

When Sandino "Plagued" U. S. Marines

It is a grim irony of fate that General Augustino Sandino, celebrated Nicaraguan rebel and patriot, should come to death by his own fellow-countrymen, members of the Nicaraguan National Guard, although he had conducted a successful guerilla warfare against the United States Marines for more than 5 years. The Leatherback had chased Sandino through hundreds of miles of jungle. Many times they believed they had him in a trap. He always got away. The long hunt cost the Marines 130 lives and the United States millions of dollars. The last Marine was withdrawn from Nicaragua in 1933, Sandino made his peace with President Sacasa. He then had engaged, with 100 of his followers, in a co-operative farming venture, receiving $1,000 a month subsidy from the government.

In Fall Senatorial Battles

In the announcement of Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania that he plans to oppose Senator David A. Reed for the U. S. Senate in the Fall elections, "because Pennsylvania deserves a Republican Senator who will work with the President to restore prosperity instead of snarling and snapping at his heels," observers see an issue that may be used by many solons seeking re-election next November. It is virtually certain that Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, both Progressive Republicans, will have White House support, but it is also expected that many other G. O. P. solons will submerge party lines and go to the polls on the "Roosevelt or Ruin" platform.

"The Play's the Thing" With Uncle Sam

With a plan before President Roosevelt calling for the establishment of a National Theater Organization on a loan of $1,000,000 from Federal funds, to subsidize the commercial theater, the first steps have been taken, it is believed, toward a national art theater under the sponsorship of Uncle Sam. Above are shown individuals who are likely to figure in the program. Mrs. Roosevelt is suggested as chairman of the advisory committee to guide the destinies of the organization, and the names of Mrs. Charles Sabin, Otto Kahn, Nicholas Murray Butler, and a host of drama patrons are linked with the plan. Arthur Hopkins and Eddie Dowling are likely to figure in the production end of the organization.

You Ought To Know the Browns

MAYBE you don't know the Browns. They're a little family of four. There's Bill Brown, who sells life insurance, and Betty Brown—who was a Jones before she married Bill. And there are the two Brown children: Bill, Jr., and Griselda.

Like a thousand other families, the Browns are just starting to lift themselves out of the count-every-penny circumstances which the past few years imposed on them. But they have one advantage.

Betty Brown studied economics during that time. She didn't enroll at the University. She didn't take a special home-course by mail. She learned a great deal about buying from her daily newspaper.

She followed the advertisements. She compared price and quality, and struck a practical balance between the two. Today she knows how to buy so that Bill's bank account can begin to grow again. And she hasn't got pinch-nosed by doing it. In fact, one of the Browns' greatest delights is planning the weekly shopping tour. They virtually make a game of it, and always a profitable game.

You ought to know the Browns. They haven't the money they once had. But it won't be long before they do. And in the meantime, they're living well!
