...for tobacco properly aged

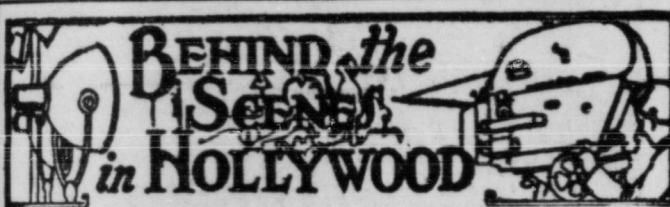

You can't make a good cigarette out of new tobacco... it's something like putting new wine in old bottles. It might look all right, but it certainly wouldn't taste right.

Ageing improves tobacco just like it does wine. Chesterfield tobaccos are aged for three years... it makes them mellow, mild and fragrant

HOLLYWOOD—These Changing Scenes: The nearest thing to perpetual motion Hollywood has seen is Eleanor Powell.

I get worn out just watching her in the "Born to Dance" set. So does everybody else. She rehearses a number as long as anybody will play music for her. At the finish, her feet are still hitting the floor with the speed of a pneumatic drill.

While I am talking to her mother, three men come up and suggest that Eleanor take a rest. The twelve huskies who are pushing the camera car back and forth for the "dolly" shot are perspiring freely.

Dolens of lights beat down upon the set which is a glorified "Lonely Hearts Club" for sailors and their cuties. Men's coats are off and their collars are open, yet Eleanor presently sails over to us as cool as you please.

This slender girl with the velvet trip-hammer legs is on edge with nervous energy. It's been mounting since she arrived at the studio at 7 a. m., with her car radio blaring hot recordings. Now, she's like a thoroughbred at the starting post.

I ask her how she likes dancing to "Old Porter's music."

"It's new to me," she replies, "My dances sort of flow along, if you get what I mean. But Mr. Porter's music is tricky, with a lot of unexpected breaks. The finale number for 'Born to Dance' was written in March time. It was so fast I couldn't dance it well, so I finally had to take a few liberties and slow it down to a rumba tap."

She smiles nervously and adds, "I hope I do all right but, with this music, you can just shut your eyes and see Fred Astaire."

Modesty in Hollywood! What are things coming to?

There will be six new Porter songs in "Born to Dance". Eleanor tells me that "Rap Tap Tap on Wood" is one of the best numbers she has done. Also that Frances Langford has a honey of a love theme and that Virginia Bruce will introduce a number called "I've Got You Under My Skin" that ought to be a second "I Get a Kick Out of You."

Making a technicolor picture tries everybody's patience. Out at Warner Brothers, I watch Director William Keighley make a scene for

"God's Country and the Woman". The camera setups use up hours of the day. Normally, Keighley gets 15 scenes a day. On this picture, he gets five.

George Brent tells me some of his troubles.

All his tan is wasted in "God's Country and the Woman". There's a line under the eyes that the sun doesn't tan evenly. And the face must be absolutely uniform in shade for the technicolor cameras. Brent has to apply a grayish fluid to every inch of his skin that shows. Then makeup on top of that. In natural light, it looks ghastly. Or even if photographed in black and white.

He is having trouble about suits the day I am on the set.

His valet, a colored boy with the longest upper lip this side of Ubangi, keeps bringing new ones in. Gray is about the only color that satisfies the technicolor men, but Director Keighley wants a contrast.

There is a squawk about ties, too. Any sort of bright color in a tie is taboo.

"If they keep arguing enough, they'll have to get a new actor, anyway," says Brent. "With these lights, I'll be lucky if my eyes last through the picture."

A hot argument is in progress when I visit the "Wives Never Know" set at Paramount. Adolphe Menjou and Director Elliott Nugent can't agree on how to pronounce the word "vegetable".

Menjou wants to accent the first syllable and run the rest together. Nugent wants to hear each syllable pronounced clearly.

The scene is one between Adolphe, who plays a cynical novelist, and Mary Boland, who is Charles Ruggles' wife.

Menjou is in full dress and wears a monocle for the second time in his career. His brows don't jut enough to hold it securely, so he has resorted to coating the rim of the glass with toupée wax.

"If it holds some of these actors hair on, it ought to hold this monocle in my eye," he says.

