Sub-Committee Favors
Stock Market Measure

Washington, April 18.—(UP)—The House interstate commerce subcommittee revising the Rayburn stock market control bill today voted to report the proposal favorably to the full committee. The senate banking committee earlier received from its subcommittee a new draft of the bill. Rep. Sam Rayburn, D. Tex., chairman of the full committee and sponsor of the bill, said his group would begin study of the proposal tomorrow. He hoped that the full committee would be able to complete consideration of the bill before the end of the week.

"Hidden Children" Will Boost Turkish Population

Istanbul.—(UP)—Polygamy has been forbidden by law in Turkey since 1923. But numbers of clandestine polygamous unions have taken place since then.

Parents of the unregistered offspring of these illegal unions now are being asked to declare their "hidden children" so that they may be made rightful citizens of the republic.

Tens of thousands of these "illegitimate" children are being registered in every province, the parents being pardoned under the amnesty law of last year.

It is expected the population of the country will rise from 14 million to 18 million as a result of the addition of these and other unregistered persons.

It is noteworthy, however, that only the children of the illegal unions are being recognized. The post-1926 polygamous parents are not allowed to have their unions registered as marriages.

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON"
by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XXV

"As my memory serves,—and as a rule it serves me well,—the ring was still on the table when I was called out of the room just now."

"Isquith nodded. "That is for you to tell me, I think." Lanyard didn't trouble to disguise the pleasure it gave him to believe that a shaft loosed at random had lodged close to the quick.

"I only know that attempts have been made to rob their owner en voyage; that it has been proposed to me that I steal them on shares, once they have been passed through the American Customs,—which would seem to indicate a sure market in sight for stones that normally would be difficult to dispose of, but unmistakably are worth a rajah's ransom and would add lustre even to the Crown of Ladore. And I now

"Adding impertinence to bravado, eh? And giving us to wonder what you think to profit by either."

"Not impertinence, monsieur, believe me, nor yet bravado—simply two different expressions of fatigue. In fine, this nonsense wears me."

"You'll be bone-tired of it, I'll wager, before you're finished with it."

"Rubbish!" And Lanyard lounged deeper in his chair, contemplating his company in bored impatience: "What do you take me for? A child, to be frightened by funny noises in the night? Perhaps but one of you three knows who did pouch that ruby, but every one of you knows it wasn't I. Am I to sit here, then, and pretend to be appalled because it's your transparent scheme to make a scapegoat of me? But it is you who are children if you imagine I shall permit you to do so."

"As to that, my friend, we shall see."

"At last, one point on which we agree."

"Do I understand, monsieur"—the Rajah, indignation painting his face with dusky pallor, took over the attack—"you have the insolence to imply that the other guests of mine and I are conspiring to accuse you falsely?"

"What else can I mean, when I say every last one of you knows I didn't steal that ring?"

"Do you dare to insinuate that I—"

But this Lanyard drowned down with a voice of as much authority, and more volume: "If the status of a petty Indian prince clothes a man with all the virtues, this is the first one has heard of. Furthermore, Your Highness, it but ill becomes a paragon to keep the company you do."

"Have a care, monsieur!" The Rajah was on his feet again, all tense and trembling. "With this lady present—"

"Be advised, Your Highness: let the lady speak for herself. She's quite able to. If it comes to that," Lanyard pursued with a smiling presence, "Madame Boyce at least on the make—marries for money as often as the law allows, and doesn't bluff about it. Of Mr. Isquith here I know nothing more than that he doesn't ring true. The gesture of a gentleman isn't something one can turn on and off like electric light."

He should know that. As for yourself, I confess I don't know your kind well enough to tell the Rajah of Ladore from an impostor. I dare say you're genuine enough, but—Lanyard went into a drawl of wicked intelligence—"I do suspect

BEHIND THE SCENES
in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL.
Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. —Film-land had thought everything serene between Joel McCrea and his studio bosses, but secrets have a way of leaking out.

The young star wants to be released from his contract — and it's a contract that brings him in better than $50,000 a year.

The money part doesn't enter into Joel's objections. What he complains about are the roles that have been handed to him of late.

The star liked his part with Dolores Del Rio in "The Bird of Paradise."

Since then, he says, there isn't a one he can point to without making some kind of excuse about it.

Legally, of course, RKO can hold Joel to his bargain. It's a question for mediation. Or maybe the whole trouble can be ironed out by one satisfactory picture.

Unwittingly, the Filipino houseboy at the Writer's Club put a certain Hollywood author through a very bad moment the other evening.

The scribe took his wife out to dinner at the club.

"Good evening, sir," beamed the houseboy. "This lady is your sister, yes?"

As the red started to rise to the writer's ears, his wife snapped: "Oh no, those other ladies he brought were his sisters."

Mary Brian and W. C. Fields are neighbors, living on opposite sides of the narrow end of Toluca Lake. The other day Mary's brother, Terry Dangler, returned from the Orient with his dance orchestra. For want of a better place, he carried the boys out to Mary's house to rehearse.

The noise, booming across the lake, soon got on Fields' nerves. After standing it for awhile, he rushed into the house and emerged with a large African tom-tom from his collection of curios.

Standing at the edge of the water, the comedian commenced to beat the drum furiously. The awful discord went on until the orchestra gave up.

and son Carlton were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bloomer Sunday, then all visited grandma Worthman at Decatur Sunday afternoon.

Miss Doris Johnson of Peterson spent the week-end with Misses Marie and Helen Hildebrand.

Mr. and Mrs. George Manns of Fort Wayne and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bloomer visited Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Hower of Bluffton Monday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Manns will visit in Magley a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kolter attended the "Billy Sunday" services at the Gospel Temple in Fort Wayne Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Gettys Farmer and daughter Mabel, and Mrs. Ves Venis of Decatur were callers in Magley Monday evening.

Living up to her reputation for eccentricity, Jean Muir has moved into a large house, but is living in one room; the only one furnished so far. Meanwhile, the star's household belongings in Ridgewood, New Jersey, will be shipped to her. Jean's mother, who was visiting Hollywood, is now back in New York, and the youthful star will live alone.

Hollywood can take a lesson in showmanship from a leather-lunged newsboy who cries his wares on a principal downtown corner. Sometimes, the chap appears in a top hat, again in a violently colored jacket. Or he may dab his lips and cheeks with rouge.

Victor McLaglen's "Garden of Memories" now has a rival. Every guest who comes to David Manners' desert house is invited to contribute two trees to plant around the tennis court. The trees, Arizona cypress, cost only 75 cents apiece, but, in a short while, will form an effective wind-break. David is attaching metal tags to give the names of the donors. To date, these include Clark Gable, Phil Holmes, the Jesse Lasky's, Dorothy Arzner, Kenneth Thompson and Beulah Bondi.

Badminton fans (and the film colony is full of them) are giving a great rush to "Jesse" Willard, ace player of this fast game. Among the things the Hollywoodites never suspected before is that the feathers for the shuttle-cocks come from German geese. And it takes a whole goose for each shuttle-cock.

Latest fad for millady's nails is a crust of tiny mirrors, cut in irregular shapes, and reflecting lights from every direction. They are stuck on with collodion. Fritz Ridgeway introduced the idea and has a patent pending.

DID YOU KNOW—
That Joan Crawford has named each of her 27 dogs after one of her starring pictures?
