Washington U. Offers Course In Landscaping

Seattle—(U.P.)—What next? Some of the things a student can take in college are horseback riding, proper handling of canoes on dark nights, garden planting and rose growing. Now comes the "introduction to the study of landscape architecture" at the University of Washington.

Field trips to Seattle gardens will be made throughout the course.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that Monday, November 6, 1933 will be the last day to pay your Fall installment of taxes. The county treasurer's office will be open from 8 A. M. to 4 p. m. during the tax paying season. All taxes not paid by that time will become delinquent and a 3% penalty will be added. Also interest at the rate of 8% will be charged from the date of delinquency until paid. Those who have bought or sold property and wish a division of taxes are asked to come in at once. Call on the Auditor for errors and any reductions. The Treasurer can make no corrections.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty of delinquent taxes resulting from the omission of taxpayers to state definitely on what property they desire to pay, in whose name it may be found, in what township or corporation it is situated.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, the law is such that there is no option left for the Treasurer to enforce the collection of delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of delinquent lands and lots will take place on the second Monday in February 1934 at 10 a. m.

County orders will not be paid to anyone owing delinquent taxes. All persons are warned against them. No receipts or checks will be held after expiration of time, as the township law requires the Treasurer to make daily deposit.

Particular attention: If you pay taxes in more than one township mention the fact to the Treasurer, also see that your receipts call for all your real estate and personal property.

Making inquiries of the Treasurer regarding taxes to insure they do not fall to include return postage. JOHN WECHESTER, Treasurer Adams County, Indiana Oct. 19 to Nov. 4

New Use Found For Famous Phototube

Cambridge, Mass.—(U.P.)—A new use has been found for the phototube, already of service in such varied tasks as turning on a drinking fountain and analyzing the color response of cloth, paper and translucent liquids.

The phototube is the controlling element in the new servo-mechanism, a device recently perfected at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. This device includes among its possible applications the automatic steering and stabilization of aircraft, the gyroscope stabilization and steering of ships, the operation of recording instruments, and the automatic control of certain industrial processes. The device performs these functions through its ability to follow quickly and accurately a prescribed path drawn on a chart.

Poe's Original Home In Philadelphia Restored

Philadelphia.—(U.P.)—Restored in every detail to its appearance of a century ago, the Philadelphia home of Edgar Allan Poe has been opened as a public shrine. It was here that he wrote the poem, "The Raven," and many stories, including "The Gold Bug." Many original manuscripts, pieces from collections of Poe's works now are on display in the restored, three-story cottage.

The building was purchased by Richard Gimbel, who employed an architect to refurnish it as it appeared at the time Poe lived here with his wife, Virginia, and his mother-in-law and aunt from 1835 to 1844.

Included among the original articles are a stove, a desk and bedroom furniture. A bust of Pallas has been placed in the study in which Poe worked.

THAT'S MY BOY!

AUTHOR OF "HUDDLE"

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

Mom was worried. "But aren't you going back to Hollywood?"

Tom and Jack exchanged quick glances. "I'll tell you about that later, Mom; but don't you worry. And I'll be back for Christmas and maybe stay awhile. How's that? Okay?"

"Anything you say, Tom."

They went inside. "How's everybody?" Tom asked.

"They're all just fine; we didn't expect you in until later and they thought they'd see you at supper. Now let's see. We've got a chicken in the oven but it isn't ready; how about some ham and eggs and coffee and fried potatoes?"

"Lady," answered Jack Devere, "you talk like an angel from heaven, you do."

Cousin Emmy almost screamed; she doubled half over, she was laughing so hard. "You said it just like that 'in that Western—what was it now? Oh yes—The Rocky Road to Gallup'."

"Come on, Emmy," Mom said. She could see Tommy didn't like the way Cousin Emmy was carrying on but Jack Devere didn't seem to mind. He seemed real nice. Mom was sorry Pop and Pete weren't there; she thought they'd like him real well. Cousin Emmy had to drag herself out to the kitchen.

"Ain't he a card?" she asked Mom. Uncle Louie came in. He was pretending he didn't see the boys and had his head down and was going right up the steps and to his room. Mom wished he would but Cousin Emmy called: "Hey, Louie, don't you see Tommy and Jack Devere?"

Uncle Louie turned pretty quick. Mom thought, and shook hands with Tommy without smiling and then turned to Jack Devere and said: "I suppose you're one of them movie actors?"

Cousin Emmy was astounded. "Don't tell me you don't recognize Jack Devere?"

"Never heard of him."

