WILL SENTENCE JOSEPH A. LONG

low defendants was postponed by Judge Thomas W. Slick until Long could appear as a material witness for Miss Brigham in an equity case brought by trustees of the Long estate in an effort to recover certain properties which they allege were wrongfully given to Miss Brigham. Attorneys for both parties agreed to a continuance of the case set for Friday, and as a result Judge Slick ordered the defendants to appear to receive sentence.

Long, whose last few years have been spent in almost continual bitter litigation including civil and criminal cases in federal and state courts, ended the case against him here with an abrupt plea of guilty which was apparently intended to halt the prosecution of Miss Brigham. Following his change of plea, the government asked for a dismissal of the charges against his secretary.

The elderly Portland man, who at one time largely controlled the business affairs of his home city and

CHAPTER FIFTY-FOUR

Aldridge rose to escort Morgan. As he was turning to go, the Admiral paused to speak to Miss Priscilla. "I'll send my steward to prepare quarters for you, and for you, Charles, and you, Major."

The Major and de Bernis had both risen. The Major bowed with cold and distant formality. But Monsieur de Bernis had a word to say.

"If you will give me leave, Morgan, I will travel back to Jamaica on one of the other ships. Perhaps I might take charge of the Centaur for you."

Morgan stared at him, and then from him to the others. Almost despite himself, a little gasp of relief had escaped the Major, whilst Miss Priscilla had suddenly looked up and on her countenance there had been a momentary expression of bewildered dismay. Sir Henry thrust out a heavy lip, stroked his long moustache reflectively for an instant. "What the devil..." he was beginning. Then he shrugged.

"Oh, but just as you please, Charles. Just as you please. Come, Aldridge."

He rolled out of the cabin with the lean captain following at his heels, leaving Monsieur de Bernis alone with his two fellow adventurers. Before he could utter the expressions for which he was seeking words, Miss Priscilla had risen. She was very quiet, very pale.

"Bart," she said, "would you oblige me by going on deck for a while?"

The Major started forward briskly, proffering his arm. "My dear!" he exclaimed.

She shook her head. "No, no. I mean you to go alone. I have a word to say to Monsieur de Bernis."

His jaw fell. "You have a word to say to him? What word? To what purpose?"

"To my purposes, Bart. Does it not seem to you that there is something to be said between us after all that has happened? I think you, yourself, might find something to say to him. We are a little in his debt, I think. Don't you?"

The Major was in confusion. Emotions conflicted in him.

"To be sure, my obligation to Monsieur de Bernis is... very real. Stab me, very real! I confess that I have been mistook in him, at least to some extent. And..."

"Please say no more," Monsieur de Bernis checked him. "You will only make matters worse."

"You may say it afterwards," said Priscilla added. "Pray leave now."

"But..." Major Sands hung back, racked by misgivings. "But you think..." Surely you can do nothing to say to Monsieur de Bernis to which I cannot be a witness, in which I cannot join. It is more than natural, my dear Priscilla, that I should wish to unite with you in expressing..."

"I have something to say in which you cannot join me, Bart. In which you are not concerned at all."

Alarm painted a foolish look on his face. "But surely, Priscilla, please go! Please go!" Her eye grew impatient.

He spread his hands. "Very well, it is your wish, Monsieur de Bernis. I am sure, will not abuse the situation. He will remember..." And now it was Monsieur de Bernis who interrupted him.

"I do a dreadful, lovely thing," he said, and took her in his arms.

gone, she moved from the table to the long carved locker under the stern-ports. She was pale, and perceptibly troubled. She did not look at Monsieur de Bernis, who waited for her to speak.

"Charles," she said quietly, "will you tell me frankly why you desire to travel back to Jamaica on one of the other ships?"

"Frankly," he said, "so that you may be relieved at last of a presence of which in the past month you may have had a surfeit."

"Is this your frankness? Will you still play comedy with me, or is it that you are not at all concerned with my own wishes in the matter?"

The question disturbed him. He sank his chin to his ruffles, and paced across the cabin and back.

"Major Sands has sufficiently indicated what your wishes should be where I am concerned."

"Major Sands?" There was a faint warmth of indignation in her tone. "What have I to do with Major Sands?"

"He is your only mirror of the world to which you belong."

"I see," she said. A silence followed, which he made no attempt to break. At last, "Needs that weigh with you?" she asked him.

"It does not weigh with me."

"I said it should." He smiled upon her a little wistfully. "You are to remember, Priscilla, that Major Sands is right when he calls me a pirate."

"A pirate? You?"

"It is what I have been. The brand of it remains upon me."

"I do not perceive it. And if I did, I should not care. You are the bravest, noblest man I have ever known."

"You will not have known many," said Monsieur de Bernis.

She looked straight into his countenance, and again there was a long pause. At last she slewed round on the locker, turning her shoulder to him and her face seawards, so that he might not see the tears that were gathering in her eyes. Still she was silent a little while, so as to regain control of her voice.

"Perhaps," perhaps, after all, I was mistook as to your motives for going on one of the other ships. Perhaps I was wrong to wish to ask you to remain."

Uncle Sam's Only Lady Soldier Veteran of Twenty-Five Years

Warrant Officer Olive Hoskins was on Mexican border—denied right to go to France—now headed for another "hitch" in Philippines.

U.S. TROOPS ON PARADE IN PHILIPPINES

On the eve of packing her kitbag before sailing for another "hitch" in the Philippines, Warrant Officer Olive L. Hoskins, who bears the distinction of being the only honest-to-goodness woman soldier in the United States Army, looks back over her twenty-five years service with Uncle Samuel's fighting forces. And the only fault she has to find with her career is that she was denied the privilege of going overseas with the army during the World War. Miss Hoskins has been an army clerk since 1907 when she took a civil service examination in the Philippines. In 1916 when headquarters clerks were abolished, she became an army field clerk with the rank of Warrant Officer. Soon after she was transferred from the Philippines to San Francisco and thence to the Mexican border. After the misunderstanding with our southern neighbors had been cleared up, Warrant Officer Hoskins was ordered back to San Francisco. On the United States entering the World War, she did all in her power to persuade the powers that be to allow her to go "Over there," but her request was refused. During the period of hostilities she was attached to an intelligence unit, a job she found interesting, if not so hazardous. Warrant Officer Hoskins will be eligible for retirement on pension in five years. But she declares she has no intention of leaving the army "while they need me." During her entire service the woman warrior has never worn a uniform.

was regarded as its leading citizen, is facing a maximum sentence of 22 years and a maximum fine of $10,000 if penalized on all counts of the indictment.
