

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS, BUSINESS CARDS, AND NOTICES

FOR SALE

FOR SALE—Plymouth Rock pullets 50 each. John Steffen 1 mile west 1 mile south Kirkland H. S. Craigville Phone. 299-31x

FOR SALE—Coal or wood kitchen range with attachments for burning gas; good condition. Moving. Do not need this stove. Phone 232, 128 N. 3rd St. Decatur. 270-31x

FOR SALE—New furniture. Studio couches, $21.50, 3 piece living room suites, $49.50. Kitchen cabinets $18. Coil bed springs, $3.00. Mattresses, $6.95. Iron beds, $6.50. 2 used pianos in good condition, $35 each. Many bargains in used furniture. Sprague Furniture Company, phone 199. 271-33t

FOR SALE—Ford coach, Model T, good condition. Bicycles, Stevens rifle, hard press, pump jack, feed grinder and many use tires. Daniels Second Hand Store, phone 1148. 273-G21x

FOR SALE—20 Jersey giant pullets, 75c each. W. C. Strickler, Route 6, Decatur. 271-331x

FOR SALE—Black coat for girl between ages of 17 and 18. Will sell reasonably. Phone 657. 269-33t

FOR SALE—3 day old Guernsey heifer calf. Henry F. Gallmeyer, Route 1. Poe phone. 271-331x

FOR SALE—Puritan 3 burner oil range. Call 412 So. 1 st. 271-113

FOR SALE—3 brand new 13 plate batteries. Cheap. Inquire Cort Theatre. 270-331t

FOR SALE—Young Berkshire boar about market price. Phone 865 L. 270-331t

FARMS FOR SALE

40 acres Union twp. $3,500
40 acres Washington twp. 4,000
50 acres St. Marys twp. 5,500
120 acres Monroe twp. 7,500
160 acres St. Marys twp. 7,500
80 acres Union twp. 6,800
205 acres good black soil 17,000
247 acres, 40 in timber. 20,000
118 acres, dairy near Decatur 18,000

Farms of America always have been and always will be the basis of American prosperity. Fluctuating land prices have always come back to a higher level, making land investment the finest and surest of all purchases. Suttles-Edwards Co., Decatur, Ind. Nov. 9-12-14

FOR SALE—Building suitable for garage, 18x30, in good shape. Call 443. 269-31x

FOR SALE—3 day old Guernsey male calf. 6 shots, weight 100 lbs. Call E-862, Decatur. 269-31x

FOR SALE—Used circulating heater; one iron bed; one dining table. Stucky and Co., Monroe, Ind. 269-31t

FOR SALE—Received new shipment. Circulating heaters, medium size, $39; large size, $49. Kitchen ranges $18 up. Stucky and Co., Monroe, Ind. 269-31t

FOR SALE—Received new shipment. Spring filled mattresses, $107 coil bed springs, $6; bed room suite, $35; solid oak breakfast set, $13; living room suite, $40; electric washer, $29. Store open evenings. Stucky and Co., Monroe, Ind. 269-31t

WANTED

WANTED TO BUY—Fifty pullets. Leghorns preferred. Phone 261. 269-31x

WANTED—Buff Rock hatching eggs. Model Hatchery, Monroe, Indiana. 270-51t

WANTED—For expert radio and electrical repairs call Marcellus Miller, phone 625. Member Radio Manufacturers Service, Miller Radio Service, 226 N. 7th St. 2511t

Get the Habit—Trade at Home

Model A Ford 1928 to 1931
MANIFOLD HEATERS
95c
ENGLAND'S AUTO PARTS
Wholesale and Retail
1st Door So. of Court House
Phone 282

Porter Tire Co.
Distributor
341 Winchester Phone 1283

FOR RENT

FOR RENT—Light housekeeping rooms. Josephine Baumgartner, 828 Dierkes Street. 270-31x

LOST AND FOUND

LOST—Pair of round rimmed glasses, in case. Finder call 556. Reward 271G3t

MISCELLANEOUS

SPECIAL for One Week Only!—HEMSTITCHING, regular $2 & 10c yard for only 5c yard. 229 N. 1st St., Phone 1174. 27013

TO OUR CUSTOMERS and others—We have moved to 515 West Madison street and will welcome our old and new customers. Hair cuts 15c. W. A. Fonner. 265-1t

MISCELLANEOUS—Service boats, reasonable price, leading Duroc strains, immuned, Kreischer stock farm, 10 miles east of Decatur on road 224. Address H. D. Kreischer, Convey, Ohio. 269-61x 269-31t

MARKET REPORTS

DAILY REPORT OF LOCAL AND FOREIGN MARKETS

Brady's Market for
Decatur Berne Craigville Hoagland And Willshire
Corrected November 14
No commission and no yardage.
Veals received Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday, Saturday.

