

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS, BUSINESS CARDS, AND NOTICES

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—L. & H. electric range, practically new. Also an electric cooker. Lloyd Ehr, phone 386. 33a3tx

FOR SALE—Used Easy Washer in perfect cond. Cheap. Phone 244. Decatur Elec. Shop. 33a3tx

FOR SALE—23 good feeding shoats. C. P. Heckathorn, 2nd house south of Dent school. Decatur route 2. 33a3tx

FOR SALE—Gas Stove or will trade on coal oil stove. 321 N. 3rd. 33a3tx

FOR SALE—2 DeLaval cream separators, tractor and sulky plows, double disc, 12 hole grain drill, 2 farm wagons. Porter Supply company, 203 South First street. Phone 1289. 34-g3t

FOR SALE—Tires, Batteries, motor oil, piston rings, brake lining, auto accessories. Porter Tire Company, 341 Winchester street. Phone 1289. 34-g3t

FOR SALE—Crown organ 6 octave in good condition. Call Phone No. 20 Monroe. Otis Brandyberry. 32a3tx

WANTED

WANTED—To rent a small farm or house and barn with pasture near Decatur. Inquire Daily Democrat. 33a2tx

WANTED—To buy good used portable typewriter. Wm. J. Wells, phone 963. 33-g3t

WANTED—Million Dollar Prescription County Agent of Adams County. Those now selling in county may continue selling through me. Will deliver. Roy Deffenbaugh, Route 3, Geneva. 34-11x

WANTED—Roomer or roomer and boarder. Prices reasonable. Call 1171 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. 32k3t

Test Your Knowledge

Can you answer seven of these test questions? Turn to page Four for the answers.

1. Name the author of "The Lady of the Tiger".
2. Name the Governor of New York.
3. Who discovered the Strait of Magellan?
4. Of what country is New Delhi the capital?
5. Who was Giovanni Battista Donati?
6. Which is the largest national park in the U. S.?
7. Name the most famous violin maker of the Cremonese school.
8. How many units are in a baker's dozen?
9. Where is the University of Maine?
10. What position in the Cabinet does Henry A. Wallace hold?

Guaranteed RADIO SERVICE

We repair any make of radio, promptly and at a very reasonable cost. Tubes tested free. Phone 244. Decatur Elec. Shop

Roy S. Johnson Auctioneer

Now booking winter and spring sale dates. My dates are filling fast, claim your date early.

Feb. 10—Decatur Horse sale and Community sale. Sale barn, Decatur, Ind.

Feb. 14—L. E. McBride, 1 mile south, 3/4 mile west of Magley. Closing out sale.

Feb. 19—Graham & Parrish, 1 mi. north, 3/4 mi. east of Monroe. Chester White bred sow sale.

Feb. 20—Louis Keltner, 2 1/2 miles east of Cavett, Ohio. Closing out sale.

Feb. 21—George G. Sheets, first farm south of Erie railroad at Wren, Ohio.

March 1—Monroeville Chester White Breeders sale of bred sows, on the Bert Marquardt farm, 4 miles north of Monroeville, on the Lincoln Highway.

Office in Peoples Loan & Trust Bldg.

MARKET REPORTS BULLET IN HEART WOMAN LIVES

DAILY REPORT OF LOCAL AND FOREIGN MARKETS

BERNE MARKET
Corrected Feb. 8
No commission and no yardage
Veals received Tuesday Wednesday Friday and Saturday

|                 |        |
|-----------------|--------|
| 160 to 210 lbs. | $4.75 |
| 210 to 250 lbs. | $4.60 |
| 250 to 300 lbs. | $4.35 |
| 300 to 350 lbs. | $4.10 |
| 140 to 160 lbs. | $4.00 |
| 120 to 140 lbs. | $3.50 |
| 100 to 120 lbs. | $2.70 |
| Roughs          | $2.80 |
| Stags           | $1.80 |
| Vealers         | $7.75 |
| Lamos           | $9.00 |

Decatur Produce Company

|                   |     |
|-------------------|-----|
| Egg Market |     |
| No. 1 dozen       | 16c |
| No. 2 dozen       | 14c |
| No. 3 dozen       | 12c |

|                            |                                     |
|----------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| CHICAGO GRAIN CLOSE |                                     |
| Wheat                      | May 91 1/2 July 89 3/4 Sept. 90 3/4 |
| Corn                       | May 52 1/2 July 54 1/2 Sept. 55 1/2 |
| Oats                       | May 37 1/2 July 37 1/2 Sept. 36 1/2 |

EAST BUFFALO LIVESTOCK

East Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 8.—(U.P.)

