Appointment of Administrator. Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned has been appointed Administrator of the estate of John H. Hook, late of Adams County, deceased. The estate is probably solvent. Roy Hook, Administrator. C. L. Walters, Attorney. Oct. 25th 1933. Oct 26 Nov 2-9

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS. Notice is hereby given that Monday, November 6, 1933, will be the last day to pay your Fall installment of taxes. The county treasurer's office will be open from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M. during the tax paying season. All taxes not paid by that time will become delinquent and a 3% penalty will be added. Also interest at the rate of 8% will be charged from the date of delinquency until paid. Those who have bought or sold property and wish a division of taxes are asked to come in at once. Call on the Auditor for errors and any reductions. The Treasurer can make no corrections. The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty of delinquency taxes resulting from the omission of tax-payers to state definitely on what property, or desire to pay, in whose name it may be found, in what township or corporation it is situated. Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, the law is such that there is no option left for the Treasurer but enforce the collection of delinquent taxes. The annual sale of delinquent lands and lots will take place on the second Monday in February 1934 at 10-00 A. M. County orders will not be paid to anyone owing delinquent taxes. All persons are warned against them. No receipts or checks will be held after expiration of time, as the new depository law requires the Treasurer to make daily deposit. Particular attention, if you pay taxes in more than one township, mention the fact to the Treasurer, also see that your receipts call for all your real estate and personal property. In making inquiries of the Treasurer regarding taxes to insure reply do not fail to include return postage. JOHN WECHTER, Treasurer Adams County, Indiana. Oct. 12 to Nov. 6

CHAPTER FIFTY-ONE

Then in the suitcase Tom had also put a box of candy; Mom knew it was candy by the box and that made her feel all thrilled, too, because she had always wanted boxes of candy when she was young, like Charlie Whitney had taken his girls when he went out on Sunday and Wednesday nights but Pop was never much of a man for things like that. And here when Mom opened the box it wasn't ordinary candy but candy that looked like fruit; you could touch it and it even felt like fruit. Uncle Louie had something to say about that, too; he said what was the sense in it when Tommy could have got real fruit for half the price and it was only another waste of money with times so bad; and Pop said if he had wasted as much time in his life doing nothing, like some people, he wouldn't talk about anybody else wasting their own money which they had worked hard for and it was nobody's business how they spent it. It took Pop to settle him.

But Mom noticed Uncle Louie could eat it, just the same; for when she went to get it to take up to the store the next day to show the neighbor ladies, half of it was gone; and of course he had had to take the bunch of grapes in the middle Mom liked best. It was the biggest piece and that's why he had taken it first. She knew him.

Then Cousin Emmy came over so quick that Mom knew she couldn't have half-fied her man and Mom wondered how he stood for it, even if he was as dumb as they said he was. When Uncle Louie saw her coming he turned up his nose and stuck out his lower lip; and before Cousin Emmy could say a thing Uncle Louie said, real loud, how good the meal was; and Cousin Emmy said she supposed he meant her cooking was no good and that anytime he got tired of it he could leave and it wouldn't make her mad. Then Uncle Louie looked at Mom like he was asking her if he had to be insulted in her house and Mom turned it off by showing Cousin Emmy Steve's ring. And here she hardly looked at it twice before she turned around and made for Tommy like she was going to kiss him but Tommy made out he didn't know what she meant as he never liked people to kiss him, even when he was a child, particularly Cousin Emmy who was one of the kissing kind. Mom would never forget the time she had tried to kiss Pop—the first and last time.

Then she got to asking questions about Hollywood and how was her old friend Jack Devere and how about Valeska Mourat and Tommy said Valeska Mourat was in love with herself; and Uncle Louie said, sure, that proved what he had said all the time, that she was no good and a hunk; and he looked at Pop and Pop couldn't say anything with Tommy going against him that way although Tommy didn't know he was favoring Uncle Louie, that was one sure thing.

Then Cousin Emmy kept pestering him so much and following him around asking questions about this and that, that finally Tommy excused himself and said he was going downtown. And when he went out he gave Mom a look as if to say:

Tommy got all dressed up in his tuxedo... Pop, out of the corner of his eye, seemed worried about the thin soles on those shiny shoes.

Am I going to have to put up with her all the time? But he had been real patient with her and Uncle Louie, too, and Mom was even surprised at how well he had stood it. Tommy seemed to have his mind on something else all day, in fact. Mom guessed it was the artist because one thing was sure, he wasn't thinking about Valeska Mourat and it wasn't Dorothy although there was nothing Mom could say against Dorothy since the time Tommy was hurt; she always smiled real sweet to Mom on the street when she saw her and looked very pretty and more like her mother every day.

Cousin Emmy came in before supper again and said it was just like the Prince of Wales or somebody had come to town the way everybody was crowding around Tommy downtown and asking him about this and that and wanting to shake hands with him. Mom was very proud and so was Pop although he didn't have time to say much all day as he was wrapped up in his new pipe and wondering how long it would take to color up to a nice brown. He acted just like it was a new toy and Christmas sure was a success to Pop. He really hadn't had much Christmas when he was a kid; his people were good and meant well and all that but they just didn't have much money. It was the same with Mom's—and now Christmas was great with something for everybody and she owed it to her children; and Mom thought there was nothing she could hope for nicer than this Christmas.

Tommy came back late for supper and hurried up and got all dressed up in his tuxedo with the standup collar and all and he was sure a sight to look at, so brave and handsome. Pop didn't say anything but she saw him looking from the corner of his eye, taking Tommy in from head to foot, particularly the thin soles on his low-cut shoes as Pop was always a great one for the boys keeping good soles on their shoes; but he didn't say anything; and Mom was glad Uncle Louie wasn't there to spoil it. Mom had often wondered how Tommy looked all dressed up in his best to go see the millionaire girls.

A big car came from Smithville to get him and he said he was going to a dance over there and for Mom not to wait up on him. He still seemed to have something on his mind and Mom thought it must be about a job. He had been away in the east for a month but hadn't said anything when he came back and Mom didn't like to ask him.

Mom was not one of those mothers who always thought her children were babies and should be treated that way—like old Grandmother Whitney, for one. Mom believed they all had to live their own lives and should not be bothered too much. She knew Pete and Steve would be wanting to get married anytime; and Mom wasn't going to give them any sermon about hard times and all that—when Mom and Pop had been married, times weren't so good either; all Pop had was a job and they even bought their furniture on tick. Young ones were that way and Mom was glad they were; sometimes she thought trouble was all in the head of old people because the young ones never saw it; maybe they stumped their toe and cried for a minute as if their little hearts would break—but let a dog come along wagging his tail and they'd soon forget. That was the big thing Mom hated about getting old—and if Tommy hadn't done another thing that Christmas but bring Pop that meerschaum pipe it would have been enough.

Direct PWA Building Program

With an initial fund of $200,000,000, the newly-formed Public Emergency Housing Corporation, under the guiding hands of Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, and Robert D. Kohn, director of housing division of PWA, will begin a double-barreled program of providing better and cheaper housing for the nation's unemployed. The program will affect 20 key cities in the nation where plans are under way to build new houses and homes, surrounded by playgrounds and parks, as an artist's conception of completed project. New York, Chicago, and Indianapolis are amongst first beneficiaries.
