Find 'Father of Oregon's' Naturalization Papers

Oregon City, Ore. —(UP)—Naturalization papers of Dr. John McLaughlin, "Father of Oregon," were discovered in vaults of the county recorder's office here.

Dr. McLaughlin, factor of the British Hudson Bay Fur Company, befriended American settlers in Oregon in early days. When the fur post was discontinued, after Oregon was ceded to the United States, Dr. McLaughlin remained and took a farm.

The naturalization papers were issued by the second district court of Oregon Territory, Sept. 5, 1851.

Men's Neckties Reflect Economic Trend, He Says

CINCINNATI (UP)—Neckties reflect the economic trend, in the opinion of Harry D. Liebschutz, president of the Men's Apparel Club of Ohio, Inc., which recently held its annual convention here. Liebschutz said that "when the outlook is pessimistic, conservative and staple patterns, with duller shades, are in demand. An optimistic outlook brings the call for more pattern and brighter tones," he pointed out. He added that "the outlook this season is unusually encouraging and the call for happy style effects has increased."

Hollywood Diet Gets Blame For Breakdowns

Ithaca, N. Y. —(UP)—The much publicized "Hollywood Diet" was responsible for many nervous breakdowns among women who wanted to reduce, according to Mrs. Ruth Bennett White of the New York State College of Home Economics.

The best diet for any purpose, she said, is the standard diet, modified in quantity for the thin person who wants to gain, for the fat person who wants to lose, or for the sick person who wants to get well.

Any diet should not reduce calories to less than 1,400 a day, she said. The Hollywood diet, she pointed out, provided for as little as 500 to 800 calories a day.

A good interest is being shown in the meetings and the power and glory of God has already been made manifest. Special music each evening. Sunrise prayer service Easter morning and breakfast for all who attend. The public is invited to all services.

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Michael Lanyard — formerly known as the "Lone Wolf," an underworld celebrity, but now a respected antique dealer—sails for America on the S.S. "Navarre." Aboard ship, he meets Detective Crane of New York, who hunted the "Lone Wolf" years ago. They talk of Lanyard's reformation preceding his marriage, and the tragic death of his wife and children while he was at war. Later, Lanyard sees a young man dart into the passageway leading to his (Michael's) cabin. He is startled and perplexed by the youth's resemblance to himself. Mrs. Fay Crozier, one of Lanyard's wealthy patrons, are also on board. Despite Mrs. Crozier's denial that she had been negotiating for the Habsburg emeralds, Lanyard believes he has hit upon a guilty secret. He sees Crane hovering near and wonders why, because the detective claims he is no longer in government service. Fenno calls Lanyard's attention to "the handsome young man staring at him." It is the youth Lanyard is puzzled about; his name is Maurice Parry. Checking over the passenger list, Lanyard tells the Customs people on passengers who bragged that they meant to smuggle.

"Well!" Fay Crozier said, with a shameless little laugh. "I couldn't tell who was listening, could I? Table stewards have been known to tell the Customs people on passengers who bragged that they meant to smuggle."

"Surely you are not thinking of trying to avoid paying the duty?" "I don't know why not. Everybody does it. And I'm sure I've figured out a way they'll never suspect. I hope I don't check you?" "One's private morals are a matter of one's conscience. Neither do I think so well of myself as ever to set up for a censor. It is rather the folly I would deplore, madame, of imagining that jewels so celebrated could be sold and the transaction kept secret."

"You can't have much opinion of my intelligence if you think I wasn't smart enough to buy through a third party," Fay Crozier said with a toss of her snowy head put the debatable by and, her sunny self once more, jumped up, scurried into the adjoining room, and returned to hand over, with conscious pride, a shagreen-covered case. "You said you'd be glad to see them again."

Lanyard lifted the lid, and for a long minute sat silent, his puckered gaze constant to the seven great stones bedded in white satin, then pinched one out, held it to the light, and replaced it.

"May I ask, madame," he said in a reluctant voice, "if you are quite sure of the good faith of your go-between?"

"What are you driving at?" "Rumbold's, of course, is above suspicion."

"Are you trying to tell me those aren't the Habsburg emeralds?" "I am sorry, madame—they are not even plebeian emeralds."

"I am sorry, madame—they are not even plebeian emeralds."

"With a low cry the woman pounced upon the case."

