If Huey Long lasts much longer in Louisiana, it will be too long for the state is certainly not progressing under the present civil war.

Remember—you can't have an endless chain of business without the principal ingredient—advertising.

Poor relief is becoming such a serious problem that one of these days it will be impossible to meet. We are very much in favor of the program now being considered to provide permanent employment.

Labor can tie up the entire country. Of that there is no dispute, but what will be the good? If capital or labor refuses to cooperate, of course the rebuilding of prosperity will be slow and uncertain.

The fish mouth spreader invented by Mr. Kirsch of this city is no doubt a wonderful thing for those who can catch the finny fellows but an invention that would help us to get the fish would really be more necessary to most of us amateur Waltonians.

It's queer how those who are provided with work during days like these can be induced by some fellow who really doesn't care about them, to walk out on a strike. With winter just ahead it behooves every man with a job to hang on to it as long as he can.

Tax rates in Adams county will compare most favorably with those in any of the ninety-two counties, and that also with very reasonable valuations. This is because of the excellent work of the officials and the friendly advice and assistance of every good citizen.

The beet crop looks fairly good and the harvest will soon be on. Plans for the mill campaign are complete or nearly so and there will be an activity in that part of town starting early next month and continuing until Christmas that will help every one in many ways.

Col. Roy Johnson, local auctioneer, had charge of the sale of 4-H calves at the Indiana State fair and set up a record for the week, the veal selling at an average of about 10¢ cents per pound. It was also the liveliest sale of the week and the colonel received much well deserved praise.

The campaign should start now any time, in fact in a number of counties the first meetings have been held and plans are under way all over the state. It will be a short but snappy presentation of facts to the voters, every one having the opportunity to learn what they want to know of the men and their position on various problems.

County Agent Archbold has some plans that sound reasonable for a stock show in this county next year and will no doubt tell us about

GOLD AND SILVER MONEY

Following the devaluation of the dollar and nationalization of gold, and prohibition of the use of gold in circulation as money, has come the nationalization of silver and the silver purchase program of the government. What do these things mean to you? What do you know about gold and silver money? Our Washington Bureau has ready for you an up-to-the-minute bulletin on the History of Gold and Silver Money—its use throughout modern times as money, and particularly the history of coinage and the use of gold and silver as backing for paper money in the United States from colonial times. All the recent Acts of Congress affecting money and the Treasury regulations for carrying them out are included in this bulletin. If you want to have a condensed and full explanation of the whole question of gold and silver money, fill out the coupon below and send for this bulletin:

REGIONAL AAA MEETING HELD

Methods Of Developing Practical Corn Crop Program Discussed

Indianapolis, Sept. 10. — (U.P.) — Methods of developing a practical corn control program for 1935 and plans for a referendum on the corn-hog plan were principal topics for discussion at a regional conference of the agricultural adjustment administration here today.

Government representatives of the AAA in Indiana, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan and Tennessee attended the session, the first of a series to be held throughout the nation. The second meeting will be held in Kansas City, Sept. 12-13.

In a statement from Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, read at the meeting, an appeal was made to corn-hog contract holders to vote in the referendum to be held within the next few weeks.

Wallace said it was his opinion "that farmers will welcome an opportunity to vote on a program designed to prevent over-production of cheap grain a year from now which would result in livestock losses in 1936 and 1937."

A similar appeal to farmers "to take stock and decide their course for next year" by voting in the corn-hog referendum was made in a statement from Chester C. Davis, administrator of the AAA read at the meeting.

"The questions to be decided by the farmers are: First, do they favor adjustment programs dealing with corn and hogs in 1935, and second, do they believe that an adjustment program for corn planted in 1935 is sufficient to prevent excess hog production" the statement asked.

"They also may want to look ahead to 1936 and ask themselves whether they want a one-contract adjustment program dealing with grains to follow 1935 adjustment plans."

"Through the farmers' own county production control associations we expect to learn definitely what the corn-hog growers want to do in 1935. A referendum will reveal the farmers' own decision as to their future course."

Civic Center Is Beauty Spot in TVA Village.

An attractive feature of the community of Norris, Tenn., a community born with the inauguration of the Tennessee Valley Authority, and peopled by TVA employees, is the new civic center, grouped around three sides of a tree-lined square and opening into the town common. The construction of these buildings is well underway, and within a few weeks Norris will have a new school, a hotel and hospital, stores, shops, markets and everything that contributes to comfortable living in a modern community of workers. A modified type of southern colonial architecture is being used.

WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?

Parrot Tulips for Brilliancy

Parrot tulips are old-fashioned tulips that always attract attention by the brilliancy of their coloring, their huge size, and the peculiar manner in which their long petals are fringed and slashed. Their origin is uncertain and there are only a few varieties and only rarely does this peculiar type arise among newer tulips. They are a late tulip and bloom last of all the late classes. The colors are chiefly red and yellow in varying mixture, with occasional splashes of green.

A new break in this class and the first parrot tulip to show a real departure in the usual coloring of the class is Fantasy, which came as a sport from the pink tulip Clara Butt, having the same pink coloring as its parent, but with the unusual fringed petals. It also has a strong straight stem, which most of the parrots do not have, the blooms drooping and sprawling in informal grace. This tulip has petals three inches long, with green markings on the outside on the pink ground. It is a most remarkable new tulip.

There are no more showy tulips than the parrots. They are best planted in small groups where their informal grace is best displayed. In larger planting the irregularity of their growth becomes too manifest and detracts from the individual beauty of the flowers.

The tulip species, those found in the wild which have not been hybridized as have the garden tulips, are now claiming deserved attention from the beauty of their colors and the graceful manner of their growth. They are not all of the easiest growth and some are best suited to rock garden conditions. The Lady or Candy Stick tulip is one of the best known of these—Tulipa Clusiana, white with a rose-red stripe down the outside of each petal. It requires unusually deep planting to succeed. Eichleri, a huge scarlet tulip from Turkey, tan. is one of the showiest. It is also easy to grow.

One of the handsomest of the species and worthy of wide planting is the water lily tulip, Tulipa Kauffmanniana, one of the very first to bloom, coming in April and opening wide on short stems close to the ground in white and cream coloring and resembling a miniature water lily. A bed of these tulips is one of the finest of early garden effects. The bulb should be planted six inches deep and they will be permanent guests in the garden. The creamy flowers have rosy markings on the outside of the petals.

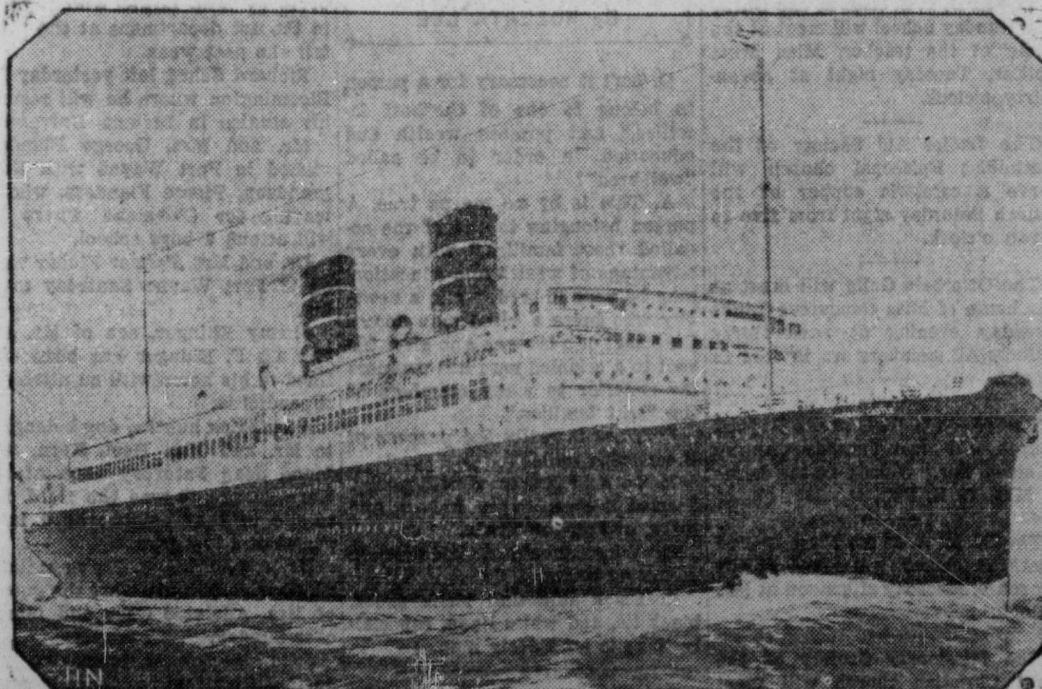

Sow spinach late and cover with a mulch. This will give you the earliest possible crop next spring. Plant snowdrops in the ground beneath a south window so you can see them without going out side.
