BEHIND the Scenes
in HOLLYWOOD

HOLLYWOOD — The famous knockout blow that Clark Gable delivered to his skilled opponent in the prize fight scene for "Cain and Mabel" will be retained in the picture, but will not appear as a knockout. Warners wanted to use it as the end of the 15-round bout in the story, in which Clark co-stars with Marion Davies, but the camera left the "Round 1" marker above the ring, and there is no way to stop this from showing. As a result, the scene will appear as a knockout, and another way will be used for Gable to score a koyu at the finish of the fight.

Clark Gable has the same maid and chauffeur, but she has bought a new car. She arrived in it at the M. G. M. studio, but everyone was so excited that no two stories agree on the car, or even the color.

44 a gesture of gratitude, Ginger Rogers will present her ma with a room house costing between $20,000 and $25,000. The star figures out that Rogers is responsible for success in the films, and will give the deed of the new place as a Christmas and birthday present. Plans are already drawn up the house, which will be novel in one wing will be made of stone, second of shales, a third of flat iron and a fourth of plaster. Ginger will make her home there.

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Samuel Conrad, Steubenville, O. You are a bit over-anxious, complaining about a star not answering your letter in two weeks. Most fan letters are not even opened until weeks after they are sent, unless they contain invitations, or something that demands prompt attention, they are not answered for another two weeks. Begging letters don't mean to infer that yours are usually ignored completely. I don't think you'll find many stars who don't open their fan mail today. There may be a few, but most realize how important their admirers are.

Is this a honey? Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer engaged an actor named Arthur Stuart Hull for a picture and phoned him they'd send his part by a special car.

When it arrived, Hull discovered that the part consisted of a single line:

The actor dispatched the following wire:

"Bill Grady, casting director: Sorry you took the trouble of sending my lines special. I have known them by heart for 20 years."
