FRED MUTSCHLER DIES THURSDAY AFTER ILLNESS

Albert and Edgar Mutschler and son-in-law, Mr. Schroyer, built the business and enlarged the plant to its present large proportions and modern facilities. It is recognized as one of the largest independent meat packing plants in this section of the country, including an artificial ice making plant, which supplies the Decatur territory with ice throughout the year. His was a guiding hand in the expansion of the industry.

Appreciating the worth of Adams county farm lands, Mr. Mutschler and members of his family, a few years ago began the purchase of several farms in this county. Their holdings are listed among the large-est in the county.

Of a kind and benevolent nature and with a bountiful purse, Mr.
Mutschler was never known to have refused an appeal in the name of charity and his contributions were numerous among civic and church organizations.

The deceased was a member of the Zion Reformed church in this city and from 1906 to 1914 served as one of the trustees.

Besides the two sons, Mr.
Mutschler is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Hulda Schroyer, wife of E. F. Schroyer and Miss Ella Mutschler of Fort Myers, Florida.
One daughter, Mrs. Edward Worth-man, died in 1911. One sister, Mrs.
Peter Kirsch of this city and a brother, Phillip, also survive, together with three grandchildren, Frederick and Catherine Schroyer and Robert Mutschler of this city.

Pending word from the daughter in Florida, funeral arrangements were not completed until late this afternoon.

The body was taken to the W. H.
Zwick and Son funeral home and will be returned to the Schroyer home this evening, where it may be viewed by friends.

Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock from the house and 2:30 o'clock at the Zion Reformed Church. The Rev.
L. C. Hesser of Saeboyan, Wisconsin, former pastor of the local Reformed church will officiate, assisted by Rev. Charles M. Prugh, pastor.

Word was received this afternoon

SYNOPSIS

Mary Faith, young and comely fiancee of Kimberley Farrell, handsome blond youth, just out of law school, leaves her position as secretary to the wealthy Mark Nesbit to marry "Kim." Mary Faith receives a note from Kim's mother inviting her to dinner.

CHAPTER III

"Kim, what's the matter? Are you angry with me?" she was beginning when he brought his hand down hard on hers, interrupting her.
"Wait, let me tell you about my mother," he said. "She was awake last night when I got home and I told her that you and I had just about made up our minds to get married on the first—"

"Just about made up our minds?" echoed Mary Faith as he stopped.
"Why, Kim, we have made up our minds, haven't we? I thought we settled everything last night."

Surely there had been no ifs-ands about their getting married when they had talked it over the night before. Kim had been very clear and definite about their plans then.

They would be married on the first day of October, a Saturday, and leave town in his little roadster for a week's honeymoon "just bumming around the state." Then they would come back to the flat where he and his mother lived and settle down to be Mr. and Mrs. Kimberley Farrell for the rest of their lives.

"Of course, we did settle everything," he said now. "But you asked me what my mother thinks about our getting married, and I'm telling you. She thinks we ought to wait until I'm making more money—enough to give her a flat of her own somewhere. She doesn't want to live with us. She says it'll never work."

In the darkness Mary Faith's face flushed. "She's been saying that for almost four years, Kim," she reminded him. "She knows it will be years before you'll be making enough money to keep up two homes.
You're twenty-eight and I'm twenty-four, and we know we care for each other and that we're old enough to marry and settle down. I'm sure we won't mind facing a little poverty together, if we have to. Suppose we do have to pinch pennies? Who cares?"

She bent her head and her lips brushed the sleeve of his coat. "I shall love pinching pennies, I shall be the most stingy wife under the sun—as well as the happiest one," she added.

"You're sure you won't mind having her live with us?" he asked after a minute or two. "I never could stand listening to two women bickering every night when I came home, let me tell you!"

His voice was harsh and his eyes were straight ahead of him on the lamplit road. He took his hand from hers and laid it on the steering wheel.

"Kim, please don't say things like that to me. Haven't I always been nice to your mother?" she asked him.
"And you know I won't mind having her living with us. I won't care who lives with us or where we live—so long as you and I are together."

Kim and his mother lived on the ground floor of an old-fashioned apartment in Wilton Street.

Mary Faith always enjoyed her visits there because it was Kim's home; but it was a depressing sort of place.

The living room was crowded with upholstered furniture. All of the chairs had little lace doilies on their backs. A big brown crock filled with pampas grass stood in front of the fireplace. On a shelf above it stood a cupid clock made of silver gilt. The cupid was much too fat, and he smirked.

"Why, Kim, we have made up our minds, haven't we?"

Over the whole flat hung the smell of dusty carpets, coffee and meals cooked in grease long ago.

Mrs. Farrell was sitting beside the window, reading the evening paper, when Mary Faith and Kim walked into the room at fifteen minutes after seven. She glanced up at the cupid and Mary Faith saw that she had been crying.

"I had dinner ready forty-five minutes ago," she said, getting slowly to her feet. "I made a cheese soufflé.
It's ruined by this time, but if you don't care I'm sure I don't. . . .
Would you like to put your things in my room, Mary Faith?"

Mary Faith followed her down the dark narrow hall to her bedroom.
She took off her hat and coat and smoothed her hair back from her forehead.

Mrs. Farrell stood watching her for a second or two with her reddened eyes. Then she muttered something about the soufflé and went hurrying out of the room. She bumped against the door as she went. She was the awkward kind of stout woman who is always bumping into doors or dropping dishes.

Mary Faith hurried after her.

"Can't I help you with dinner?" she asked. "You know what a treat it is to me to help around a kitchen."

She had always had a mortal longing for a kitchen of her own. A bright new little kitchen, all colored tiles and shiny pans and white dotted curtains with sunshine and wind coming through them.

"You know I learned quite a lot about cooking when I took that course at the Business Woman's Club last winter," she went on, looking round for an apron. "What can I do to help?"

Kim's mother didn't answer her question. A smile flickered in her plump face for an instant. A tight-lipped smile.

"I guess you didn't learn to keep a soufflé from going to nothing an hour after it was made, did you?" she asked as she pulled a baking dish
