out for the beer bill roll call, 49 votes would be necessary to stop passage of the measure.
But since the house vote thus far in the session has averaged only around 90, either through absence or avoidance, 38 votes with that average number voting would leave a majority of only 52 votes—just one more than the constitutional majority required.

FRACTIONEERING BETWEEN THE POLLS

Arrest of Cop Suspects Bared Scheme to Kidnap Gang Czars

Intended Victims of Extortion Syndicate, Bound by Underworld Code, Could Not Complain to Authorities. Late Vincent Coll Originated Idea—That's Why He's Late.

ARTHUR GRAEF

JOHN NEVINS

VINCENT COLL

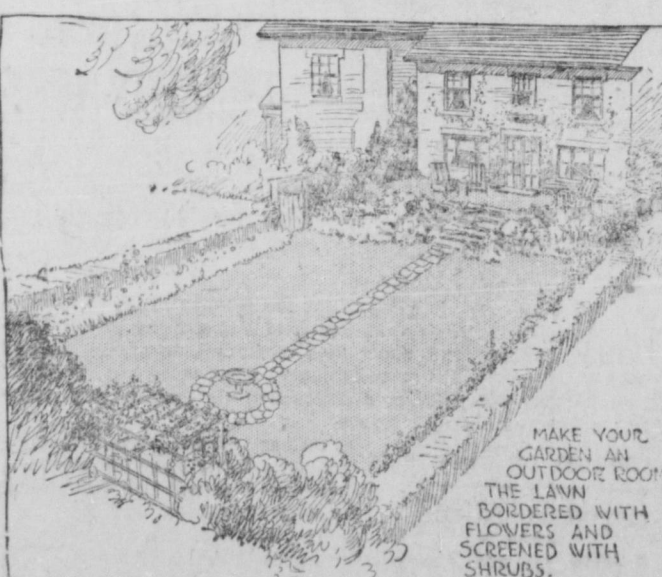

ERNEST SCHOEING

Following the indictment of two New York policemen, Patrolmen John Nevins and Arthur Graef, on charges of kidnaping and extortion, investigators believe they have uncovered a ring, the object of which was the abduction and exacting of tribute from "big shot" of the underworld. Owing to the code that prevails in gangdom, the victims of the ring could not make any complaint to the police. There was nothing they could do but pay up and, if they so desired, take the law into their own hands later. The originator of the scheme was the late Vincent Coll, who made a lucrative business of "putting the snitch" on big figures who were familiar names on the police blotter. Coll turned away with it just so long. But finally the wolves he had hunted toward and did a bit of hunting themselves, with the result that Coll's career came to a thunderous finish in a hail of machine gun bullets while he was phoning in a New York drug store. The arrest of Nevins and Graef came after a detective had been "tipped" that a gang had kidnaped Ernest Schoeing, alias Ernie Smith, a prominent rum-runner's agent, and were holding him for $100,000 ransom. Schoeing had been kidnaped as he was leaving the Federal Court Building, where he had just been convicted of bribing members of the Coast Guard Service to permit smuggling in forbidden liquor. He was released after two weeks in the clutches of the kidnapers when his wife refused to pay the ransom demanded.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

Interior decorators are established institutions. Every housewife knows about them, studies their work, goes to hear them lecture, and employs them if the household finances permit. Good taste in the home furnishing is constantly increasing with a desire for the most beautiful and comfortable material at hand. The great factor in interior decoration is the proper arrangement of the materials, their placing and grouping.
With the artistic arrangement and decoration of the interior the next and most logical step, naturally, is exterior decorating, known as landscape architecture or gardening. Rather pretentious terms for a 30-foot lot, but these small lots need more careful thought Planning for space in the small house is a more difficult problem to the interior decorator than a large one with plenty of room in which to produce effects.

Planning for space in the small house is the most important problem and it is equally important in the small yard. It is useless to try to make a 30 by 50 foot back yard a miniature of a country place. First of all, in planning the small yard for most beautiful effects, it must be kept in mind that the design, to be effective, must be simple. It must also be in scale to the size of the lot. The problem is also complicated by fixed and immovable features such as walks, fences and the position of the house. The design must be fitted to them.

On a small place, straight lines in design are far the best both for convenience, effect and practical purposes. Curved lines merely for the sake of a curve suggesting informality are out of place. They are an imitation of the curves of the informal plantings on large estates, where long straight lines would be ineffective, unnatural, and inartistic. There is no line long enough on a small lot to need the relief of a curve. The proper use of straight lines will be most effective in developing the plan of the yard. Straight lines the long way of the lot increase the appearance of depth. Transverse straight lines will relieve the impression of extreme length and alley-like suggestion of unusually deep narrow lots. Stick to straight lines in small yard planning for simplest and best effects.
