

Hoan's Victory Recalls Record

Recent re-election of Daniel Webster Hoan as mayor of Milwaukee calls attention to the stellar record of this Socialist mayor who is now beginning his sixth consecutive four-year term. Under his 20-year administration Milwaukee has enjoyed a financial success equaled by few cities in United States, has built up an efficient police and fire department, instituted many social projects of inestimable value, and developed a school and park system of high merit. Although a Socialist by affiliation, his political career having started under tutelage of the late Victor Berger, noted Socialist leader, Mayor Hoan is in no sense a radical. He is married and has two children, lives in a modest home in an unfashionable district, and tempers his Marxian ideas with the teachings of his hero, Abraham Lincoln.

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS

Notice is hereby given that Monday, May 4, 1936 will be the last day to pay your Spring installment of taxes on delinquent and an 8% penalty will be open from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M. during the tax paying season. All taxes not paid by that time will be added, an additional 5% will be added for each year tax remains unpaid from first Monday in November in the year the delinquency occurred. Those who have bought or sold property and wish a division of taxes are asked to come in at once. Call on the Auditor for errors and any reductions. The Treasurer can make no corrections.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty of delinquent taxes resulting from the omission of tax-payers to state definitely on what property they desire to pay, in whose name it may be found, in what township or corporation it is situated. Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, the law is such that there is no option left for the Treasurer but enforce the collection of delinquent taxes. County orders will not be paid to anyone owing delinquent taxes. All persons are warned against this. Particular attention. If you pay taxes in more than one township mention the fact to the Treasurer also see that your receipts call for all your real estate and personal property. In making inquiries of the Treasurer regarding taxes to insure reply do not fail to include return postage.

JEFF LICHTRY
Treasurer Adams County, Indiana.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"
by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XVIII

Nat paused and picked up the manila envelope from the table. "I have had copies made of pictures which appeared with the news-stories," he went on. He took these from the envelope and handed them to Gordon. Tyler bent forward to look at them too. Gordon stared at them dully.

"This one," Nat said, placing his finger on one of the copies, "is a picture of Joe Gaudin. This is the kidnapped boy. And this—is James Moridon."

Tyler peered at the pictures. Gaudin, as far as he knew, he had never seen. The picture of the kidnapped boy revealed an eager-faced, smiling lad. It was the third picture, that of James Moridon, which brought a startled exclamation to his lips.

"Why, that picture is the image of your son, Mr. Gordon, as he is today!"

Gordon nodded slowly, his head he raised his eyes to Nat's. Bitter grief and pain shown from them, shone all the more because of the complete lack of emotion in his face.

"I am James Moridon," he said. "My son David was the boy who was kidnapped."

Tyler stared at the picture of James Moridon, and then at the man he had known as Gordon. It was certainly not the same face. Gordon, observing the puzzlement in his eyes, gave a little sigh.

"I was in the war," he said slowly. "I was badly wounded. My face was horribly mutilated. What you see now—is the result of plastic surgery."

Nat gave a sudden exclamation. "Of course! Now I understand! That was the one thing missing!"

Gordon sank back and regarded them from eyes which seemed suddenly sunken, without luster. He threw out his hands, then, with a quick gesture.

"I've kept this secret," he said heavily. "From everyone but David—and my wife. Because I knew that as long as Joe Gaudin lived, none of us were ever to be safe—from the shadow of death. That if ever it became known that I was James Moridon, this man would search me out—and kill me—or worse, my children or my wife! You don't know the power of hate in that gangster's soul!"

Tyler's face was filled with compassion as he turned to the man. "I begin to understand," he said.

The music of the violin overhead which had been so soft, so caressing, now rose, suddenly, for an instant, and then, on a discord which was like a cry, it stopped. The eyes of the three men jerked upward, staring.

Nat and Tyler sprang to their feet, started for the stairs. From above they heard a sound of hurrying steps. At the top of the stairs the blind girl appeared, the violin dangling in her hand, her face deathly white.

Nat ran to her as she swayed. "Hélène!" she gasped. "Hélène!" Gordon, who had sat as if frozen, rose, trembling.

"Good God!" he cried. "Go to her—quickly!" Ruth said, hoarsely. "She—she's in terrible danger!"

She gripped the banisters, held herself erect. "Go!" she commanded. "I'm all right!"

Nat whirled about, took the steps in a bound. As he flung himself out the door, he heard the other men following. Across the moonlight lawn he raced, his eyes going to the house. A light burned on the second floor.

Hélène's room was dark. Reaching a spot under the window, not delaying to go around through door and stairs and halls, he sprang upward, hands clutching for the edge of the balcony. They caught, and he pulled himself up, vaulted the rail, pushed forward toward the open French windows, making no effort at silence, intent only on getting to the girl's side, oblivious of possible danger to himself.

As he came up to the window, he heard a sound from within, of some one stirring. There was a click, and the reading-lamp by the girl's
