COMING BACK:

"Business is coming back, slowly perhaps, but nevertheless it is on the return route, but that does not mean that it is coming back to the outfit whose management is content to sit with clasped hands in fond expectancy of its return. It is coming back to those whose management will demonstrate leadership and who will do a man-sized job to bring it back," said E. B. Moran, executive sales manager of The Bradstreet Company, in an address before the Queensboro Rotary Club, meeting at the Chamber of Commerce in Long Island City at noon today.

"The rarest combination in the make-up of men," continued Mr. Moran, "is intelligence and the powers of organization and leadership."

"There is actually a surplus of highly intelligent people. If you are hoping that your son will enjoy a material success do not be too optimistic if he merely gets high marks in school. He must combine scholarship with leadership."

"When my ten-year-old boy recently announced that he had been chosen as the leader of the neighborhood club of boys, I enjoyed a greater thrill than if he had shown a school report card filled with a perfect record, for he is showing leadership and an aggressiveness which will carry him further than superior intelligence."

"The reason many men of superior intelligence make poor leaders is that they are so conscious of their superiority that they show it. They are upset by the slowness of other minds, become irritable and are, therefore, replaced by inferior men who have the knack of making people like them and follow them."

"Teamwork and organization ability are so essential in business that success is dependent on them. Those who have these facilities of inducing others to obey their will are promoted to the top rank and will be the leaders in tomorrow's commercial management and are the men to whom we look today for improved business and increased employment during 1933."

The plan proposed to the legislature to consolidate state departments, do away with several hundred members of commissions, save the state $2,500,000 annually and perhaps give greater efficiency than under the present plan may be a little startling but its sound and just what is needed if we are in earnest about our claims that we need less government. Every legislature the past quarter of a century has added boards and commissions and the cost has become great. Such radical changes if carefully worked out, as this seems to have been, means a saving to the state and is a part of the good that will result from the depression. It takes such emergencies to bring about changes for the general good.

Those who object to the sales tax have a lot of good argument and would no doubt be able to convince the governor if they would show him some other way by which funds to operate the benevolent, penal and educational institutions could be obtained. Its just a hard problem for every one seems to want a tax that the other fellow has to pay and its so difficult to get one that doesn't directly or indirectly hit most all of us.

There is a chance that the legislature will adjourn sine die about March 1st. The program will have been carried out and about half the members want to attend the inauguration at Washington, March 4th. And that will be something unusual in the old state house where for years it has been the custom to go the full sixty-one days and then turn the clock back.

Senator Glass as secretary of the treasury, Senator Walsh of Montana as attorney general and Senator Johnson, progressive from California, for a place in the cabinet is the report from Washington, unconfirmed, and if true a very good start for an official organization to back Mr. Roosevelt that will produce confidence throughout the country.

Who thought in good old days when the Ford plant was the model pointed to every where, that the first big strike of the depression would come from there. More than a hundred thousand men are idle as the result of a controversy over the wages in the Briggs Manufacturing Company where Ford bodies are made.

Buy a ticket for the Chamber of Commerce banquet to be held Monday evening. Give Mr. Strauss an enthusiastic reception. It won't hurt a thing and it will help by putting every body in a better frame of mind. The more optimism you can create, the better.

The Republicans don't like the Citizens ticket idea and the Democrats feel the same way about it. The old fashioned two party plan is still the best and that's the way to fight out the question of who should hold the elective offices.

Come To Church Sunday

THE CHOOSING OF THE TWELVE

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 5
Mark 3:7-35

Because of the bitter opposition which was being aroused among the Pharisees and their like, Jesus left the cities and withdrew to the shores of Galilee, where a great multitude followed him. He had travelled throughout Galilee and his fame had spread. So great was the number of those who came to hear him that he was forced to speak to them from a boat anchored off the shore.

Jesus preached and healed many. Finally, he withdrew with his disciples to a spot known as the Horns of Hattin, a hill on the west side of the sea. Jesus knew that plots were being formed against him and that it was but a matter of time until he should fall into the hands of his enemies. So he spent a night in prayer and preparation. And on the next day, he called to him the twelve who were to be apostles.