Livestock:
Hogs, receipts, 1,500; active; weights below 240 lbs., 15 to 25c over Wednesday's average; heavier weights up 50c and more; bulk desirable, 150 to 240 lbs., $5.25; few 190 to 200-lb. selections $5.35; 250 to 280 lbs., $4.35 to $5.25; weights below 140 lbs., $3.25 to $4.75; packing sows, $3.25 to $3.60.

Cattle, receipts, 75; active; firm; good mixed yearlings, $6.25; low cutter and cutter cows, $2.35 to $3.

Calves, receipts, 75; vealers unchanged, $8.50 down.

Sheep, receipts, 100; 1 lamb steady; good to near choice, $9.75; choice quoted to $10; few shorn lambs downward from $8.50.

FORT WAYNE LIVESTOCK

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 8.—(U.P.)

Livestock:
Hogs, 5 to 20c higher; 160-200 lbs. $4.90; 200-250 lbs., $4.75; 250-300 lbs., $4.50; 300-350 lbs., $4.25; 150-160 lbs., $4.40; 140-150 lbs., $4.15; 130-140 lbs., $3.90; 120-130 lbs., $3.40; 100-120 lbs., $1.90; 130-140 lbs., $3.90; 120-130 lbs., $3.40; 100-120 lbs., $2.90; roughs, $3; stags, $2.

Calves, $8; western lambs, $9; native lambs, $8.50.

LOCAL GRAIN MARKET
Corrected Feb. 7

|                                   |         |
|-----------------------------------|---------|
| No. 1 New Wheat, 55 lbs or better | 82c     |
| No. 2 New Wheat 55 lbs.           | 81c     |
| Old Oats                          | 32c     |
| New Oats                          | 30c     |
| First Class Yellow Corn           | 58c     |
| Mixed corn 5c less                |         |
| Soy Beans                         | 50c-60c |

OHIO OFFICERS SEEK CUSTODY OF GANGSTERS

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)
the gang last fall, was captured in Chicago and Shouse was arrested recently at Paris, Ill.

Clark, Shouse, Maklye and Pierpont were among 10 convicts who escaped from the Indiana state prison Sept. 26, 1933.

SHERIFF'S SALE
In the Adams Circuit Court, State of Indiana, Cause Number 14,784
Abraham B. Biberstein vs Sarah X. Moser, John X. Moser.
By virtue of an order of sale to me directed and delivered from the Clerk of the Adams Circuit Court, in the above entitled cause, I have levied upon and will expose to sale by Public Auction at the Court House door, east entrance, first floor in said county, between the hours of 10-00 A. M. and 4-00 o'clock P. M. on Saturday, the 17th day of February A. D. 1934, the rents and profits for a term not exceeding seven years the following described real estate to-wit:

The West half of the East half of the Southwest quarter of Section one (1) in Township twenty-five (25) North of Range thirteen (13) East, containing forty (40) acres more or less, in Adams County, state of Indiana.

And on failure to realize therefrom the full amount of the judgment and interest thereon and costs, I will at the same time and in the manner aforesaid offer for sale the fee simple of the above described real estate.

Taken as the property of Sarah X. Moser, John X. Moser at the suit of Abraham B. Biberstein.

Said sale will be made without any relief whatever from valuation or appraisement laws.

Burl Johnson, Sheriff
Adams County, Indiana.
Lenhart, Heller & Schaefer, Attys.
Jan. 25 P. 13

See me for Federal Loans and abstracts of title.

French Quinn
Schirmeyer Abstract Company.

N. A. BIXLER
OPTOMETRIST
Eyes Examined, Glasses Fitted
HOURS:
8:30 to 11:30 12:30 to 5:00
Saturdays, 8:00 p. m.

Then nature intervened to save her life.