250 to 300 lbs.	$5.40
200 to 250 lbs.	$5.30
160 to 200 lbs.	$5.05
300 to 350 lbs.	$5.10
140 to 160 lbs.	$4.15
120 to 140 lbs.	$3.10
100 to 120 lbs.	$2.85
Roughs	$4.25
Stags	$2.00 down
Vealers	$6.50
Ewe and wether lambs	$6.00
Buck lambs	$5.00

CHICAGO GRAIN CLOSE
	Dec.	May	July
Wheat, old	.95%	.99	.93%
Wheat, new	.99%
Corn, old	.81%	.82%	.82%
Corn, new	.81
Oats, old	.51%	.49%	.46%
Oats, new	.51%

Fort Wayne Livestock
Hogs steady; 250-300 lbs. $5.80; 225-250 lbs. $5.60; 200-225 lbs. $5.45; 180-200 lbs. $5.30; 160-180 lbs. $5.05; 300-350 lbs. $5.30; 150-160 lbs. $4.50; 140-150 lbs. $4.25; 130-140 lbs. $3.75; 120-130 lbs. $3.25; 100-120 lbs. $2.75; roughs $4.75; stags $3.
Calves $7; lambs $6.25.

EAST BUFFALO LIVESTOCK
East Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 14.—(U.P.)—Livestock: Hogs, receipts, 1,200; early sales to shippers fairly steady, packers now bidding around 10c lower; desirable 190-250 lbs. $6.15-$6.50, including outstanding 202-lb. averages, $6.40; 150-180 lbs. $5.25-$5.60; packing sows, $5.35-$5.75.
Cattle, receipts, commercial 300; steady; common steers and heifers, $3.50-$4.25; low cutter and cull, $2.75-$3.50.
Calves, receipts, commercial 250; vealers slow, weak, good to choice, $7.50, low $8; common and medium $4.75-$6.
Sheep, receipts, 1,000; lambs fully steady; good to choice, including weights up to 100 lbs. $7; medium kinds and extreme weights $6; inferior throwouts, $4-$4.50.

LOCAL GRAIN MARKET

Corrected November 14
No. 1 New Wheat, 60 lbs. or better	91c
No. 2 New Wheat (58 lbs.)	90c
Oats 32 lbs. test	49c
Oats, 30 lbs. test	48c
Oats, 30 lbs. test	48c
Coy Beans, bushel	68c - 80c
White or mixed corn	$1.00
Old Yellow Corn	$1.10
New Yellow Corn	$1.05

Monmouth Plans Fall Festival

The Monmouth high school will hold a fall festival at the Monmouth community building Thanksgiving week. One of the features of the festival will be a dance on Wednesday November 23.

For Better Health See
Dr. H. Frohnappfel
Licensed
Chiropractor and Naturopath
Phone 314 104 So. 3rd st.
Neurocalometer Service
X-Ray Laboratory
Office Hours: 10 to 12 a. m.
1 to 5 p. m., 6 to 8 p. m.
N. A. BIXLER
OPTOMETRIST
Eyes Examined, Glasses Fitted
HOURS:
8:30 to 11:30 12:30 to 5:00
Saturdays, 8:00 p. m.
Telephone 125.

