer next summer, leaving the return match with Sharkey for the fall. On the records, Baer was actually the best heavyweight of 1932, and many shrewd fight critics think that he can whip Max Schmeling right now. Jack Kearns, who by the way is very anxious to get Baer under his managerial wing, said recently that he thought the Livermore brawler was the best of the present crop of heavyweights, and that he has the makings of a truly great fighter.

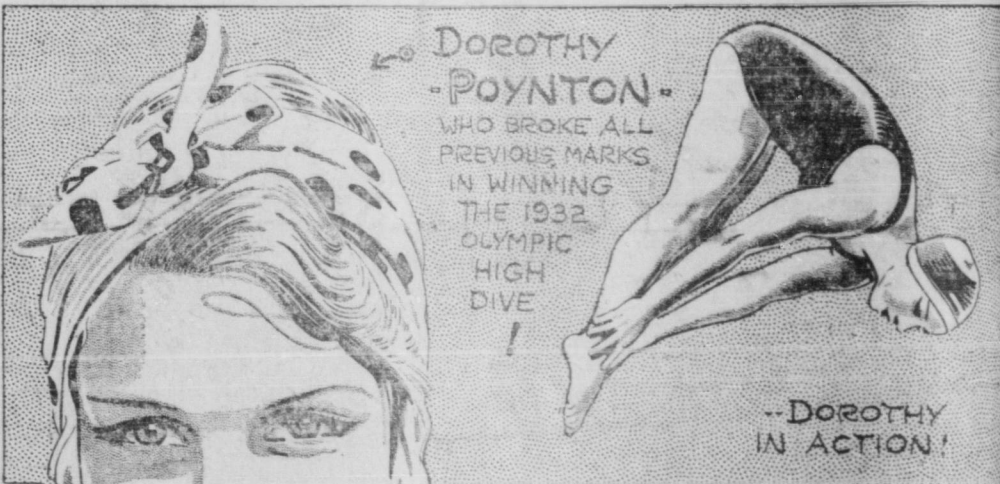

Incidentally, Baer seems to be dodging a meeting with the giant Primo Carnera, who is very anxious to get a shot at the California clouter. Mark my words, the boys are going to have a very tough time getting right of the enormous Primo, who keeps right on winning, and really can fight a bit, in spite of all the adverse criticism that has been leveled at him.

Tony Canzoneri, who was unquestionably the greatest fistic champion of 1932, has just about cleaned up the lightweight division, and unless some promising youngster like this Barney Ross of Chicago develops into a formidable contender, it looks as if Tony will have to try his luck with the welterweights--Jimmy McLarin in particular being the welter that Canzoneri would like to get in there with. If Canzoneri should draw one of the biggest crowds in quite some time, since both have tremendous followings.

Aquatic Aces of 1932

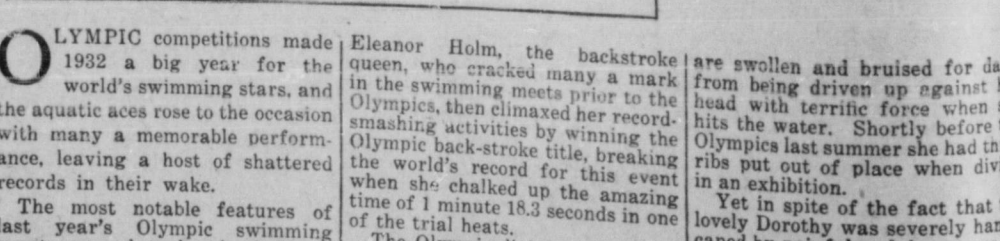

By BURNLEY

DOROTHY POYNTON--WHO BROKE ALL PREVIOUS MARKS IN WINNING THE 1932 OLYMPIC HIGH DIVE!

THE OUTSTANDING SWIMMER OF 1932--A NEVER-TO-BE FORGOTTEN OLYMPIC YEAR-- WAS HELENE MADISON.

THE JAPANESE DOMINATED THE MEN'S SWIMMING EVENTS IN THE 1932 OLYMPIAD--

OLYMPIC competitions made 1932 a big year for the world's swimming stars, and the aquatic aces rose to the occasion with many a memorable performance, leaving a host of shattered records in their wake.

The most notable features of last year's Olympic swimming events proved to be the brilliant performances of the U. S. girl swimmers and the almost complete dominance of the Japanese swimmers in the men's competition.

In the seven Olympic swimming events in which women competed, six were won by the American girls. Only the breast-stroke event resulted in a foreign victory, being won by Clare Dennis of Australia.

Helene Madison did all that was expected of her in the international competition, emerging a two-time Olympic champion by winning both the 100 and 400 meter free style events, and Miss Madison's brilliant performance in 1932 entitled her to an undisputed place as last year's most brilliant swimming star.

The best job of record-breaking during 1932 was turned in by Eleanor Holm, the backstroke queen, who cracked many a mark in the swimming meets prior to the Olympics, then climaxed her record-smashing activities by winning the Olympic back-stroke title, breaking when she chalked up the amazing time of 1 minute 18.3 seconds in one of the trial heats.

The Olympic diving events were won by Dorothy Poynton and Georgia Coleman, the Los Angeles blonde. As a matter of fact, although the Misses Madison and Holm received more publicity for their sensational swimming victories, I think the outstanding performance of the Olympic swimming competition was pretty Dorothy Poynton's great victory in the high platform dive. Dorothy competed in the event against her doctor's orders, as she was suffering from a serious ear injury which necessitated an operation shortly after she had scored her Olympic triumph.

The high dive is a very gruelling event. The girl divers have to climb as high and dive as low as Dutch men's diving. Miss Poynton herself says that after competing in the high dive, the palms of her hands are swollen and bruised for days, from being driven up against her head with terrific force when she hits the water. Shortly before the Olympics last summer she had three ribs put out of place when diving in an exhibition.

Yet in spite of the fact that the lovely Dorothy was severely handicapped by painful and dangerous injuries, she went through with her Olympic dives and broke all previous records by winning the event with the highest score ever made. Her dives being pronounced as near perfect as is humanly possible.

Yes, sir, in spite of the Babe Didriksons and the Helene Madisons, that performance of little Dorothy Poynton makes her the outstanding feminine athlete of 1932--on my book.

At present, America's swimming prospects are not as bright as formerly. The Japanese already rule the world of men's swimming, and we don't seem to have any real contenders coming up to challenge their position at the top. Our two leading woman swimmers, the Misses Madison and Holm, moved professional to go into the movies shortly after the Olympics.