The curious character of the wound caused a hemorrhage in the lung, which isolated an air sac in the lower cavity. Pressure from the bottom of the lung shifted the wounded heart from its normal position on the left side of the body to the right, and forced the wound firmly against the cavity wall.

The pressure caused the heart to bleed very little, and with the wound thus closed, it began to heal, doctors said.

An examination revealed the peculiar fluid in the sac covering the heart — fluid that lubricates the vital organ. This proved that the bullet struck the heart, but did not enter the heart, cavity, attending physicians said.

Thirty Clint residents volunteered their blood for a transfusion when doctors drained the lung and shifted the heart back to its normal position. But Mrs. Sewell improved so rapidly that a transfusion was unnecessary.

Mrs. Sewell has two sons, Raymond and Joe, and a daughter, Anne Laura.

Turks Naturalize Greeks
Istanbul.—(U.P.)—All Greeks in Turkey plying the minor professions and trades, which have been reserved by law for natives, will be given an opportunity to become Turkish citizens. If they fail to take advantage of the offer, they will be forced to leave the country.

City of Silk
Lyons is the center of the silk industry of France and one of the great silk manufacturing cities of the world. In and around Lyons more than 100,000 silk looms are at work employing some 150,000 hands.

El Paso, Tex.—(U.P.)—Alive with a bullet wound in her heart, Mrs. Anne Sewell, Clint, ex., presents one of the strangest cases in El Paso medical history, attending physicians say.

Mrs. Sewell, wife of Howard Sewell, Clint farmer and gin manager, is recovering at Masonic hospital here.

She was shot Dec. 26, when her nephew accidentally discharged a .22 caliber rifle, a Christmas gift from the family. The bullet broke the membrane covering the heart, pierced the heart muscle, and entered the lung.

She escaped death by an eighth of an inch, her physician said.

Lovely Stanley Paige could have married any eligible man in her set — there was, for instance, the young lawyer, Perry Deverest, loyal and reliable; but she fell in love with dashing, irresponsible Drew Armitage. Drew told Dennis St. John, his former sweetheart, that although he would have loved Stanley under any circumstances, he would never have become engaged to her had she been poor.

Then comes the crash and Stanley's fortune is wiped out. She does not care as long as she has Drew's love, but... he says it would be madness to marry on his income. So with a dramatic "... Stanley, I shall never forget you and I shall always regret having hurt you but never having loved you!" he passes out of her life. Though broken-hearted, Stanley accepts the blow stoically. She refuses to accept charity from her friends, leaves her luxurious apartment and rents a cheap furnished room.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Stanley followed the woman up three flights of dusty, carpeted stairs. They smelled of disinfectant and a certain mustiness that comes of too little sunlight and fresh air. At the top of the last flight, Mrs. Foley paused for breath. "Next year, I'm giving up this place for one farther uptown. I'll have just one floor in an apartment house with elevator service. I can't stand these stairs the way I used to. Besides, I can't get much with so many better places going up all around me."

She unlocked the door of a small room at the end of the hall. It had sloping side walls, a dormer window, a studio bed, a painted bureau. The floor was painted a dull green and it had one colorless but clean rag rug. On a rod by the dresser, one cotton and one Turkish towel hung limply in the heat. The place was unbearably hot.

"There's no closet but you can hang your clothes behind that curtain. Most folks that has this room don't need a closet. The bathroom's the third door down the hall—please don't leave the light burning."

She waited silently while Stanley pulled off her gloves and her close little hat. Then she cleared her throat and said abruptly, but not unkindly, "I'll have to trouble you for the first week in advance, please—it's customary."

"I'm sorry," Stanley flushed swiftly. "I've never taken a room before—I didn't know."

"Oh, that's all right." For the first time the woman smiled. It was rather a bleak smile. One felt that it was not at home on her tight, lean lips. "I've had all kinds since I started here fifteen years ago—you're not the first young lady that's been with me. It's a strange world—and a hard one." She laid two keys on the dresser, turned and went back downstairs, making scarcely a sound on her worn, rubber heels.

