GIRL UNAFRAID BY GLADYS JOHNSON

Ken and Cecile quarrel over Cyril Underhill.

CHAPTER XXXII.
It was a cruelly unexpected, plunge of eyes into eyes. Confusion in Ardeth's mind. Ken... really Ken... and he was holding a baby...
Ken's first instinctive movement had been to leave. But he remained there looking at her.
"I didn't expect to see you, Ardeth. I was just passing. Just walking by."
"You—come in?" The words seemed to come of their own volition.
They were in the store, still in that strained silence. The girl was leaning back against the counter. One hand was pressed hard over her throat where a little pulse fluttered.
"I was too tried to go down to the country today with Tom." She spoke with an apparent effort.
"Yesterday was awfully busy. And there was the window to dress—"
"I saw you," he answered, with the same unnatural calm. "And I thought of that first time I came in here. When you were in the window, arranging the ivory elephants."
With a fluttering movement of her hands she said, "The baby, I've never seen him."
"I stole him to take him out," Ken explained. "I have an idea he doesn't like his nurse. You know, even when they're very young they have likes and dislikes. Sort of starched linen nurse she is; like a hawk. Rapacious eye, you know. I know the Colonel here doesn't like her."
The Colonel... Something pitifully appropriate in the nickname Ken had bestowed upon his son. Nothing round and rosy—nothing babylike about the infant, which looked owlishly back at Ardeth. It was as though a little old man peered from behind the small features.
Phyllis Hawkins' words flashed back to the girl: "The nurse said she pretty nearly killed the poor little brat from the first... the boy never had a fair start..."
A frail little thing; bones like a macaroni. A cold undertone to the tiny face. The eyes pale blue, with a strange set, stare, an unearthly stare, Ardeth found herself thinking.

Such a Mite.
The resentment she had known was swept away in a gust of pity. A little cry broke from her. "Such a little bit of thing! Let me—"
She had it in her arms, the baby's stare regarding her brooding face.
"The darling—" she said softly. Her fingertips lightly caressed the milky little face. "The pretty little fellow—"
With a pang it struck Ken that no one had ever before used that inappropriate term to the child. Something choked in his throat, and he spoke with an assumption of lightness.
"Well... the Colonel doesn't go in much for beauty. But he's bright as a dollar. I always manage to know how he feels."
That hurt the girl. Ken, lonely—trying in some clumsy way to make up to the unwelcome mite for the love it should have had as a right.
"We slipped out for a walk before the starched nurse could stop us. I could see by his eyes that the Colonel was bored. He likes to be with me. And, somehow, we came down this way. But I didn't dream of seeing you—"
"Where's Cecile?" She did not raise her eyes to his own. Ken seemed as young and helpless in that moment as the baby and the pull on her sympathy was dangerous.
Ken shrugged. "Cecile's Gaines' house party. I can't get on with that woman, so, for the sake of peace, I stayed away."
An awkward little moment of silence. Then Ardeth found her self saying in a choked voice: "Would you... like to come back here and sit down?"

Sorrow's Marks.
They were in the back room. She found herself sitting on the couch holding the silent baby. Ken had taken the chair opposite. By the light which shanted on him through the one long window she saw his cast of manner was merely a mask. His face was white and his eyes were bleak. If she had changed in this last bitter year, so had he. Little left of the triumphant youth she had given her heart in that long ago Summer. Here was a man, disillusioned—suffering.

Ken's eyes went around the room, noticing the simple, comfortable furnishings. They came back to rest on her face and such sudden yearning flashed there that she spoke hastily.
"Tell me about yourself... your... your business."
"Did you know I'd left Mr. Parker's office? I'm in for myself."
At her nod he went on. "It wasn't that he wasn't considerate. He's been kind. But that was just it. I don't want kindness! I want to stand on my own! To own my own success! I've got to have something of my own."
Something badgered in his voice. She looked swiftly up at him. His head was high—not the gay, confident lift of other days. Defiant. His eyes were angry, bewildered.
He suddenly swam in the mist of her own tears. Tears which she tried, in dismay, to check. She saw that he had risen. Was reaching for her.
"Oh... Ardeth... sweetheart." A little cry halted him. A little crow from the baby. Held in Ardeth's arms, he had been fascinated by the glitter of a tiny chain about her neck. His small wavering hand had at last captured it and a scatter of tiny pearls sprinkled the girl as it broke.

