NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned, trustee of Wabash School Township and Wabash Civil Township of Adams county, state of Indiana, and the Advisory Board of said township, will receive sealed bids at the office of said trustee at Geneva in said township, on Monday, the 18th day of November, 1935, for the reconstruction, remodeling, and a new building and construction of the Geneva High School building at Geneva in said township, and the erection and construction of a room or building in connection with and under the roof of said school building, in which to teach and instruct the students of said township in the subjects of agriculture, domestic science, or physical or practical mental culture, and in which to hold school or township entertainments, or to be used for township purposes, all work to be done, performed, and completed in strict accordance with the plans and specifications of the architect, Charles H. Houck, architect, and heretofore adopted by said trustee and said advisory board, and now on file in the office of said trustee.

Estimated cost is $35,000.00. Bids will be received in accordance with said specifications for the following items as designated by the architect in said plans and specifications: (1) general contracting; (2) heating and ventilating; (3) electrical; (4) plumbing and sewer; (5) painting; and bids will also be received for a combination of any two or more of said items.

Proposals shall be properly and completely executed on proposal forms furnished by the architect in accordance with Form 36 with non-collusion affidavit as required by the statutes of the State of Indiana, and must be accompanied by the State Board of Accounts, for bids of $5,000.00 or more.

Bids shall be deposited with his bid a certified check made payable to Jess C. Mann, trustee, in a sum equal to five per cent of the amount of said bid as guarantee and evidence of good faith, that he will accept the contract and carry out the construction of the work bid upon if awarded the contract.

The successful bidder will be required to give a surety bond subject to the approval of said trustee in a sum equal to the full amount of his bid insuring the completion of the work in all things agreeable to the contract, plans, specifications, and drawings therefor.

The contractor, in doing the work, shall comply with the terms of the provisions of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of Congress of 1935, the regulations issued pursuant thereto by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, and the rules and regulations of the Public Works Administration (relating to grants made by the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, and as amended October 24, 1935).

Work shall be paid for from funds derived from the grant of the United States for such purpose, and also from the sale of bonds to be issued by said school township and said civil township.

No bidder may withdraw his bid for a period of thirty days after date set for opening of bids.

The undersigned reserves the right to reject all or any of the bids.

Instructions to bidders, plans, specifications, etc. are on file in the office of said trustee at Geneva, Indiana, or may be obtained from Charles H. Houck, architect, Rooms 7 & 8, Postoffice Building, Muncie, Indiana. Bidders may secure copy of plans and specifications for private examination by depositing $25.00 with the architect, and also for the return of the same within one week from receipt of the same.

JESS C. MANN, Trustee Wabash school township, Wabash civil township, Adams county, Indiana, Address: Geneva, Indiana, Oct. 26 — Nov. 2-5.

APPOINTMENT OF EXECUTOR Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been appointed executor of the estate of Mary Hackman, late of Adams County, deceased. The Estate is probably solvent.

"WIFE IN CUSTODY" by BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER XXXI Helen and the baby and the nurse arrived in New York at eight o'clock. Walter met her at the apartment. He was white with anger.

"What could have got into you, Helen, to do anything so insane as this? It's madness! You might have given Grace her death of cold taking her out so late at night. She was thriving so beautifully on the farm. You haven't anything here—her pram, or her bed! Stella called me up and she's wild."

For the first time in her married life, Helen felt equal to the occasion. "When you're right, Dirk, had told her, 'be firm, speak up. Don't weaken!'"

Helen faced her husband levelly. "Listen, Walter, if you want to live on the farm with Stella, you may. I'm entitled to a home of my own, and I'm going to have it. I invited Stella to come out to us after her illness for a week or two to recuperate. I didn't expect her to share my life and my home. I've left her with the whole house, everything, the servants, the furniture, the whole works. She's well come to them. But I won't live with her. Do you understand?" she asked. Her eyes were steady.

Walter paled. "No, I don't understand you, Helen," he said, but the anger had died out of his face. "What did Stella do that should have excited you so?"

Helen began to laugh. She controlled herself with an effort as she felt the tentacles of hysteria take hold of her. Dirk would not approve of her laughing. Between gasps she said, "She wouldn't let the Havemayers in," and then because the bitter outrage of the situation filled her with fury, this time she really lost herself in throes of hysterical laughter.

When she was quite calm again and the baby was asleep, she faced Walter again.

"I will not go back to Bound Brook until Stella goes and that's all there's to it, Walt. If she wants the house she can have it. I'll spend the winter here."

"It will look as if we've deserted Stella in her hour of need," Walter said desperately. "I should think for my sake you could have exercised a little fortitude. What will the others say?"

"Walter, I don't care what they say. How long does Stella's 'hour of need' as you put it last? Why should you carry the burden of Stella? It seems to me your mother could take care of her. Why every thing hangs on her is beyond me."

"Because I owe Stella something—the immensity of which you don't seem to realize. Besides, she's my sister."

"What do I owe Stella, Walter?" "You're my wife," he persisted doggedly. "It would cost you so little to be nice to her. You have everything—she has nothing. I never knew you to be ungenerous. Helen. Yet now when you can do something for her, you pack up and run! You know you have to live with your in-laws all your life—you might as well be gracious about it!"

"What about me? Must I always be secondary to them? What have I got that Stella hasn't? A husband? I have to share you with her, with all of them. They've insulted me and humiliated me and imposed on me and I'm supposed to bear it. Why? Why do I have to live with them all my life? Helen cried, her cheeks flaming. "Oh," suddenly she was sobbing wildly, "don't tell me again what you owe them or I'll scream!"

"Helen, dearest, please."

"Don't talk to me. You're blind. We could be so happy. We could enjoy our life so if only you didn't have that abnormal obsession about them. You don't love me or else you wouldn't be so unreasonable," she sobbed.

Helen gave a little cry of unspeakable misery and rushed out of

TRAINING NEED FOR JOBS CITED

New York.—(UP)—An appalling lack of vocational training as one of the basic causes of unemployment is perhaps the most significant fact revealed by one of the most unusual national surveys just completed.

The 250,000 Camp Fire Girls of the country collected data on employment, relief, public works needs and projects and the requisites for better citizenship. This is believed to be one of the first times in history that a large segment of the nation's women between the ages of 15 and 18 been given the opportunity to press its opinions on the vital problems of the day.

The survey involved a study of local city conditions throughout the country and a comprehensive group of relief plans and objectives. The girls did not stop here. They went farther, making suggestions, and parks, even making plans to scale of 1/2 inch to 1 inch. They worked out careful and extensive budgets on feeding a family of four on $5 a week in the north, where food prices are higher.

Results of the survey were submitted first to Mrs. Pauline Roosevelt who said in a letter: "I think the girls have a survey did a remarkably good job. In meeting this need, they assets to their community."

So careful and systematic a survey considered, that it needed to submit the results to the Federal government in a national aid in relief work.
