WIFE IN CUSTODY by BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER XVIII

Stella began to shriek at Irene.
Agnes rushed in to part them. The men stood by sheepishly. Ethel came over to Helen. "Don't mind them, Helen, they'll get over it," she promised wisely.

"Thank you," Helen said gratefully in a low voice. Her face was burning. Not even tears came now to her relief.

Jerry came forward. "My best, old man," he said to his brother-in-law.

Dirk shook hands warmly with Walter. Then he turned to his wife.
"I hope you're ashamed of yourself, Irene. I am heartily ashamed of you. Your brother's wife is in your home and not one of you—yes, pardon me, except Ethel—has bid her welcome or uttered one word of congratulation to your brother. For he is to be congratulated for having won such a charming girl as his wife. I apologize to you for my wife, Helen, and I wish you great happiness and joy." He leaned over and kissed her forehead.

There was a silence. Irene struggled to regain her composure. She glanced at Dirk's words. It was the first time she had lost her temper in his presence and she saw that he was shocked.

"I'm sorry," she countered swiftly.
"You've made my bed, Walter, and I hope you find it comfortable." She kissed him. "I offer you both my best wishes. Please don't expect me to congratulate you." She held out her hand to Helen.

"Thank you," Helen took the proffered hand. They shook briefly.
Walter, glad that the furor was over, kissed Irene gratefully.

The others, taken aback at Irene's about-face, lamely congratulated first Helen and then Walter as the safest procedure. It was hardest for Stella, but even she managed it.

Helen said no word except "Thank you."

There was an embarrassed silence, which Walter broke. "Let's go in and see how mother is, Helen, and then we'll go."

"You're not going away tonight," Agnes protested. "Mama might have a relapse."

"You're here," Walter retorted briefly. "We're at the Plaza. You can phone me."

Before they reached the door Stella blurted out, "I suppose she'll have to be assistant manager or something. Not that I need an assistant! She can't just go back to managing."

Walter said curtly: "My wife is out of the salons entirely."

There was a splutter of rage.
"We're not too good to work," Stella snarled.

"It is not necessary for her to work," Walter said savagely. "I can support my wife."

He took Helen's hand and pulled her out of the doorway into his mother's room.

Irene said in a hard voice: "I'm going home. Are you coming, Dirk?"

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that Monday, November 4, 1935 will be the last day to pay your Fall installment of taxes. The county treasurer's office will be open from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M. during the tax paying season. All taxes not paid by that time will become delinquent and a 3% penalty will be added. Also interest at the rate of 8% will be charged from the date of delinquency until paid. Those who have bought or sold property and wish to a division of taxes are asked to come in at once.
Call on the Auditor for errors and any corrections.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty of delinquent taxes resulting from the omission of taxpayers to state definitely on what property they desire to pay, in whose name it may be found, in what township or corporation it is situated.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, the law is such that there is no option left for the Treasurer but enforce the collection of delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of delinquent lands and lots will take place on the second Monday in February 1936 at 10:00 A. M.

County orders will not be paid to anyone owing delinquent taxes. All persons are warned against them.

No receipts or checks will be held after expiration of time, as the new depository law requires the Treasurer to make daily deposit.

Particular attention: If you pay taxes in more than one township mention the fact to the Treasurer, also see that your receipts call for all your real estate and personal property.

In making inquiries of the Treasurer regarding taxes to insure reply do not fail to include return postage.

JOHN WECHTER
Treasurer Adams County, Indiana
Oct. 5 to Nov. 4

Without a word she picked up her wrap. Dirk followed her.

"She's wild," Agnes whispered fearfully to Stella, who still stood uncertainly.

"No wonder. That was a rotten thing Walter said. Dirk could make forty thousand a year if he went back to his old job with John Kayle, selling asbestos. Walter had a rotten nerve to say that to us."

Agnes patted Carl's hand. "He said it to you, Stella dear," she murmured sweetly.

"You needn't sit back so high and mighty. I guess Jerry can earn as much as Carl any time if they both went back to their original jobs."

Stella burst out angrily. "Walt has a rotten nerve to insinuate that only he can support a wife! Jerry is doing wonderfully in Brooklyn. The way mama ran down that shop it would be closed by now if Jerry wasn't such a good manager."

"Oh, cut it," Jerry broke in crossly. "You girls give me a pain in the neck. I'm going."

Walter and Helen said good night briefly to Agnes and to Carl.

In the car Helen was silent.

"I'm sorry, darling," Walter apologized humbly. "It was pretty awful, wasn't it? But it's all over now. They'll be lovely from now on. Even Stella. She sounds like the worst of the lot, but underneath she has a heart of gold. Your worst troubles are over. You carried it off beautifully, darling, beautifully and with dignity."

At breakfast next morning he was almost happy.

Helen poured coffee and felt housewifely and domestic. "Darling, I ought to look for an apartment."

"Don't you like the Plaza?" he teased.

"Yes, of course, but I want to keep home. I want to cook for you.
I'll ask your mother for your favorite recipes. Is she a good cook?"

"Terrible," he said cheerfully.
"Mother has no instinct for cooking."

"Well, I have," she chuckled. "I want to market and bake and cook steaks. I guess it's the housewife coming out in me. I wish my mother were alive to see how happy I am," she sighed. "Walter, shall I drop in this morning to see how your mother is?"

"Gee, that's sweet of you, Helen." There'll be no one there. You know when I leaned over and kissed her, I'm sure she grinned at me.
It really was a grin, just like yours."

Walter laughed. "Yes, she has a grin. You could hardly call it a smile. She's a handful, the old demon. But you can't help liking her.
You were talking about an apartment. You know the farm I own in Bound Brook. I've flushed slightly as he always did when he mentioned it. "My tenants are moving out August first. It's a lovely place. Would you like to furnish it as a summer place or something?"

"I surely will, darling—if I need her," she added.
