LEGAL NOTICE TO BRIDGE CONTRACTORS

Notice is hereby given that sealed proposals for the construction of certain bridges on State Highways will be received by the Chairman of the State Highway Commission at his office in the State House Annex, Indianapolis, until 10:00 A. M. Central Standard Time, December 29, 1933, when all proposals will be publicly opened and read. These bridges are further described as follows:
The following "Public Works Administration projects" are to be constructed in accordance with the provisions of the "National Industrial Recovery Act" of June 16, 1933. Special provisions relative to "Selection of labor", "Wages, hours of employment and conditions of employment", and "Methods of performing work" are contained in each proposal and shall govern on this work.
The attention of bidders is directed to the special provisions covering submitting or assigning the contract and to the use of domestic materials.
Agreeable to that act, the minimum wage paid to all unskilled labor employed on this work shall be fifty (50) cents per hour. The minimum wage paid to all skilled labor employed on this work shall be one dollar and twenty ($1.20) cents per hour.
Adams County—P. W. A. project 346 on State Road 527; Structure 527-A-1507, 30' span approximately 0.2 mile southeast of Decatur; Structure 527-A-1508, 24' span approximately 0.7 mile southeast of Decatur; Structure 527-A-1509, 36' span approximately 1.3 miles southeast of Decatur; and Structure 527-A-1510, 60' span approximately 1.0 miles southeast of Pleasant Mills.
The plans and specifications may be examined at the office of the State Highway Commission, State House Annex, Indianapolis, or copies thereof will be forwarded upon payment to the Chairman of a nominal fee. No refund will be made for plans returned. Proposals must be made upon standard forms of the State Highway Commission, which will be supplied upon request.
Each bidder, with his proposal, shall file a corporate surety bond payable to the State of Indiana in the penal sum of at least one and one-half (1 1/2) times the amount of his proposal, with good and sufficient security to the approval of the Chairman. Such bond shall be only in the form prescribed by law and shall be executed on the form bound in the proposal.
For this bridge letting, each bidder shall file his "Experience Record and Financial Statement" prior to filing his proposal. Forms will be furnished upon request.
Further information regarding the work contemplated, the method of letting and price of plans, will be furnished upon request.
The right is reserved to reject any or all bids or to award on any stated combination of bids that is most advantageous to the State of Indiana.

SYNOPSIS

Pretty, young Patricia Warren unwillingly accepts the attentions of Bill McGee, a racketeer, fearing his wrath should she refuse. One night, Bill is shot by a rival gangster while with Patricia. Patricia runs home in terror. Her stepmother, fearing a scandal, puts her out. Patricia is forced to make her living by playing professional bridge. Impressed by the girl's beauty and skill, Julian Haverholt, the bridge expert, makes her his partner. She moves to his palatial home where he introduces her as his niece. Pat is indignant until Haverholt explains he was thinking of her reputation. Patricia is secretly in love with Clark Tracy, the polo player, but Clark is engaged to Marthe March, society girl. Pat first met Clark and his fiancée when she filled in at bridge (for fifty cents an hour) at wealthy Mrs. Sycott's home. Pat was living with her stepmother at the time. Meeting Pat again at Haverholt's, Clark does not recognize her. He breaks an appointment to teach Pat to drive her new car and goes on a trip with his fiancée's family. Noting her disappointment, Haverholt questions Pat, but she denies that she loves Clark. Pat concentrates on bridge to forget. Then comes the bridge tournament sponsored by Reuben Blair, Haverholt's bitter enemy. Clark is present. He is distressed by Patricia's coolness towards him. The contest is on. Haverholt and Pat play with machine-like precision and perfection, and win. Next morning, they are deluged with congratulatory telegrams and business offers.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"What are we going to do about these?" she asked, glancing at the telegrams.
"Waste baskets were invented for such stuff," replied Julian so promptly that the girl was disconcerted. In her mind she had been planning dignified little acknowledgments. "Just ignore the whole of it," he went on. "There was only one decent offer in the lot."
"I guess I didn't see that one."
"I separated it from the junk. Here it is," said Julian, rescuing the proper envelope and tapping it against his palm. "It's from Jarrett's, the big department store. They're planning a tournament for their customers. They want you to run it."
"Me!"
"Yes, you," he smiled. "I think you'd better accept. Six Friday afternoons, though you can probably duck out on a couple of them. They'll pay you for your trouble."
"How much?" demanded Patricia, expecting some vast sum.
"Twenty-five dollars an afternoon," Haverholt told her. "That means a hundred and fifty for the series. They'll give you tons of swell publicity, paid ads in all the newspapers, circulars mailed out to their customers, they'll give you an elegant send-off on your dizzy flight to fame."
"Then you think I had better accept?"
"I most certainly do."
"All right," said the girl obediently. "I will."
She bent her bright head over the remainder of the messages. She hardly admitted to herself that she was searching for some word from Clark. Apparently everyone in the world had sent congratulations, everyone except Clark. At the end of five minutes, Patricia folded the last sheet of yellow paper, thrust it into its envelope, looked up and said:
"Is this all?"
"Were you looking for something special, my dear?" The man was watching her closely.
"Why no," she informed him coolly. "I was just wondering."
"Maybe this is what you want," said Haverholt with equal coolness. Reaching into the pocket of his dressing gown he pulled out a crumpled sheet of paper, handed it