Terrapin Stages Comeback
Raleigh, N. C.—(U.P.)—Diamond-back terrapin meat—a delicacy rapidly becoming a delicacy again during pre-prohibition days—is again becoming a "best seller" among sea foods. Terrapin meat, served especially at beer parties, was nearly forgotten during the years when prohibition sent alcoholic beverages into back alleys. With the advent of prohibition repeal, however, according

GIRL IN THE FAMILY

BY BEATRICE BURTON

CHAPTER I

A STRONG blow came up from the West Indies and for a day and a night the wind and the rain howled through the Halifax River country, lashing the supple palms, straining vainly at the mossy old live oaks, swamping small boats left carelessly at the docks and strapping the streets with leaves, small branches and palm fronds.

On the morning after the storm Kay Owen rose early and went out into the welcome semi-tropical sun which was drying already the great pools of water left by the rain. Kay walked rapidly, but easily, with rhythmic, long-legged steps, her body slim, young and strong under the thin white linen dress. A very pretty girl, Kay Owen, with jauntily bobbed hair of a dark red, skin somewhere between tan and gold, and candid merry eyes that were memorably green.

She had a poise, a presence, that was with her this early Florida morning; was with her always. This one quality alone would have been sufficient to make her one of the real beauties of the town. All ready—and Kay was never late—it had won her leading parts with the Daytona Beach Community Players over girls who had more experience and more social advantages.

And in the money sense Kay Owen had few such advantages. The Owen family—Kay, her mother, and Bud—was undeniably poor and had been so since Ross Owen's death the year the boom broke. Earnest young Bud worked in the bank, Mrs. Owen long since had opened the upper floor of their home to roomers, and Kay finally had had to drop out of the teachers' college to come home and look for a job which she had not yet found.

And here was Kay Owen this early morning, walking eight blocks to the bus line, a girl who in the big city might easily have a Rolls at her command—if she only knew it, and more important, if she were that sort of a girl. Which she wasn't. Not that she was even thinking about it. Her mind was on the Kayo.

The family had sold the last of their automobiles, but the Kayos remained. It was not very expensive to operate and often a half day's catch of fish more than paid for the gasoline and the time and trouble. And it was a release. On a moonlit night, with the millions of stars hanging low as they do only in the far south, Kay could pilot her boat down the channel of the broad Halifax river, in and out among the low, wooded islands, and within sound of the eternal surf which washed up on the beach a quarter mile to the east, and at such times the world was very well lost.

Two days ago Kay had heeded the storm warnings and had taken her boat into the shelter of the boat yard. Now that the storm was over, she planned taking it back up to the city docks. At Main street, the principal business section of the peninsula—really it was an island—side of Daytona Beach, Kay boarded the west bound bus and rode toward the river.

As the bus went out upon the narrow bridge that led to the mainland, Kay looked up and down at the peaceful water shining so innocently in the morning sun. To the north she could see the Seabreeze bridge, perhaps a mile distant, and beyond that, hazily, the bridge at Ormond; to the south lay the two other Daytona bridges. Ahead lay the principal part of the city, white buildings, green foliage and a golden dome of a church shining in the sun. Only last night this had been a scene of fury. The river had lashed up over the coquina rock wall, into the narrow strip of park, the trees had been tossed and torn by the wind and rain and the entire city had been a place of rage and a certain dread.

Once across the river, the bus turned south up broad Beach street from which the old town of Daytona looked out upon the Halifax, across the narrow little park. At the boatyard Kay found her little craft uninjured by the storm, sleek, serene and, nevertheless upon sturdy, a boat to be depended upon except in an unusually rough sea.

Having inspected the Kayo, she chatted a moment with the young man who worked for the boat yard. "How's the show going to be tomorrow night?" he asked. "Come and find out," she said. "I wouldn't miss."

"Well, see that you don't. I think it ought to be good. We've worked like the dickens on it."
"What's it about?"
"Did you ever hear of Noel Coward?"
"No, I never."
"No, I never—well, you come and see it."
"What's the name of it again?"
"Private Lives."
"You got the main part, haven't you?"
"The leading woman's, yes, but you wait till you see Dick Potter as the hero."
"I can wait plenty long for that. What I want to see's you."
Kay gave the young man such a smile that for the next hour he was misplacing his tools and stumbling over his own feet. She turned the flywheel of the Kayo a few times, heard the good old motor take hold, and rather sad face, a face that spoke of dissipation, cynicism and yet a definite gentility. There he was, within a stone's throw, Earl Harrow, producer of Broadway hits, master of stars, one of the most widely publicized, most powerful men in a glamorous world. He walked slowly toward his boat, following the tough little man in white flannels and blue sweater, and disappeared within the deckhouse.