The accident startled them back to themselves. Ken stooped, gathered the scattered beads.
"Really, it does not matter," Ardeth protested softly.
When Ken rose he was master of himself again. He made a desperate grasp after his self-possession.
"Have to get the Colonel home or the starched nurse will hang us both. We both thank you—"
A bleakness in that which pierced her heart.
"Apologize to the lady, you rascal, for plundering her jewelry!" They were gone. The little shop was suddenly empty, with only the sunlight slanting in to fall on the mandarin coats and the bright feather fans.
Through the yellow silence Ardeth walked to the back room. She picked up the broken chain and let it drop slowly into a small velvet case.
She knew she would never mend it.
A few weeks later Ken entered Cecile's boudoir, his face pale with anger, lips nervously compressed. Though it was the middle of the afternoon he found Cecile in the hands of her maid.
Marriage and motherhood had made little difference to Cecile's habits. Her beauty was still her chief concern. It was rather a startling apparition which greeted her husband's eyes today. Swathed in a sheet Cecile lay on the day bed and her face was an astonishing dark green.
At Ken's voice she opened her eyes and made frantic movements with her hands which the gaunt Swedish maid interpreted grudgingly.
"Mrs. Gleason is having a clay beauty mask, sir. If she talks she'll crack it."
"I'm sorry to interrupt at such a time, Cecile," Ken's voice was light, "but it seems impossible to get a word with you at any other hour and I must speak with you in private."

With immobile face but blazing eyes Cecile parted her lips long enough to say furiously, "You'll have to wait. This must not be disturbed for an hour."
"An hour will be too late for my purpose," Ken replied firmly. "I've tried to see you all day. I must ask you to manage this."
A cry of warning from the maid. "Don't frown, Mrs. Gleason!"
At any other time it would have tickled Ken's sense of humor to watch Cecile trying to be angry with a serene face. She struggled up, wound in the sheet, and waved the maid away.
"Oh, all right! Go on out, Alma. I'll ring when I want you."
The woman went, resentment showing in every line of her broad back.

"Now," said Cecile, when they were alone, "perhaps you'll explain the reason for this intrusion!"
Ken raised his brows. "Rather a strong word, isn't it? I intruded, as you call it, because you make it impossible for me to see you at any other time. One would think you deliberately tried to avoid me, Cecile. And I had to see you. I just learned that you invited Cyril Underhill to our dinner party tonight."
"Well!"
"You know I dislike the fellow."
"Is my future life to be guided by your likes and dislikes?"
"That's not fair!" A hint of warmth creeping in despite Ken's effort to remain calm. "It isn't that I want to force my private tastes on you. But you know how I dislike that fellow. A male gossip... a charlatan..."

A Matter of Opinion.
"That is your opinion. Others receive him. He was at Coralie Gaines' party."
Ken's face darkened. "You've only made his case worse in my eyes. Other people whom we know—and value—Look, Mary Eastwood never invites him. You never see him at the Forsythes'."
Cecile forgot the injunction of her maid and the green clay split in a thousand cracks as she scorned.
"Those wash-outs! Do you think I care who they invite? Cyril wouldn't go to their dull parties anyway—"
Ken struggled to keep his temper. "I'm asking you, Cecile—put it as a favor if you wish, to please not invite this fellow to the house. I've heard some of his remarks about women and I don't intend my wife shall be gossiped about."
Cecile's smile was ghastly. "Oh, you are giving orders?"
Ken flushed. "An order to protect my wife and my home from a slanderer's tongue."
Again the white teeth flashed in the dark green mask.
"You are suddenly solicitous about your wife," she said softly, and there was the hiss of a cat in her voice. "Perhaps if you worried more about your own reputation it would be more to the point."
He regarded her with narrowed eyes. "What are you driving at?"
"You know." Still in the soft tone. "But I am not surprised to know that I do as well! Well... I'll speak even more clearly. I'll allow you so much leeway," she held her long white hands a short space apart. "So-o-o much, Ken." She nodded her head.
"That is all. Therefore, you can see, as far as Cyril is concerned—he comes to the dinner tonight. And you will be pleasant to him." The man's eyes were blazing. "I don't know what you're talking about. And if that fellow comes here—"