"Maybe this is what you want," said Haverholt, with equal coolness.
over. It was a telegram addressed to both of them.
Patricia spread the paper flat, read:
"Congratulations to two great bridge players. Hoping to see you both next week at Belmont, Clark."
The girl raised her eyes.
"Why didn't you show this to me?" she asked levelly.
"I did show it to you."
"Not until I asked."
"Perhaps," he shrugged, "I wanted to hear you ask."
Leaning his elbows upon the table, the man suddenly became intent and serious. There was now a certain inflexible quality about him, troubling and disturbing.
"If I were you, Patricia," he said deliberately, "I would put Clark Tracy out of my mind this minute."
The girl went scarlet.
"He isn't in my mind," she said quickly, defensively.
"You'll never in this world pull it off," he told her, ignoring the protest. "Clark Tracy is not for you and the sooner you acknowledge it the better. It's not because of Marthe either," he remarked and continued decisively, "You're pretty enough and clever enough to dispose of Marthe's claims in short order. After you'd laid your groundwork and got your campaign under way, Clark probably wouldn't remember there was a Marthe March. Don't bother getting high-minded," he said sharply, as Patricia, horrified, attempted to interrupt. "I've never yet met a woman who wasn't utterly unscrupulous where the prior rights of other women were concerned. I don't blame you for it. It's your nature, child."
The girl was furious.
"You don't know as much about women as you think you do," she said seething with anger.
"I've had years of experience, darling. Ah, those were the years!"
"Stop it, stop this minute," she stormed at him. "You may know women but you don't know me. I like Clark Tracy. Well, what if I do? I've met his fiancée; I like her too. I suppose I have a right to like them if I want to. You—you're trying to make something out of nothing. I'm sure I can't guess why you take the trouble."
Pushing back the telegrams she rose from the table and stalked toward the door, half expecting that Haverholt would call. He maintained a baffling silence. She hesitated at the threshold. Still he said

Encouraging Slap On Back Started Career

Fort Worth, Tex.—(U.P.)—A slap on the back and a few words of encouragement from a vaudeville trooper while Fred Lowery was a student in the Texas state school for blind ended in a stage career for the youth.
In 1923 when the trooper visited a friend at the school he heard Lowery whistling. "Keep it up, you've got something," he told the lad.

After the trooper had gone Lowery purchased a portable phonograph and practiced whistling for six years, until he was able to render difficult overtures to orchestral accompaniment. In 1929 he was graduated from the school. He went to Chicago and made the "Indian Love Call" for a nationally known recording company.
Radio and theater contracts followed. This winter he is appearing at a theater here.

Twelve Checks of unusual value

Of all the services that we are privileged to render, we can most heartily commend our One-Year Monthly Income plan.

After the death of the insured we deliver twelve checks, one every month for a year. A favorite amount is $100 monthly.

These ready dollars in that trying first year are beyond valuation. They furnish comfort and assurance; a chance to collect thoughts, revive courage and lay new plans.

The premium, paid once, twice or four times a year, runs about a nickel a day at age twenty, a dime in the early forties or a few cents more if you start later in life.

Larger amounts or longer periods can be arranged. A choice of policy forms is available. Premium referred to above is for "Endowment at Age 85."

Set up this safeguard for your home circle and they will never be caught unprepared. It will make an ideal supplement to your lump-sum insurance.