"He's going to lay up here a spell, I reckon," Mike said, not even having noticed Earl Harrow's arrival. "He is?" Kay said, speaking really to herself. "He is!"

This was the sort of thing she never imagined happened in real life. This time the mountain had come to Mahomet.

Earl Harrow lifted his highball glass, gestured with it languidly.

There he was, within a stone's throw, Earl Harrow, producer of Broadway hits, master of stars.

and prepared to leave the little canal and go on down the river to the docks.
As she drew near the city docks she saw in her usual place a large yacht of a size and splendor she seldom saw on the Halifax. Such boats, drawing considerable water and being able to withstand almost anything the Atlantic had to offer, usually went down "outside." Coming alongside Kay read the name on the graceful stern: Commander III, New York. The Commander III was new to her, a handsome craft that meant a millionaire, no less. Such a handsome craft, in fact, that Kay forgot to be annoyed because the skipper had tied up in her place. She went on down a bit and made the Kayo fast, then walked up the dock to give the new arrival a closer inspection.

One of the professional skippers sat on the dock, scraping the inside of his pipe-bowl with a broken knife.
"How you, Kay? Didn't have any trouble with the Kayo?"
"Not a bit, Mike—who he belongs to this shift?"
Mike cleared his throat and spat into the river.
"Earl Harrow," he said.
The name was surprisingly familiar. Kay tried to remember. Harrow? Harrow? Then she said suddenly: "Not Earl Harrow, the producer?"

Mike kept goggling at his pipe. "He's a big show manager," he said. "Kay Owen felt giddy. Earl Harrow here in Daytona Beach at this time of the year. The Winter season hadn't even begun."

"What's he doing here?"
"Got pushed around some outside," Mike said. "He come in from the inlet to take the kinks out and get his boat looked at."

Before she could ask another question Kay heard a car draw up from the road and turned to look. Out of it stepped two men, one short, hard-looking, the other tall, slim and sleek in his yachting uniform, the perfect society boatman out of the pages of the smart magazines or of the movie screen. She recognized him at once by his black, spiked mustache and his pallid, long and rather sad face, a face that spoke of dissipation, cynicism and yet a definite gentility. There he was, within a stone's throw, Earl Harrow, producer of Broadway hits, master of stars, one of the most widely publicized, most powerful men in a glamorous world. He walked slowly toward his boat, following the tough little man in white flannels and blue sweater, and disappeared within the deckhouse.

"He's going to lay up here a spell, I reckon," Mike said, not even having noticed Earl Harrow's arrival.

"He is?" Kay said, speaking really to herself. "He is!"

This was the sort of thing she never imagined happened in real life. This time the mountain had come to Mahomet.

Earl Harrow lifted his highball glass, gestured with it languidly.

and prepared to leave the little canal and go on down the river to the docks.

As she drew near the city docks she saw in her usual place a large yacht of a size and splendor she seldom saw on the Halifax. Such boats, drawing considerable water and being able to withstand almost anything the Atlantic had to offer, usually went down "outside." Coming alongside Kay read the name on the graceful stern: Commander III, New York. The Commander III was new to her, a handsome craft that meant a millionaire, no less. Such a handsome craft, in fact, that Kay forgot to be annoyed because the skipper had tied up in her place. She went on down a bit and made the Kayo fast, then walked up the dock to give the new arrival a closer inspection.

One of the professional skippers sat on the dock, scraping the inside of his pipe-bowl with a broken knife.
"How you, Kay? Didn't have any trouble with the Kayo?"
"Not a bit, Mike—who he belongs to this shift?"
Mike cleared his throat and spat into the river.
"Earl Harrow," he said.
The name was surprisingly familiar. Kay tried to remember. Harrow? Harrow? Then she said suddenly: "Not Earl Harrow, the producer?"

Mike kept goggling at his pipe. "He's a big show manager," he said. "Kay Owen felt giddy. Earl Harrow here in Daytona Beach at this time of the year. The Winter season hadn't even begun."