Stanley pushed open the window and sat down on the bed. Her head was aching, her mouth was dry. She could no longer think. She thought so much in the last week, such a cruel, ever-recurring circle of thoughts, like a needle going around and around on a monotone.

"Whoever she is," Stanley thought, turning on the hot water, watching the thin stream trickle into the bottom of the narrow tub, "she's friendly and awfully pretty."

Her head ached with fatigue. She wondered if the tub would ever fill. If she would have energy enough to climb into it, if it did. If having climbed in, it would not be easier to lie quite still and let the water rise slowly but surely until it submerged her. She had read about a girl once, in a tabloid, a girl who had drowned herself in a bathtub. Then it had seemed a silly, stupid sort of a thing to do. Now it seemed so easy, so simple, so altogether possible.

The water reached the nickel outlet and began to gurgle out. Stanley reached down and turned it off. Stepped over the side of the tub and slid into the water's warm embrace. It touched the back of her neck, caressed her chin. She closed her eyes. Relaxed. The pain left her head. The whirling receded from before her eyes. Her body felt deliciously light and buoyant. She lifted one arm and felt the pull of the water against it. Turned over on her side and watched it trickle over her toes.

Stanley nodded, smiled politely. She wondered if this was the girl who had lived in the "swell dump on the Drive." She thought that quite likely she was—she was little and nicely put together and her hair was very blond and her eyes were very wise.

"What room have you got—the one at the end of the hall?"

"Yes."

"Well, you'll suffocate in that closet. I know, I lived in it last summer. You'd better drag your bed into my room if it stays so darned hot. I'm in luck—I've got two windows. They're not on the court, either. Sometimes, just for excitement, a breeze gets fresh and pops in on me." She gathered up her soap and toothbrush and a couple of damp towels. "You're in luck, too. I've left the tub clean and some hot water; that's more than some of the rest of 'em would have done." She grinned again, flung back her short golden hair and went past Stanley down the hall, leaving behind her an aroma of bath powder and violet soap.

"Whoever she is," Stanley thought, turning on the hot water, watching the thin stream trickle into the bottom of the narrow tub, "she's friendly and awfully pretty."

Her head ached with fatigue. She wondered if the tub would ever fill. If she would have energy enough to climb into it, if it did. If having climbed in, it would not be easier to lie quite still and let the water rise slowly but surely until it submerged her. She had read about a girl once, in a tabloid, a girl who had drowned herself in a bathtub. Then it had seemed a silly, stupid sort of a thing to do. Now it seemed so easy, so simple, so altogether possible.

The water reached the nickel outlet and began to gurgle out. Stanley reached down and turned it off. Stepped over the side of the tub and slid into the water's warm embrace. It touched the back of her neck, caressed her chin. She closed her eyes. Relaxed. The pain left her head. The whirling receded from before her eyes. Her body felt deliciously light and buoyant. She lifted one arm and felt the pull of the water against it. Turned over on her side and watched it trickle over her toes.

Stanley nodded, smiled politely. She wondered if this was the girl who had lived in the "swell dump on the Drive." She thought that quite likely she was—she was little and nicely put together and her hair was very blond and her eyes were very wise.

"What room have you got—the one at the end of the hall?"

Then nature intervened to save her life.

The curious character of the wound caused a hemorrhage in the lung, which isolated an air sac in the lower cavity. Pressure from the bottom of the lung shifted the wounded heart from its normal position on the left side of the body to the right, and forced the wound firmly against the cavity wall.

The pressure caused the heart to bleed very little, and with the wound thus closed, it began to heal, doctors said.

An examination revealed the peculiar fluid in the sac covering the heart — fluid that lubricates the vital organ. This proved that the bullet struck the heart, but did not enter the heart, cavity, attending physicians said.

Thirty Clint residents volunteered their blood for a transfusion when doctors drained the lung and shifted the heart back to its normal position. But Mrs. Sewell improved so rapidly that a transfusion was unnecessary.

Mrs. Sewell has two sons, Raymond and Joe, and a daughter, Anne Laura.