Menjou, an old-timer, is very meticulous about lighting on the set. Before the take begins, he calls to the cameraman:

"Are all my spots working? Is everything on me that should be?"

Preparations have taken a long time, but are justified.

Adolphe and Miss Boland speak four pages of dialog, about 500 feet of film, before he blows a line.

Fort Wayne Negro Dope Dredder Slain

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 20.—(U.P.)—An underworld negro known as "Old Folks" was being hunted here by police today in connection with the murder yesterday of Louis Dupee, 50-year-old negro dope pedler.

Dupee, whose police record included sentences for crimes ranging from petit larceny to murder, was killed by an assailant who cracked his head with a table leg.

Police believed the killing grew out of an argument when Dupee accused two acquaintances of cutting into his dope racket. He had been convicted twice for selling narcotics.

Commission To Open Bridge Bids Aug. 11

Indianapolis, July 20.—Bids on the construction of seven bridges and removal of an old structure will be received by the state highway commission on Tuesday, Aug. 11, it was announced today by James D. Adams, chairman. The structures are to be constructed in Delaware, Allen, Wells, White, Pulaski and Owen counties and have a combined estimated cost of $104,000.

The bridges in Delaware and Allen counties will be financed with federal-aid funds while state funds will be used to finance the work planned in Wells, White, Pulaski, and Owen counties. These projects are a part of the 1936 construction program of the state highway commission and work will be started as soon as possible.

Sentenced To Die For Killing Child

Holldaysburg, Pa., July 20.—(U.P.)—Roy Lockard and Mrs. Margaret Karmendi, illicit lovers who were convicted recently on a charge that they murdered the woman's child for fear he would "carry tales," were sentenced today to die in the electric chair at Rockview penitentiary.

The slayers, each 24, heard the sentences with mixed emotions.

The slender Mrs. Karmendi broke down with the cry, "I am innocent!"

Lockard, the WPA iothario who admitted he killed Mrs. Karmendi's three-year-old son, Matthew, with a railroad spike, smiled broadly as Judge Marion T. Patterson of Blair county court pronounced sentence.

An hour later, Alvey Hennig, 24, Monroeville, Ind., was arrested at Angola, Ind., with the child in his custody. He was being returned from there to face possible charges.

Hennig and his wife, Mrs. Helen Hennig, 21, the child's mother were divorced here last April. Since that time Mrs. Hennig and the baby have been living with Mrs. C. W. Dailey, Mrs. Hennig's mother.

Elderly Huntington Couple Killed Today

Huntington, Ind., July 20.—(U.P.)—Mr. and Mrs. Anthony A. Weber, elderly Huntington couple, were killed instantly today in an automobile collision on state road 9, north of here.

Ralph C. Hughes, Anderson, driver of the other car, his wife and three small boys, escaped injury although their automobile overturned three times.

Mr. and Mrs. Weber were the parents of Paul G. Weber, field examiner for the state tax board and Huntington county Democratic chairman. The elder Weber was a former clerk of Huntington circuit court.

Monroeville Man May Face Kidnap Charge

Coldwater, Mich., July 20.—(U.P.)—A "kidnaping" alarm was broadcast by local police to all sheriffs' offices in this vicinity today when Richard Charles Hennig, 3, disappeared from the home of his grandmother.

An hour later, Alvey Hennig, 24, Monroeville, Ind., was arrested at Angola, Ind., with the child in his custody. He was being returned from there to face possible charges.

Columbia City Store Manager Is Killed

Columbia City, Ind., July 20.—(U.P.)—John France, 35, chain grocery store manager, here, was killed last night when he dived into shallow water at Lake Wawasee. His neck was broken and his skull fractured.

Filling Station Man Slugged And Robbed

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 20.—(U.P.)—Bandits last night slugged Edwin C. Knake, filling station operator, and robbed him of $160. Knake suffered a brain concussion when he was knocked unconscious.

"Hot Trail" Is Traced

San Francisco —(U.P.)—Federal Writers' Project workers believe they have found a new origin for the expression "hot trail." They have discovered that the early Padre explorers of California scattered mustard seed as they advanced into unknown country, and when they wished to return a few weeks later
