CHURCH REVIVALS

Church of God

The revival services at the Church of God are continuing this week. The messages that Rev. Bright has been bringing us from the large chart have been wonderful. These messages have been more to Christian people than to those who are not Christians. Beginning tonight the messages will be evangelistic in nature. Tonight's message will be on the subject, "God's Cure for a Troubled Heart."

Wednesday evening the subject will be, "Three Famous Liars and What They Said."

Thursday evening the subject will be, "Plain Facts About the Judgment." These services have been good and promise to be even better as the meeting progresses. Why not make special plans to attend the service tonight? Get started in the very beginning of the series of evangelistic messages. Come tonight. Bring a friend.

SYNOPSIS

The colorful career of "Big Jeff" Randolph, now a national football hero, has been traced from his humble home in tiny Athens, a mid-west factory town, through high school gridiron stardom that made him a magnet for scouts from big colleges and through two years of backfield glory as a superstar at Thorndyke, rich and historic eastern university. He's the idol of fandom, the pet of society, the envy of back-home neighbors, and "my boy" to his adoring Mom and Pop. To the former, he's still her little Tommy and to father, well—Tom's manners and clothes annoy the veteran glassworker who secretly, however, rates his boy on a par with Pop's supreme political favorite, Al Smith. Before Thorndyke had put a high hat sort of halo on him, Tommy's best girl was Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the richest and most important citizen in Athens. But in New York, Tommy has met Elaine Winthrop, society artist and daughter of a Wall Street magnate. Mom is puzzled as to how to answer a sweet letter she received from Elaine but through a stroke of genius, she replies with perfume and all! Her other son, Pete, who runs a garage, is taken ill and Mom is nursing him.

Tommy was greater than ever (Mom learned via newspapers, radio and neighbors) ... "they can't keep him off the All-American this year."

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE Then she went downstairs to make some flaxseed and put some lemon in it; and she couldn't help but wonder what they'd do if anything ever happened to Pete; and as she looked back she could see how Pete had been as good a boy as Tommy—not so great, of course—but no boy could ever be better to his mother than Pete was and even though he didn't get his picture in the papers and all that he was just as dear as Tommy and Mom never made any difference between them—if she had had a dozen, one would be the same as another. Steve came over, all worried but Mom just laughed and said Pete was tough as an old shoe; but around eleven o'clock she heard a noise and went upstairs and there wasn't he up and changing pajamas, running around in the draft. Mom gave it to him.

The next morning he felt better and the fever was gone from him and he wanted to get up and go to the garage but Mom wouldn't hear of it. She told Uncle Louie to go down to the garage and see what he could do; and while he was thinking about it Pop said he guessed he had better lay off and go down to the garage himself; and that made Uncle Louie mad and he said he had more business in his little finger than Pop had in his whole body and Pop said he must keep all of it in his little finger because nobody ever saw him show any.

Uncle Louie seemed to do all right enough for two days and Mom had to laugh to herself how important he acted when he came in for meals as if running a garage was the hardest job in town. Pop told him anybody could fill up gas tanks; Uncle Louie said maybe they could but handling the customers was the big thing and Pop said he pitied the customers Uncle Louie handled. Mom was glad when Pete bundled up and went back. Uncle Louie started to tell Pete how to run things then and about what changes he ought to make and Pete said he was glad Uncle Louie knew so much as he would come in handy. After that Uncle Louie kept still.

With Pete hale and hearty again Mom got to worrying about Tommy all alone over east in all that snow; but warm weather finally came and he was all right and Mom got to looking forward to seeing him again in the summer. He was getting to be almost a stranger but that was the way of the world, she guessed; and as Tommy was making such a great man of himself she was satisfied; one more year and it would be over and he'd be back again although Mom was wondering about that, too. There was nothing much in Athens for a boy like Tommy. And sure enough, when summer came, he was home only a few days—bigger and stronger and more quiet-like and talking and acting more and more like the rich people. Pop and Uncle Louie kind of looked at him funny when he talked but they didn't say anything. Mom was ready for them if they did because there was no reason why Tommy had to stay like everybody else in town just because he was born there. Then he went back east where he had a job in a boys' camp, teaching them to swim and all that. When he had gone Uncle Louie said that was a heck of a job for a boy big enough to be driving a team of twenty mules and Pop said it was better than no job at all, looking at Uncle Louie. Then Pop said there was nothing for him to do in Athens, anyhow, with business the way it was and the factory like to shut down anytime and Wall Street putting the country on the friz.

Then came the last game with the Yales and Tommy's team had not been licked and Pop read in the paper if they licked the Bulldogs they could go to the Tournament of Roses if they wanted to. It was all mixed up, this football, with bulldogs and tigers and roses. Charlie Whitney was going over to the Yale game and said Dorothy would be there, too. Mom had kind of a funny feeling inside when Charlie mentioned the last game. In one way she'd be glad when it was over and Tommy could go out into the world and make his fortune because, as Charlie had said in the beginning, it was the education which counted. Tommy hadn't said anything about a job yet but Mom wasn't worried about that, even if jobs were getting scarce. She knew the millionaires would see that Tommy was taken care of, particularly Elaine's father who was a big man in Wall Street itself. Pop wasn't too pleased about Tom getting mixed up with those kind of people but Uncle Louie said it was easier to marry money than to make it.
