BEHIND THE SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL
Copyright, 1934,

HOLLYWOOD... Movie-set designers make the startling prediction that "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will inspire a flood of modernized mid-Victorian furniture.

Foretelling competitors, Cedric Gibbons and his assistants, Freddie Hore and Ed Willis, will introduce the trend themselves in the new M. G. M. picture, "Forsaking All Others."

The new furniture will be faithful to its model in design, but will have none of the gloomy horror of the Victorian pieces. A removal of the gingerbread decorations and the use of bright colors will accomplish the renaissance.

In "Forsaking All Others," a living room and den will feature the new furniture. Most of the pieces are authentic relics transformed in the studio shops.

The color scheme will be lemon yellow, sparkling blue, gray and white. Dull upholstery of the Victorian era will be replaced by bright stripes. To modernize a crystal chandelier, the designers have chromium-plated all the metal parts. And a genuine fireplace, imported from England, has been brought up to date by a frame of mirrors—alternating strips of blue and clear glass.

M. G. M.'ers are confident that the style will be as eagerly grabbed up as the modernized colonial furniture that became such a rage after the release of "When Ladies Meet."

Reversing nannies' traditions, the crew of M. G. M.'s newly completed replica of "The Bounty" is eagerly awaiting for the weather bureau to broadcast storm warnings. The sailing vessel is provisioned for four days, everything possible is lashed fast and the captain awaits only the signal to shove her out in the teeth of a gale.

The extraordinary procedure is a test. Studio officials want to be sure "The Bounty" is seaworthy before they send her to Tahiti with a valuable cargo of stars.

Jack Donohue, Fox's ace dance director, has an old mother in New York who has seen only two or three movies in the last 10 years. Just before coming to Hollywood, Jack moved her into a comfortable new apartment. The other day he received a letter from his mother. She wrote:

"I've made friends with a lady in the next-door apartment whose potato salad, cabbage salad, and fruit salad, cottage cheese, jelly pickles, beet pickles, pickled eggs, white and dark cake, pocket-book rolls, pie, coffee."

The Junior Art Club will meet Monday night at seven-thirty o'clock at the home of Miss Mary Kathryn Tyndall.

WOMEN INVITED TO SEE QUILT DISPLAY
Of special interest to the women of Decatur and vicinity will be the quilt display to be held in connection with the "Fall Festival Party" at the Schafer store October 15 to 20.

The agricultural exhibit is held annually at Schafer's store and this year the quilt display is an added feature. All quilts will be well displayed and well taken care of.

Any person within a radius of twenty-five miles is eligible to enter one quilt in the exhibit and all quilts must be in the Schafer store by Saturday, October 13. The public will decide the winner, and any person visiting the store during the Fall Festival week, October 15 to 20, will be permitted to cast one vote for the quilt which appeals to him or her most. The winners will be announced at the store Saturday night, October 27.

Farm products, canned fruit and vegetables may also be entered in the exhibit and all fresh products will be turned over to charity. The public is invited to visit the store and see the exhibit of food and quilts.

PARIS POLICE SAY SUSPECTS CONFESS PLOT

The popular rage at King Alexander's murder, manifest in wild riots, kept police alert and authorities worried today as young Peter II sped across Europe to claim his unhappy heritage.

Concerned over public anger, the government was reported to have given police at Zagreb orders to shoot to kill if necessary to prevent a planned demonstration before the Italian consulate there.

Students planned the demonstration at a meeting last night. The resignation of Albert Sarraut, French minister of interior, responsible for police arrangements at Marseilles, and the promised dismissals of two officials at the scene, made an excellent impression and feeling against the French name is Cagney. She tells me her boy, Jimmie, is in pictures. Maybe you'll hear of him now you're in Hollywood."

The removal of the stars' bungalows on the United Artists lot has stirred unusual interest throughout the country.

Studio officials already have received 21 offers to buy the Mary Pickford bungalow, where European nobility hobnobbed with Hollywood's then royal family. Most of the offers come from promoters who want to take the bungalow on a tour of the larger cities exhibiting it in department stores to the movie fans.

So far, the studio is adamant. The bungalow is to be kept as a memorial. On its original site, they already are building a modern dressing room building.

What feminine star, who plays hot-cha roles, is thinking things over very seriously since she discovered that hubby was out stepping at the late spots the other night with somebody else?

KNICK-KNACKS—

Very funny about Jack Oakie ribbing Ernst Lubitsch because the director never entertained the younger set at his home. Ernst countered with a dinner party and Jack, Mary Brian and Helen Mack showed up in rompers and gingham. . . . Is this luxury or isn't it? The projection room in Bill Powell's new house has a disappearing bed where the star can recline and watch the nine in perfect ease. . . . Wonder how come Joan Crawford, who is so crazy about blue, is having her new dressing room done in red and white? . . . Dolores Del Rio's biggest thrill in Mexico City was when 200 university students came and serenaded under her window. The movie fans came in such droves that six policemen were on duty at all times. . . . Bandmaster Al Lyons has gone to the Trocadero cafe to entertain the diners and stay-up-laters. . . . Wynne Gibson feels so important. The 14-hour plane on the New York to Los Angeles run went back after it was already in the air to pick her up when a taxi driver didn't make the airport in time. . . . And a cheer for Dixie Francis, whose cute eye-rolling as she sings is making a big hit at Henri's 60-50 club.

Visits Oberammergau
Father Dapp and his party attended the Passion play at Oberammergau. On the day he visited the picturesque and quaint little village, nestled at the foot of the Alps in Bavaria, the King of Siam was also a visitor and the rooms he had reserved at the home of Anton Lange, who takes the part of Christ in the play, were reserved for the king and his party.
The entire village of Oberammergau lives and acts the passion play. The inhabitants number about 2400 and the thousands of visitors from all parts of the world are housed by the residents of the town. Father Dapp cautioned that the views he expressed were his own personal impressions and in no sense should be taken as official expressions.
The program was in charge of H. P. Schmitt.