The twelve which Jesus selected to carry on his work were Simon, whom he surnamed Peter, and Andrew, his brother. James and John, the sons of Zebedee, whom Jesus surnamed Boanerges, "Sons of Thunder." There was Philip and Bartholomew; Matthew and Thomas; James, the son of Alphaeus, and Thaddaeus, and Simon the Canaanite. And, finally, there was Judas Iscariot, who was to betray him to his enemies.

The twelve which Jesus appointed at this time were selected that he might send them forth to preach his message and he gave them authority to cast out demons and to heal. All of them had been with him through his various trials, tribulations and they were chosen because they represented different types, but able to carry the work among all classes when Jesus should have met death.

Followers of Christ
By Harlowe R. Hoyt

When Jesus had entered well into the second year of his ministry, he turned his attention to the matter of selecting those who were to aid him in his work.

There was great need for this action. Already he had aroused the anger of the Pharisees and the scribes, who made their living from the interpretation of the religious laws and the observances of the synagogues. They saw their great power being undermined by this simple teacher of simple things, and they resolved to put an end to him. Jesus realized this.

So it was that he retired to the little mount not far from the shores of Galilee and chose his followers who were to carry on his work. There were twelve tribes of Israel so he selected twelve men. Them, he empowered to preach, to cast out demons, to carry on his message and to perpetuate it when he should be gone. That they might do this in a manner fit and proper, he travelled with them and instructed them in the religion he was inculcating in the world.

Today, with Christianity extending to the far reaches of the earth, there still is need for teachers to spread the word of Jesus, just as the apostles of old carried it in the days when the precepts were new. But there is this difference; each one of us should become an apostle; each one of us should do all that can be done to extend the teachings and the practices of Jesus.

There are many ways in which this can be done, for opportunities lie about us every hour of the day. But the best of all, perhaps, is by example. If each of us but leads a Christian life, by example and precept he will inculcate the teachings in others. And they, in turn, will respond and spread the work, as the sunflower responds to the sun.

For Christian work and Christian deeds bring fruit in that they cause a response which spreads them on and on.

BEHIND the SCENES
in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.

No matter if Marlene Dietrich wears 'em, women in general will never take to pants.

So spoke Adrian yesterday from his modernistic studio, with its chateaux-colored walls, its white woodwork, its large central mirror and its ostrich plumes rising out of glass bowls.

Who is Adrian? As most of you know, he is M-G-M's fashion expert, the young man who designed those trick hats and tailored costumes for Garbo and who started an international style craze with Joan Crawford's gowns in "Letty Linton."

He says: "Trousers will persist for beach, for sport wear, but women will not adopt them generally because, in most cases, they are unbecoming and because they allow small chance for individuality. Miss Dietrich happens to look chic in them. She has gone to extremes. But even she will tire of them after a while."

"The appeal of tailored things is that they are trim and gallant. They express the young woman of the day."

"But style is steady evolution. Within the last few years I've adapted so many masculine garments to feminine clothes that it has ceased to be amusing. I intend to veer away from this in the future. But we are not quite ready for it yet. If style evolution is steady, it also is slow. We change things gradually."

Groucho Marx says of the trousers for women: "It's all right for women to wear pants if you can't see them."

And then there's the rib that Carl Harnbaugh pulled on Wilson Mizner.

Wilson was lying back in a barber chair, his face covered with lather. Coming into the shop, Carl recognized the Mizner feat and began to pan the veteran wit unmercifully.

Outraged at last, Wilson rose in the chair. "Young man," he demanded, "do you know who I am?"

Carl nodded. "Sure," he said, "you'd have been Lincoln if he'd lived."

With which he ducked out of the shop.

And this, no doubt, is the only reason he didn't hear himself topped.

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

What was Peggy Hopkins Joyce saying about not going out to parties? She showed up at the fights last night with Sidney Blackmer and report has it she'll be Joseph M. Schenck's guest at Agate California over the coming week-end.