Jack Devere winked at Tom, who was getting mad and so was Mom at the idea of the old good-for-nothing being so uncivil; but Jack said:

"I've heard of you, though. You're the postmaster, aren't you?"

Uncle Louie didn't say he was but he didn't say he wasn't.

"Whose automobile is that?"

"Mine," said Jack Devere.

"I'd think you could find something else to do with your money with so many people starving," Uncle Louie said. Then he turned and put his head down and went upstairs. Tom was looking after him and his face was getting red and his jaw tight. Mom hurried in and said to Jack Devere: "Don't pay any attention to him—he has stomach trouble."

Jack Devere patted her arm. "Don't you worry about me, now, Mom. I've got a grandpa just like him."

"He's an old crab," Cousin Emmy yelled up the stairs. Uncle Louie slammed his door. Mom went back to the stove.

The doorbell rang and Cousin Emmy ran to open it. Mom could have fallen down flat when she heard Florrie Johnson's voice: "Mom sent me over with this jar of preserves," she said.

Mom didn't know just what to do. The idea of a thing like Florrie Johnson, who could smell a man a mile off, having the gall to try to come in where she knew she wasn't welcome. Mom started for the door, afraid Cousin Emmy was going to ask Florrie in—why wasn't she

"Watch me drive this boat down the main drag," said Tommy to Mom as he and Jack Devere, movie idol, hopped into the swell car working, anyhow? Probably got good and sick with too much to drink last night. As Mom went to the door she saw Tommy shaking his head and frowning and putting both thumbs down and she was thankful he had that much sense.

So Mom put on a nice face and got in front of Cousin Emmy who knew how Mom felt about Florrie and the likes of her, but didn't know just what to do.

"Thanks, Florrie," she said, "go back and tell your mother it was real nice of her. Tommy is resting now."

Florrie was trying to edge in, the hold thing, but Mom was too cute for her. She lowered her voice to a whisper: "I don't want to wake him up."

Florrie whispered, too: "Who was it come with him. Miss Randolph?"

Cousin Emmy couldn't stay still any longer and she whispered, too: "It was funny to hear Cousin Emmy whisper: 'It's Jack Devere—' and if he isn't a scream!" Mom had to practically shut the door in Florrie's face; but when she finally got it closed and looked out through the curtains and saw every door along the street was open, including Florrie's mother's, she thought: "Would let them all know that they weren't going to come sneaking over on an excuse like that—and she bet it would be a long time before Florrie Johnson ever tried to put her foot inside that door again."

Florrie stood outside examining the car. Tommy said to Mom, "Nice going, Mom."

Jack Devere was smiling. Well, Florrie Johnson wasn't going to get her hands on these two. Mom went back to the kitchen. Florrie was still parading along the sidewalk trying to look in the window.

Then, almost before Mom knew it, the boys were leaving.

"Watch me drive this boat down the main drag," Tommy told his mother, "I've always wanted to come back here with a car like this."

He went off, roaring and waving. Always coming and going

WAR EXPERIENCE LED TO TEAR GAS LOCKS

Veteran Developed Idea After 18 Months In Hospital

Philadelphia, Oct. — (U.P.)—James J. Walsh's experience of being gassed in the World War prompted him to consider the practical uses of tear gas in civil life and resulted in the invention of a gas bomb protector for safes and other depositories.

While spending 18 months in a hospital after his war experience, Walsh evolved a plan for connecting a tear gas tube with the lock of a safe as additional protection. He obtained a position with a safe manufacturing company in order to acquaint himself with safe locks.

"It took me eight years to perfect my system of incorporating the gas cartridge in the lock," he said. "But in 1929 I received my patent."

"None of the persons for whom tear gas has been installed has had a robbery. There was one instance in this city of a large manufacturing company which had been having frequent robberies. I installed a tear gas system. Within a short time another entry was attempted. The two intruders were overcome and were found in the morning stretched on the floor. It took them two days to recover."

"Despite the fact that the chlorine I use leaves no harmful effects, a warning sign is posted outside on all property where it is used, aside from the sign over the lock on the safe."

"The gas release is fool-proof. Two-thirds of it comes outside, but one-third remains within the safe, making it impossible to break the lock and then come back later hoping the air will be cleared. The concentrated gas within the safe will be just as effective when a second attempt to open the safe door is made."

Former War Nurse Heads Wisconsin Legion Post

Horicon, Wis.—(U.P.)—Members of the American Legion, Horicon Post, are numbered among the few headed by a woman commander. Miss Caroline Banghart, former war nurse and a Legion member for many years, is the new commander.

Since the war she has been intensely interested in the welfare of the veterans and their families, and it was because of her work in their behalf that she was made commander.