Turks Naturalize Greeks
Istanbul.—(U.P.)—All Greeks in Turkey plying the minor professions and trades, which have been reserved by law for natives, will be given an opportunity to become Turkish citizens. If they fail to take advantage of the offer, they will be forced to leave the country.

City of Silk
Lyons is the center of the silk industry of France and one of the great silk manufacturing cities of the world. In and around Lyons more than 100,000 silk looms are at work employing some 150,000 hands.

El Paso, Tex.—(U.P.)—Alive with a bullet wound in her heart, Mrs. Anne Sewell, Clint, ex., presents one of the strangest cases in El Paso medical history, attending physicians say.

Mrs. Sewell, wife of Howard Sewell, Clint farmer and gin manager, is recovering at Masonic hospital here.

She was shot Dec. 26, when her nephew accidentally discharged a .22 caliber rifle, a Christmas gift from the family. The bullet broke the membrane covering the heart, pierced the heart muscle, and entered the lung.

She escaped death by an eighth of an inch, her physician said.

Lovely Stanley Paige could have married any eligible man in her set — there was, for instance, the young lawyer, Perry Deverest, loyal and reliable; but she fell in love with dashing, irresponsible Drew Armitage. Drew told Dennis St. John, his former sweetheart, that although he would have loved Stanley under any circumstances, he would never have become engaged to her had she been poor.

Then comes the crash and Stanley's fortune is wiped out. She does not care as long as she has Drew's love, but... he says it would be madness to marry on his income. So with a dramatic "... Stanley, I shall never forget you and I shall always regret having hurt you but never having loved you!" he passes out of her life. Though broken-hearted, Stanley accepts the blow stoically. She refuses to accept charity from her friends, leaves her luxurious apartment and rents a cheap furnished room.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Stanley followed the woman up three flights of dusty, carpeted stairs. They smelled of disinfectant and a certain mustiness that comes of too little sunlight and fresh air. At the top of the last flight, Mrs. Foley paused for breath. "Next year, I'm giving up this place for one farther uptown. I'll have just one floor in an apartment house with elevator service. I can't stand these stairs the way I used to. Besides, I can't get much with so many better places going up all around me."

She unlocked the door of a small room at the end of the hall. It had sloping side walls, a dormer window, a studio bed, a painted bureau. The floor was painted a dull green and it had one colorless but clean rag rug. On a rod by the dresser, one cotton and one Turkish towel hung limply in the heat. The place was unbearably hot.

"There's no closet but you can hang your clothes behind that curtain. Most folks that has this room don't need a closet. The bathroom's the third door down the hall—please don't leave the light burning."

She waited silently while Stanley pulled off her gloves and her close little hat. Then she cleared her throat and said abruptly, but not unkindly, "I'll have to trouble you for the first week in advance, please—it's customary."

"I'm sorry," Stanley flushed swiftly. "I've never taken a room before—I didn't know."

"Oh, that's all right." For the first time the woman smiled. It was rather a bleak smile. One felt that it was not at home on her tight, lean lips. "I've had all kinds since I started here fifteen years ago—you're not the first young lady that's been with me. It's a strange world—and a hard one." She laid two keys on the dresser, turned and went back downstairs, making scarcely a sound on her worn, rubber heels.

Stanley pushed open the window and sat down on the bed. Her head was aching, her mouth was dry. She could no longer think. She thought so much in the last week, such a cruel, ever-recurring circle of thoughts, like a needle going around and around on a monotone.

"Whoever she is," Stanley thought, turning on the hot water, watching the thin stream trickle into the bottom of the narrow tub, "she's friendly and awfully pretty."

Her head ached with fatigue. She wondered if the tub would ever fill. If she would have energy enough to climb into it, if it did. If having climbed in, it would not be easier to lie quite still and let the water rise slowly but surely until it submerged her. She had read about a girl once, in a tabloid, a girl who had drowned herself in a bathtub. Then it had seemed a silly, stupid sort of a thing to do. Now it seemed so easy, so simple, so altogether possible.

