LABOR VOTES A TRADE BOYCOTT

Under the federation's action workers of America would be expected to refrain from purchasing goods made in any of the countries involved. It was made clear that the boycott weapon was not to be used against any persons in the United States and would be aimed exclusively at imported goods.

"It must not be directed against any individuals in our own country," the convention declared, "regardless of their nationality, race or political beliefs and affiliations."

The condition of James Sprague, who has been confined to his home with illness the past week, is somewhat improved today.

FEDERAL JURY ACQUITS SEN. JAMES J. DAVIS

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) never lost my faith, because I knew I was innocent. I am also grateful to the court and jury and to many, many friends who never lost their faith in me. I am leaving tonight for Washington, and I expect to get back home to Pittsburgh as soon as possible to visit my dear old blind father."

Miller left last night for Aurora, Ill., to join his wife and child in their home here.

THAT'S MY BOY!

by FRANCIS WALLACE AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

SYNOPSIS

The colorful career of "Big Jeff" Randolph, now a national football hero, has been traced from his humble home in tiny Athens, a mid-west factory town, through high school gridiron stardom that made him a magnet for scouts from big colleges and through two years of backfield glory as a superstar at Thorn-dyke, rich and historic eastern university. He's the idol of fandom, the pet of society, the envy of back-home neighbors, and "my boy" to his adoring Mom and Pop. To the former, he's still her little Tommy and to father, well—Tom's manners and clothes annoy the veteran glassworker who secretly, however, rates his boy on a par with Pop's supreme political favorite, Al Smith. Before Thorn-dyke had put a high hat sort of halo on him, Tommy's best girl was Dorothy Whitney, daughter of the richest and most important citizen in Athens. But in New York, Tommy has met Elaine Winthrop, society artist and daughter of a Wall Street magnate. More glittering than ever was "Big Jeff" as a senior but in the final game on Thorn-dyke's schedule, Yale gets a 14-0 lead in the third quarter. Capt. Randolph's Pilgrims seemed doomed when an Eli lineman calls "Jeff" an "old pro". . . . That was the spark that touched the TNT. . . . Randolph went berserk. . . . The Pilgrims are now in touchdown distance, pounding the Bulldogs. . . .

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Within their 15-yard line the Yale defense stiffened—a fourth down pass went into the end zone. Yale had the ball; but the Bulldogs could do nothing with it; the surging Pilgrim forwards threw back two charges—Harlow's punt was hurried and Barton returned it to the Yale 45.

Again the pounding continued—and the Thorn-dyke gains became bigger; the crowd awoke to the threat; when the period ended it was Thorn-dyke's ball on Eli's 16-yard line with one yard to make on fourth down.

"This is the play that counts," Charlie Whitney said. Jerry nodded. "Come on, Jeff, old boy—show 'em your stuff." Dorothy, almost shivering in excitement, seized Jerry's arm, clung to it.

Tommy made three yards.

Thorn-dyke was jubilant, on the field and in the stands; on the next play Tommy started wide, sucked the tacklers in, tossed laterally to Barton and then dashed straight for the corner in time to take out two men at one swipe as Barton dragged another over the goal.

The kick for goal was blocked. The score was Yale 14, Thorn-dyke 6.

The Thorn-dyke stands moaned while Yale was exultant. It would take more than one touchdown to tie; Yale was receiving the kickoff; at the worst it could hold the ball, stall for time.

Tommy kicked off over the goal line. Yale put the ball in play on its 20. Harlow and Verger were thrown back; Thorn-dyke's line was charging so fast Harlow decided to play safe and punt on third down; it went outside on the Pilgrim 42.

The 70,000 spectators were tense. Thorn-dyke's attack had been an unstoppable juggernaut; could Randolph keep it moving?

It stalled; a first down pass was almost intercepted; Randolph was stopped—then, while Yale began to breathe easier, Tommy threw a long pass down the middle; Barton led the ball a yard too far, turned to catch it; Harlow, coming to intercept, spilled Barton.

The field judge ran to the spot.

Dillinger, after his arrest in Dayton, was identified as a participant in at least four bank robberies.

They were: the Massachusetts Avenue bank, Indianapolis, $21,000; the Farrell, Pa., bank, $24,000; a New Castle, O., bank, $35,000 and the Bluffton institution.

He was arrested at the house of a Dayton woman who was believed to be a sister of one of the Michigan, Ind., escapes. He was taken to Lima on Sept. 28.

Sarber died in Lima Memorial hospital, an hour after he was shot. Physicians said he had been beaten on the head with a pistol after he was shot and that death probably resulted from a skull fracture.

Mrs. Sarber and Deputy Sharp were released with acetylene torches from the cell in which they were locked.

"I thought the men were successful business men," said Sharp today. "They were entirely calm and all were dressed well."

"Dillinger" seemed to expect them. He showed not the least surprise."

He looked tired; his eyes were dead and lustreless; his face was bruised; one eye was slightly puffed. Dorothy avoided his gaze until it became embarrassing; then she met his eyes.

"Will you dance, Dot?" She had not danced with him for three years; he moved freely, faultlessly; she felt smaller in his arms; she realized how much he had grown in that time. People were watching them; calling to him.

"You're quite the hero, Tom."

"We were lucky."

"I'm greatly honored. Every girl here is envying me."

"Please, Dot—not tonight." His voice was gentle; sincere; she felt the warm strength of his arms and melted into his mood. It was strangely peaceful; the music and the people and the place drifted away.

"Tom?"

"Yes?"

"Why are you so nice tonight?"

"Why are you?"

"Because you were so marvellous today, I suppose."

"And if I hadn't been?"

"Something in his voice annoyed her. She lifted her head and said swiftly: "Listen, Tom Randolph, if you think—"

He smiled indulgently as he would at a child of whom he was fond, caught her close and danced furiously, as he had when they were in high school. When they returned to the table Dorothy was suddenly aware that her father, Elaine and Jerry were watching them curiously.
