The essay committee made the following announcement:
"The elementary schools, both public and parochial of this county submitted 132 essays for the Sugar Essay contest, while the high schools, public and parochial submitted 27.
"All papers were sent to county superintendent's office. The names of the contestants did not appear on the essay, but was written on a separate sheet of paper attached to the essay. Each essay was given a certain distinguishing mark and the sheet of paper bearing the name of the contestant was given a corresponding mark.
"The essays were then sent out to the various high school English teachers of the county for grading. No teacher knew whose papers he or she was grading. Teachers who graded the papers were asked to rank the papers first, second and third, etc.—first, second and third to be the prize winners.
"When the graded papers were returned, the author of each essay was easily determined by finding the corresponding code number given the essay and the separate sheet bearing the author's name.
"The committee has done everything in its power to conduct the contest in a fair manner."

"KNAVE'S GIRL"

By JOAN CLAYTON
COPYRIGHT 1932, KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

"I know all about your kind of love," she told him, attempting to seem scornful and remote.

His expression baffled yet undaunted, "If I can't have you, neither can Clark Tracy."

Haverholt was convinced. He walked once the length of the room. He came back and stood before her. Something in his face frightened her.

"I meant what I said about Clark," the man announced in low unemotional tones. "I warn you, I meant every word that I said."

"You can't hurt me with Clark," she informed him steadily. "I'm going to tell him the truth myself tomorrow. All that you've done is to force the issue. I hope," she ended bitterly, "I hope you're satisfied."

"It's too late for that now, Patricia," he remarked with a peculiar glance. He said, "I gave you a promise long ago. I take that promise back."

"What promise?"

"I told you once that I'd stand back of you. I won't now not with Clark. I won't lose you Patricia. I won't lose you. I tell you I won't."

His voice was loud. It rang in the quiet room. He whirled on her. He said all at once, "If you go to Clark with your story, I'll go to him with mine. I can assure you that our stories won't jibe. Mine will be a good deal less innocent than yours. We'll let young Galahad take his choice!"

"You won't, you can't!"

Even as she spoke a sense of the futility of her own words overcame the girl. She looked at Julian with loathing and contempt and knew that nothing she could do would stay his hand. No protest, no plea, no argument could swerve him from this set intention. He was as implacable, as immovable, as relentless, as some force in nature. She was caught, trapped in her own indecision. If she had told Clark long ago. . . . But, she had not.

"That's blackmail," she whispered.

"Call it what you like. It's what I'm going to do, Patricia. I don't enjoy this. I'm suffering too."

"If I can't have you," he declared,

If you are an average salaried employee and a small property owner, the above is a fair example of what your annual gross income tax return blank will look like when you fill it out in January to accompany your payment to the state gross income tax division at Indianapolis.

Every body and every business with receipts in excess of $666.67 during the eight months from May 1, 1933, to December 31, 1933, must file a return and pay a tax before January 30, 1934.

To help the small taxpayer make out his return and figure his tax, the gross income tax division has made out a sample return as shown above for an imaginary John J. Doe who works for an imaginary concern in Indianapolis.

Mr. Doe gets a salary of $150.00 a month. So on line 2 of the return he multiplies this salary by eight and inserts the total of $1,200. During the eight months, Mr. Doe traded in an old automobile on a new one and received an allowance of $75.00 on the old machine. This $75.00 was received not in cash but in value on the new car. Nevertheless it is taxable so Mr. Doe puts down $75.00 on line 4. Now Mr. Doe also owns a house which he has the good fortune to have rented to a regularly paying tenant at $40.00 a month. His income from the house is $40.00 multiplied by eight or $320.00 which he places on line 5. That concludes Mr. Doe's list of receipts. That is all the money or the equivalent that he took in during the eight months. So his total taxable receipts, as shown on line 7, were $1,595.

Under Line 8 Mr. Doe would have deducted such receipts as pensions from the United States government, if he had included them in the first line of the return. He did not need to report them at all and Line 8 could be used only if he had reported receipts that were not taxable and later wished to deduct them.

However, Mr. Doe, having no such receipts or not reporting such receipts, comes to line 9 with the total of $1,595 just like it was. He now takes his exemption of $1,000 a year but since the first annual report is only for eight months, no taxpayer can take more than two-thirds of the annual exemption or $666.67.

Subtracting the $666.67, Mr. Doe finds that he owes tax at one per cent on $928.33 which is in terms of tax $9.28.

Now if Mr. Doe had not made previous tax payments to the state, he would make out a check or buy a money order for $9.28 and send it with the return to the gross income division, keeping the duplicate return which is just like the one shown above. But in the case we are considering Mr. Doe paid the state $2.13 in July and $3.20 in October. So he makes this deduction, amounting to $5.33 and finds that he owes $3.95 in tax.

The last step is to have the return notarized.

Return blanks are available automobile license bureaus, churches and hundreds of other buying points throughout the state. Free information and in making out the returns obtained at the license bureaus a maximum of 10 cents are charged as notary fee. The branches also are able to the taxpayer by selling money orders to those who ask for them. The taxpayer, however, does need to use any of these and they are provided only for his convenience.

NOTICE — Will patch any leaks, including hot water, rubber hoses, over shoes and boots. Do not throw them away. They have a hole worn through the bottom as I can fix them at Sprague Furniture Store, Everett.