"What's he doing here?"
"Got pushed around some outside," Mike said. "He come in from the inlet to take the kinks out and get his boat looked at."

Before she could ask another question Kay heard a car draw up from the road and turned to look. Out of it stepped two men, one short, hard-looking, the other tall, slim and sleek in his yachting uniform, the perfect society boatman out of the pages of the smart magazines or of the movie screen. She recognized him at once by his black, spiked mustache and his pallid, long and rather sad face, a face that spoke of dissipation, cynicism and yet a definite gentility. There he was, within a stone's throw, Earl Harrow, producer of Broadway hits, master of stars, one of the most widely publicized, most powerful men in a glamorous world. He walked slowly toward his boat, following the tough little man in white flannels and blue sweater, and disappeared within the deckhouse.

"He's going to lay up here a spell, I reckon," Mike said, not even having noticed Earl Harrow's arrival. "He is?" Kay said, speaking really to herself. "He is!"

This was the sort of thing she never imagined happened in real life. This time the mountain had come to Mahomet.

Earl Harrow lifted his highball glass, gestured with it languidly.

and prepared to leave the little canal and go on down the river to the docks.

As she drew near the city docks she saw in her usual place a large yacht of a size and splendor she seldom saw on the Halifax. Such boats, drawing considerable water and being able to withstand almost anything the Atlantic had to offer, usually went down "outside." Coming alongside Kay read the name on the graceful stern: Commander III, New York. The Commander III was new to her, a handsome craft that meant a millionaire, no less. Such a handsome craft, in fact, that Kay forgot to be annoyed because the skipper had tied up in her place. She went on down a bit and made the Kayo fast, then walked up the dock to give the new arrival a closer inspection.

One of the professional skippers sat on the dock, scraping the inside of his pipe-bowl with a broken knife.
"How you, Kay? Didn't have any trouble with the Kayo?"
"Not a bit, Mike—who he belongs to this shift?"
Mike cleared his throat and spat into the river.
"Earl Harrow," he said.
The name was surprisingly familiar. Kay tried to remember. Harrow? Harrow? Then she said suddenly: "Not Earl Harrow, the producer?"

Mike kept goggling at his pipe. "He's a big show manager," he said. "Kay Owen felt giddy. Earl Harrow here in Daytona Beach at this time of the year. The Winter season hadn't even begun."

"What's he doing here?"
"Got pushed around some outside," Mike said. "He come in from the inlet to take the kinks out and get his boat looked at."

to the state Division of Commercial Fisheries, terrapins have "come into their own" once more.

Test Your Knowledge

Can you answer seven of these ten questions? Turn to page Four for the answers.

1. Name the sixth wife of Henry VIII of England?
2. Who was William Harkness?
3. Give the title of the presiding officer of the British House of Commons.
4. What is the scientific name of the extinct flying lizards, fossils of which are found in Mesozoic rocks?
5. Who invented the reaping machine?
6. What is aphasia?
7. Name the two aviators who won the recent England to Australia flight.
8. Who wrote "Brewster's Millions"?
9. Name the river that separates Manhattan Island from the Bronx, N. Y.
10. How many members has the U. S. Civil Service Commission?

COURT HOUSE

Real Estate Transfers
Clayton E. Byrd, ex., to Aloysius Schneider et ux in lots 9 and 11 in Decatur for $462.

REGION BANKS MEETING TODAY

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)
pany, Chicago, a member of the executive council of the American Institute of Banking.

William P. Flynn, vice-president of the Indiana National Bank, Indianapolis, and treasurer of the Bankers Association, Herman B. Wells, bank supervisor of the Indiana department of financial institutions and Don E. Warrick, secretary of the bankers association, were introduced at the meeting.

T. F. Gallicker, of Decatur, president of the region, presided at the meeting which was held at the new Garrett hotel. H. M. Brown, of Garrett, served as secretary of the region. Visiting bankers were greatly interested in the discussion of present and intended activities of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, as explained by J. Leo Johnson.

The meeting began at a noon luncheon. Representatives from Adams, Allen, DeKalb, Huntington, Kosciusko, LaGrange, Noble, Stenben, Wells and Whitley counties attended.

Mrs. Douglas Hane of Fort Wayne visited in this city yesterday.