The water reached the nickel outlet and began to gurgle out. Stanley reached down and turned it off. Stepped over the side of the tub and slid into the water's warm embrace. It touched the back of her neck, caressed her chin. She closed her eyes. Relaxed. The pain left her head. The whirling receded from before her eyes. Her body felt deliciously light and buoyant. She lifted one arm and felt the pull of the water against it. Turned over on her side and watched it trickle over her toes.

Stanley nodded, smiled politely. She wondered if this was the girl who had lived in the "swell dump on the Drive." She thought that quite likely she was—she was little and nicely put together and her hair was very blond and her eyes were very wise.

"What room have you got—the one at the end of the hall?"

"Yes."

"Well, you'll suffocate in that closet. I know, I lived in it last summer. You'd better drag your bed into my room if it stays so darned hot. I'm in luck—I've got two windows. They're not on the court, either. Sometimes, just for excitement, a breeze gets fresh and pops in on me." She gathered up her soap and toothbrush and a couple of damp towels. "You're in luck, too. I've left the tub clean and some hot water; that's more than some of the rest of 'em would have done." She grinned again, flung back her short golden hair and went past Stanley down the hall, leaving behind her an aroma of bath powder and violet soap.

"Whoever she is," Stanley thought, turning on the hot water, watching the thin stream trickle into the bottom of the narrow tub, "she's friendly and awfully pretty."

Her head ached with fatigue. She wondered if the tub would ever fill. If she would have energy enough to climb into it, if it did. If having climbed in, it would not be easier to lie quite still and let the water rise slowly but surely until it submerged her. She had read about a girl once, in a tabloid, a girl who had drowned herself in a bathtub. Then it had seemed a silly, stupid sort of a thing to do. Now it seemed so easy, so simple, so altogether possible.

The water reached the nickel outlet and began to gurgle out. Stanley reached down and turned it off. Stepped over the side of the tub and slid into the water's warm embrace. It touched the back of her neck, caressed her chin. She closed her eyes. Relaxed. The pain left her head. The whirling receded from before her eyes. Her body felt deliciously light and buoyant. She lifted one arm and felt the pull of the water against it. Turned over on her side and watched it trickle over her toes.

Stanley nodded, smiled politely. She wondered if this was the girl who had lived in the "swell dump on the Drive." She thought that quite likely she was—she was little and nicely put together and her hair was very blond and her eyes were very wise.

"What room have you got—the one at the end of the hall?"

Then nature intervened to save her life.

The curious character of the wound caused a hemorrhage in the lung, which isolated an air sac in the lower cavity. Pressure from the bottom of the lung shifted the wounded heart from its normal position on the left side of the body to the right, and forced the wound firmly against the cavity wall.

The pressure caused the heart to bleed very little, and with the wound thus closed, it began to heal, doctors said.

An examination revealed the peculiar fluid in the sac covering the heart — fluid that lubricates the vital organ. This proved that the bullet struck the heart, but did not enter the heart, cavity, attending physicians said.

Thirty Clint residents volunteered their blood for a transfusion when doctors drained the lung and shifted the heart back to its normal position. But Mrs. Sewell improved so rapidly that a transfusion was unnecessary.

Mrs. Sewell has two sons, Raymond and Joe, and a daughter, Anne Laura.

Turks Naturalize Greeks
Istanbul.—(U.P.)—All Greeks in Turkey plying the minor professions and trades, which have been reserved by law for natives, will be given an opportunity to become Turkish citizens. If they fail to take advantage of the offer, they will be forced to leave the country.

City of Silk
Lyons is the center of the silk industry of France and one of the great silk manufacturing cities of the world. In and around Lyons more than 100,000 silk looms are at work employing some 150,000 hands.

El Paso, Tex.—(U.P.)—Alive with a bullet wound in her heart, Mrs. Anne Sewell, Clint, ex., presents one of the strangest cases in El Paso medical history, attending physicians say.

Mrs. Sewell, wife of Howard Sewell, Clint farmer and gin manager, is recovering at Masonic hospital here.

She was shot Dec. 26, when her nephew accidentally discharged a .22 caliber rifle, a Christmas gift from the family. The bullet broke the membrane covering the heart, pierced the heart muscle, and entered the lung.

She escaped death by an eighth of an inch, her physician said.

Lovely Stanley