"What are they, then?" "Zircon, madame, cunningly cut and stained to counterfeit the real jewels. You may not know how clever the Germans have grown at that sort of thing of late years, how they have learned to process

CHAPTER V

"I am sure madame didn't send for me to trade risqué fables and current stock quotations. Neither was it for the sake of my beaux yeux."

"What do you think, then?" "That madame is too sensible to do me the injustice of asking me to guess."

"True—you're too clever. Madame made a brief stay on this, then a rueful mouth. "So you didn't believe me?" she inquired.

"That you hadn't been able to afford Rumbold's price? Oh, madame!"

"Well!" Fay Crozier said, with a shameless little laugh. "I couldn't tell who was listening, could I? Table stewards have been known to tell the Customs people on passengers who bragged that they meant to smuggle."

"Surely you are not thinking of trying to avoid paying the duty?" "I don't know why not. Everybody does it. And I'm sure I've figured out a way they'll never suspect. I hope I don't check you?"

such soft semi-precious stones by sealing them in retorts with certain chemicals which, when subjected to great heat, release gases that dye the stones almost, if not quite, indelibly. These, for example, will fade if often exposed to sunlight. Exquisite forgeries, I grant you, but—

"I quite see that," Fay Crozier huskily replied; and suddenly casting the case from her, sat down heavily and disclosed haggard eyes. "What am I going to do about this?"

"First rid your mind of all bias in favor of the several parties involved in the transaction. Then review it step by step."

"It would only be time wasted. I tell you, they were the genuine stones that I bought—that were brought to me straight from Rumbold's by the person who made the actual purchase. I guess I ought to know; I stared them out of countenance time and again in Rumbold's."

"The Lone Wolf at his best was not more than human, madame. He accomplished nothing beyond the range of mortal ingenuity and perseverance. He was neither the first nor the last to master the mystery of safe-locks by means of patience and an educated sense of touch. Obviously the fellow knew the trick who substituted these pretenders for the imperial Habsburg emeralds tonight. When did you place them in your trunk, madame?"

"When I came below to dress."

"And only took them out again when you brought them in just now to show me? It seems to me the crime is plainly dated."

"But what shall I do? Inform the Captain?"

"Give me time to think—but half a minute." Lanyard took a bright but calculating look take in the easy proportions of the sitting-room. Its tasteful furnishing and decoration. "One notices scarcely any notion worth mentioning here," he remarked.

"We must be about amidst-ships."

"We are."

"And you went down to dinner early?"

Fay Crozier nodded.

"Did you observe anyone in the passageway or on the landing who seemed to be paying you special attention?"

"Why, there were so many people about at the time—"

"I am glad," Lanyard said after another reflective wait. "It occurred to you so soon to satisfy my curiosity. I have a theory. . . . I may be wrong, but I do believe, if you will give me, say till noon day after tomorrow—and lend me these zircon emeralds—I do believe I can restore the emeralds to you."

"I'm sure you can, if anybody. You are simply the kindest creature."

"I promise merely to do my best—and that only on condition that you promise me to hand the emeralds over to the purser for safe-keeping."

"But won't that mean I'll have to pay the duty?"

"Precisely, madame. Figure to yourself that, since this theft proves you were known to have been the actual purchaser, the same information must have been open to informers in the pay of the American Customs."

"Oh, have it your way," the woman cried with a tragic gesture. "I daresay you're right. I'll be good and pay up, like a little patriot."

"Oh, you perhaps, with your Lone Wolf training—"

Kaiser Remembered Guard

Riley, Kan. —(UP)—Henry Swart, farmer near here who served as Kaiser Wilhelm's bodyguard 30 years ago, recently received a picture card from the emperor. "My thanks for faithful memories," a message on the card read.

The Auction Method Properly Conducted Will Absolutely Successfully Sell Your Real Estate.

Auction terms defined according to Webster means, A public sale of property to the highest bidder.

A prospective buyer may become interested in a certain piece of real estate and yet will not act until he discovers that others are interested in the same thing. Then the owner gets the benefit of friendly competition.

Above all else a genuine Auction is fascinating; there is a about such a sale which does not exist in any other form of sale. It is evidence of the fact that the owner has implicit confidence in people as well as confidence in the property he is selling.

Auction principles harmonize with modern times. Probable greatest reason the auction business has had such a marvelous development in the past few years is because the environment has been suitable to its growth. Progressive and efficient methods in lines have made it necessary for a better and a quicker mode of sale. The slow and tardy private sale method is not able to present-day requirements.

Some real estate has been on the market for years without sold. Think of the time, worry, effort and money lost. Time is too precious