Roy S. Johnson
Auctioneer
P. L. & T. Co. B1
Phones 104 and 1022.
Claim your date early as I sell every day.

SALE CALENDAR

- Nov. 15. Theodore Luganbill, 3 miles south and 1/2 mile west of Willshire on the old Austin Evans farm. Closing out sale.
- Nov. 16—Decatur and Chattanooga Sales.
- Nov. 17—Harold Gillion, 1-4 mile south and 1-4 mile west of Maples.
- Nov. 21—Sarah & George Hoffman, 7 miles east and 3 miles south of Berne. 60 acre farm and personal property.
- Nov. 22—John F. Sidle estate, 2 mile west of Van Wert on road 224.
- Nov. 23—Decatur and Chattanooga Sales.
- Nov. 24—Mrs. D. C. Myers and heirs, 1/2 mile west of Pleasant Mills on State Road 527. 66 acre farm.
- Nov. 26—C. P. Foust, 1-4 miles north and 1-2 east of Monroeville.
- Nov. 30—Decatur and Chattanooga Sales.
- Dec. 11—Dwight Wass estate, 3 miles east and 5 miles north of Decatur.
- Dec. 12—William Dettmer, 1/2 mi. north of Echo.

Prince Defends Mrs. Vanderbilt

Prince Gottfried Zu Hohenlohe and his wife are pictured as they boarded upon their arrival in New York City where the prince will testify in the trial of the habeas corpus action of Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt to regain custody of her daughter, Gloria. The prince dismissed insinuations made in court by witnesses concerning his Vanderbilt and himself as "Lies, lies—just a pack of lies."

PUBLIC AUCTION

FRIDAY, November 16, 1 o'clock

Horses—Cattle—Sheep and Hogs. 50 White Leghorn pullets, horse wagon. 1 International Truck, S. 36, 1 1/2 ton, heavy duty wheel base, dual wheels, 6 cyl., 1929 stake body. Household Furniture—Victor Victrola and records; Drop-head sewing machine; Brass bedstead; Iron Bedstead; Dresser; Upholstered chairs; 2 stands; 2 pedestals; 2 buffets; white gas range; 2 soft coal heating stoves; 2-piece mahogany case overstuffed living room suite; china closet; dining table; 6 pad room chairs; small ice box; Bed, springs and mattress; Library table; 7 tube electric radio; kitchen cabinet; floor rug. This furniture is in first class condition. Miscellaneous articles.

DECATUR RIVERSIDE SALE

Roy Johnson and Doehman, auctioneers.

PUBLIC SALE

60 ACRE FARM AND PERSONAL PROPERTY
We will sell at public auction without reserve, the following described real estate on the premises, 7 miles east and 3 miles south and 1 1/2 miles west of Chattanooga, Ohio, or 1 1/2 miles and Jefferson high school, on

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 21, 1934

At 1:00 P. M.
60 acre farm, level black sandy loam soil very fertile, extra well tiled; 7 room, 2 story frame house, barn 36x50, with 240 granary 24x32; crib and hog house, 12x35; tool shed; poultry house 12x36; good drive well; water supply tank; underground tile 12x36 of all kind; land is all under cultivation. This is one of the small farms in Adams county. An ideal farm home, located near school, churches, markets and on a good stone road. It must be to be appreciated. Land values are increasing, good farms are very scarce. Do not fail to see this farm, and attend the sale will sell without reserve to the highest bidder.

Will also sell 1 good cow with calf by side; 6 good 2 year Shropshire ewes; 4 ton bean hay; 1 ton of timothy hay; 100 lbs of corn; 70 bu. of wheat; 7 bu. of good seed corn, selected last year; large cooker kettle; iron kettle; 1 1/2 h.p. gas engine; pump jack; several other articles.

TERMS—$500.00 cash day of sale, $500.00 loan that runs two months may be assumed by the purchaser. The balance one-third March 1935, one-third in 6 months, one-third in 9 months, land possession.

Sarah R. Huffman and George F. Huffman, Owners
Sold by Roy S. Johnson, Auctioneer, Decatur, Indiana.

PUBLIC SALE

66—ACRE FARM—66

In order to settle estate,