Paris Styles

By Mary Knight
United Press Staff Correspondent
Paris — (UP) — One of the big dressmakers here has some well chosen words to say on the subject of elegance.

"Elegance is, after all," he said "but a formula, changing its life itself changes. To compare the elegance of one epoch with that of another is impossible, because we are under the influence of the times in which we live and are subject to its rhythm."

"The artists and designers must look for inspiration among the events of the hour, and speed is the god of the hour. Therefore, they must work quickly to reproduce in terms of clothes, pictures books, or interior decoration, the reactions and personalities of the day."

Thus spoke Jean Charles Worth, who is working night and day on smart costumes for 1933. There will be such a variety of things to choose from this season that every woman will have an opportunity to dress her own particular type to the best advantage.

The Adams County Choral Society will meet for rehearsal Tuesday night at seven-thirty o'clock above the Brook Store.
