WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE.
Ardeth Carroll has charge of the specialty shop owned by wealthy Jeanette Parker. She meets Ken Gleason, fiancé of Jeanette's sister, Cecile, and they fall in love. Their marriage is prevented by Ken's mother's wish that he marry Cecile. When Ken fails to keep an appointment with Ardeth, Tom Corbett takes her to dinner. They meet Ken and Cecile. Later Ken tells Ardeth fear of disappointing his mother, whose days are numbered, forced him to attend Cecile's party. Tom invites Ken and Ardeth to a party at his mountain cabin. Mary Eastwood urges Ardeth to encourage Tom, warning her of impending disaster where Ken is concerned. Tom and Ken vie with one another for Ardeth's attentions. Tom proposes to Ardeth. Ken's proposal is interrupted by a telegram notifying him of his mother's illness. Ardeth is filled with foreboding. Ken feels the need to close when his mother calls Cecile and him to her bedside. Late one night he phones Ardeth that he must see her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.
A small, dark park suddenly loomed in their path. Ken swung the machine into the drive. The headlights gleamed on glossy shrubs, seeming a theatrical green in the glare. Then blackness rushed about them as he stopped the engine and snapped off the current. The watching girl could barely make out his face by the dim glare of an arc light some distance away.

"Well..." he turned to her, speaking still in that new tight voice, "now we can talk. But we mustn't take long; I have to get back. I had to see you, though. To tell you—to tell you—I'm going to marry Cecile."

He drew in his breath in a whistling hiss. "Tomorrow—at 5, in St. Matthew's Church. The church my mother was married in." He was painfully precise.

"Oh," Then, sharply as the news sunk in, "Oh!" She was crying in his arms, her face pressed hard against the rough weave of his overcoat. Dreadful tears. Tears torn out of her heart. Scalding tears.

"Don't sweetheart... Ah, don't..." His husky voice came smothered against her hat. He had pulled off her hat, pressed his face down on her head.

Madness bursting in her brain like a flash of red light. She had pressed her face down in an agony of defiance, her words came fiercely smothered against his lips.

"No! You can't! You're mine. Mine... Mine..." Gently he thrust her away, holding her hands down in her lap with one of his own. Still he spoke in that tense, unnatural voice.

Her Last Wish.
"My mother is dying. She asks only one thing. That I marry Cecile. What can I do?"

No answer but her torn sob. After a moment he burst out. "Don't you suppose I've gone over this and over it all today—all tonight! I'm going mad, I think! To give you up—and I love you! God, I love you, Ardeth. It's wicked to marry one girl loving you the way I do! She—so little and all. And lying there—dying!" His voice was tortured. "If you'd seen her eyes when I said I would. She tried to smile..."

"Oh, it's wrong!" rose her muffled wail. "No one can live another person's life!"

"Of course it's wrong!" his voice broke. "But what can I do? It's that, keeping her alive. How can I wipe that look off her face? Dying—she is! All my life—to know I'd refused the last thing she asked... Oh, I can't! I will have killed her—you see that?"

"But... we love each other! Oh, I love you! I'd die for you! God meant people to love each other when they married. Ken—you can't give me up!"

Straining her gaze up to his chalky face and shadowy eyes. A look in his eyes which turned him to a stranger. Bitter... withdrawn... She gave a little, broken cry.

Ken had already given her up in his mind. She could not believe it. This was some dreadful dream which would pass. Oh, it couldn't be true!

She whimpered. Pinned at him, rapidly it makes them soft and broken on the outside, while the centers will be hard and uncooked.

Mrs. Grace Everett Suffers Broken Leg

Mrs. Grace Everett, well known local resident, suffered a broken left leg late Monday afternoon when she tripped and fell at her home, corner Eighth and Monroe streets.

Mrs. Everett was walking from her home when she accidentally tripped and fell. Her left leg was broken just below the hip. She was taken to the Adams county memorial hospital and the attending physician stated that her condition was only fair today.

Later she got up and pulled off her clothes, moving as slowly as Ken had done at the last. She got into bed.

Broken-hearted.

Grief, suddenly tearing at her throat, so that she flattened her face in the wet pillow lest the face in the next room hear her. Wild anger shook through her like a hot wind, murderous anger at Cecile. At the dying woman who was snatching away her happiness. Even at Ken himself, that he should give her up.

Its very intensity wore it out. Followed a period of dreary calm when it seemed the heart within her had died. Dead things moved through a dead world. There would never be anything again but this hopeless ache in her heart.

Periods when she lost herself in dreams as depressing as reality. Swimming up through reeling blackness to face memory.

She lay flat, her face upturned to the back room, stupidly whispering "Ken... Ken..." Tears rolled out of the outer corners of her eyes. Tricked into her ears, wet her hair, so that she rolled her head restlessly.

Then the room was flooded with rainy daylight and the chimneys on the roofs outside came to view. The hateful morning was here at last.

She whispered, "Today... Ken will be married..." More dreadful to face it in this rainy light than it had been last night. Rain, drip-dripping on the roofs outside with the sound of heavy tears.

Would it always be like this? Ardeth asked herself pitifully. Would this raw pain in her heart ever slow to a dull ache? When she was old—as old as Aunt Stel, say—would all of this have receded so it didn't matter? When she was old—but how could she live to grow old with this grief pressing on her heart?

If Ken's mother should die—suppose she were dead now—what need the useless sacrifice! If she were no longer here to be hurt at his refusal, Ken wouldn't have to...

Madly she tried to stifle the shameful hope in her heart. Not that—of course, she didn't wish that—but, oh, surely something would happen—something always happened at the last moment to make things right, didn't it?

Maybe if she prayed... She knelt down, rested her forehead on the edge of the bed and closed her eyes. No words came. No thoughts. Only the picture of Ken's face, so bleak and white last night.

Tears began to steal from her closed eyes.

The telephone rang. Her heart leaped, swelled in her throat. The answer! God was answering the prayer in her heart!

Ah-Ling's voice coming over the wire. "Are you coming down, Miss Carroll?"

She had forgotten the time. She had forgotten the shop.

"Not today, Rosie. I—I don't feel well."

The little Chinese girl's voice held a worried note. "What shall I do? Miss Parker's out of town. She phoned."

A long moment, then Ardeth's tired voice. "All right, I'll be right down."

What did it matter where she was? What did anything matter? To Be Continued Monday.
