Depend on What You Lay

A professor of economics finds a bricklayer's daily pay equals the value of 300 eggs. This represents a half year's work for a hen, but bricklayers will point out that a hen cannot lay bricks.—Kansas City Times

Crafty Woodpecker

The red-headed woodpecker is a forehanded bird, the authorities at Sequoia National park, California, say. The birds bore holes in the park road guide posts and wedge acorns into the holes. The woodpeckers don't eat the acorns, but they appear later and eat the worms that develop in the acorns

Persia's Famous Peacock Throne

Headed for the Auction Block

Jewel-Encrusted Seat of Shahs to Be Turned Into Cash for National Funds. Was Once Throne of Mogul Emperor of India.

If you have been thinking that the United States is having a difficult job to balance the budget, take a look at Persia. The romantic land of Omar Khayyam has been so hard hit by the depression that it is going to sell the very seat of government—the famous Peacock Throne—according to reports from reliable authorities. Shah Riza Khan Pahlavi, the present incumbent of the priceless seat, who rose from the lowly position of groom to become first gentleman of Persia, does not regard the famous heirloom with the same veneration as did members of the previous dynasty, born, as they were, to the purple, so the throne is to be turned into hard cash that will help the country through the remaining period of the universal slump. The Peacock Throne is said to have been built by Shah Jahan, Mogul Emperor of India, in 1634. It was carried off to Persia from the Imperial Palace at Delhi by the Persian invader, Nadir Shah, during a raid in 1739, and since then has been the traditional seat of Persian rulers. Many attempts have been made to form an accurate estimation of the intrinsic value of the historic piece of furniture, but no two experts have ever agreed on the figures. The cash value of the bauble has been variously fixed at from $19,000,000 to $160,000,000. The throne is in the form of a field bed, almost every inch of which is studded with precious stones, the number of which runs into thousands. The headrest of the throne is in the form of a peacock's tail, a gorgeous affair, the colors of which are worked out in diamonds, rubies, emeralds and other gems.

CHURCH REVIVALS

Rev. J. H. Arndt spoke to a full house at the First Evangelical church last night, upon: "The Business of the Church." Proverbs 11:30.

The work of the church is soul-winning. This is her business and her only business. Every Christian is saved to serve and his most important service is to lead others into an experience of salvation.

To be a soul-winner a Christian must live a clean life. Many professed Christians fail in winning souls because their own lives are too spotted.

A soul-winning Christian experiences a life of joy. Most people in the entire world have no joy in their lives. They appear happy on the outside, they create every form of amusement imaginable for their pleasure, but within their lives there is no satisfaction.

They live in the bitterness of grief. They come only through doing the will of God.

People without salvation are lost and dead—lost and dead to the real beauties of life that only

God can give.

The responsibility of saving the world belongs to the Christian people. The sooner we all wake up to the fact that the only way we can realize the full value of life is to live in the will of God the better it will be for us.

Rev. Arndt will preach at seven o'clock tonight, upon "The Glorious Gospel."
