Tavern Owners Find Too Many In Business

Milwaukee, Wis. —(UP)—Milwaukee, the city made famous by beer, has too many taverns, their owners have discovered.

With about 2,500 taverns, operating in the city, none of them have made money during the past year, Edward A. Smukowski, president of the Tavern Keepers' Association, reported. Nearly 800 will go out of business at the end of July when their licenses expire, he said.

Beer wars, raging in several sections of the city, have added to the

Crisp and Gay for Summer

By ELLEN WORTH

NO MATTER how trim and tailored the mode during the clear, cool days, as soon as the mercury begins to soar Paris decries fragile femininity and breezy sheerness. You must look cool whether or not you feel that way!

Soft capes, gay bows, skirts that cling subtly to the knees before rippling into flattering fullness are star performers in the summer fashion scene. A dress that boasts all of these stellar qualities is this vivacious sheer model with smartly fitted waistline and mobile bias cut through the hips. The V-yoke of the skirt is calculated to make a slim girl shimmer and cause a miraculous disappearance of superfluous pounds for her who is not so svelte.

"Whattaman" Shires Pays Rogers Hornsby Tribute

Fort Worth, Tex. —(UP)—The smartest manager in the major leagues is Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns, believes Arthur (Whattaman) Shires, now first basing for the Fort Worth Texas League club.

"That includes Connie Mack and all the rest," Shires said. "If Hornsby ever gets his Browns to talking and dreaming baseball as he does, they'll be a great club."

Buff Opington Hen Now Crows Like Rooster

El Paso, Tex. —(UP)—A large Buff Opington hen that laid eggs regularly for two years, then stopped and began to crow like a rooster is owned by Dewey Muth, 12, of El Paso.

Dewey said the hen now is three years old.

The fowl has developed a double comb and other characteristics of a rooster.

Promptly at 4 a. m. and 4 p. m. the hen jumps on the fence and crows lustily.

Robins Bitter Enemy Of Ohio Fruit Grower

Dumontville, O. —(UP)—Cherry robins, believed by most ornithologists to be man's friends, are the bitter enemies of D. L. Swarts, who believes he has the only federal permit to kill them.

Swarts' home is a bird haven. Doves, starlings, wrens and cardinals flock there. But robins—that's different.

"The robin is one of the fruit growers' most destructive pests,

One day I counted 50 robins at my place and every one was averaging a berry every five seconds," Swarts said.

"I get mad at them, but I can't shoot them until the fruit begins to ripen. Then I'm going to protect my property."

Swarts, who said robins cost him several hundred dollars' loss every year, applied this spring for a permit to kill the birds. The government granted it and the State Conservation Department approved.

German Air Officials Pleased With U.S. Planes

Chicago —(UP)—Officials of Germany's Luft Hansa air line expressed satisfaction with the performance of their first high speed, multi-motored United States made airplanes, according to R. L. Doble, United Air Lines pilot, who is acquainting German pilots with the operation of the three-mile-a-minute multi-motored Boeings, similar to those used by United Air Lines on its coast-to-coast route.

On one flight, eight Luft Hansa officials were taken from Travenmunde to Berlin, 180 miles, in 60 minutes.

ICE COLD LAKE HOLDS FORTUNE IN GOLD

TONOPAH, Nev. (UP)—Unusual recovery of gold ore from mine tailings at the bottom of May Lundy Lake in Mono County, Cal., is contemplated by local men.

C. L. Cooper and O. H. Kirkwood reported that to get to the tailings — from which they expected to extract $5 a ton in gold — they will have to dredge the ore from the ice-cold waters from a depth of 20 feet. There are 165,000 tons of tailings in the lake, it was estimated.

The May Lundy mine, from which the tailings were extracted, has not been worked since 1912. The mine buildings cling precariously to the face of a precipitous mountain.

The opinion was asked by L. I. Klenker, superintendent of the Garrett municipal water plant. He asked whether a 10 per cent cut given his employees under the act could be restored without legislative authority.
