TO PROSECUTE

New Jersey by California authorities.

Mrs. McCarter, ill in New Jersey for the past several months is at liberty under bond, awaiting an extradition hearing to be called by Gov. Harold G. Hoffman. She is accused of being a fugitive of California justice, and faces a hearing in the Jersey City police court on a charge of attempted suicide.

Meanwhile, 22-year-old Miss Hewitt's civil suit for $500,000, naming her mother, Dr. Tilton Tillman, Dr. Samuel Boyd, and state psychiatrist Mary S. Scally apparently suffered a serious setback through dismissal of mayhem conspiracy charges against the two physicians.

Tillman and Boyd, freed unconditionally by a directed verdict of Superior Judge Raglan Tittle. Judge Tittle, in reading his decision before a crowded courtroom, took the case out of the jurisdiction of the jury, and, with the prosecution attorneys on their feet shouting objections, rendered a precedent-setting opinion in which he declared sterilization is not a crime in California.

"It may be unfair not to give a girl of 19 or 20 the right to say whether she was to be sterilized or not, but that is a matter for the legislature, not the court to adjust," Judge Tittle said.

Europe Admires Groundhog

Quebec, Que. (U.P.) The groundhog, considered a nuisance on the North American continent, is coveted as a rare specimen of animal life by European zoos. Six pairs of the rodents, born this spring at the Charles-machine-age, and that life in Chicago was just the same as she had left it, six days before? It was incredible.

No, life in Chicago would not be the same as she had left it. It would be even more drear and desolate when she returned. Though she took with her the glowing memories of these days, the winds would be more bleak, the days more routine, the infrequent pleasures less gratifying, for the revelation of that which had once been a shining hope would be only a memory, also.

Love, which to Lynn had been a beckoning mirage on the distant horizon, was faded now into the disillusion of limitless sky. It had come, dazzling and powerful for a moment—and gone, forever.

She knew. Until now, she had told herself that she was merely fascinated by Jackson Thorpe, because he was the most attractive man she had ever known. But Dewey was a fascinating man—and left her cold with an inexpressible revulsion.

There were others of Doti's friends who were attractive, as she had seen men in the north. But Jack, whom the merest thought set her pulses pounding, and thoughts of him crowded into every waking moment and every experience—Jack was outstanding.

She understood now why her mother had left all this comfort and beauty for John Bartel. How strange that love was now driving her away from the same things—no taking her away. If only she might have that choice—to leave it all with Jack. Gladly, then; ah, rapturously. But hers was the greater sacrifice. She must leave her heritage—and Jack, also.

But she never must let him know. She never must let Doti suspect. She wondered if she could remain with them for two more days without betraying to them this powerful thing which held her in his tenacious grasp.

The following day was even more difficult, Lynn discovered. Once she had admitted to herself the depth and significance of her love for Jack, she felt as if every word and glance betrayed her. For that reason, she was adversely indifferent and aloof, avoiding every possible contact with him at the same time every nerve of her clamored for his nearness.

They went in the morning on a steamer cruise down the river for several miles, returning by bus. "We couldn't get back for tea if we came by boat. It takes so much longer to come up, against the current," Doti explained. "But I want you to have this river trip. You'll see a lot of things you miss on shore."

"It will be lovely," Lynn enthused. She was so grateful to Doti for all this pleasure. That was what made her feel so extremely guilty about Jack. If he had belonged to anyone else...

They motored to the wharf where the clamor of industry reminded Lynn for the first time of Chicago. She had the same haste, of course, but an effort to achieve it, at least. The odors of rotting wood, oily rope, coal smoke and river sewage were reminiscent, also. The harbor was filled with all kinds of water craft, even a clumsy old side-wheel steamer lounged beside the dock. Its narrow decks and wooden hull looked dejected and pathetic beside the trim steel hull of the excursion

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U. S.

You studied it in school; you got excited about some of the amendments in recent years; you read the Supreme Court decisions holding that a lot of legislation is not in accord with the Constitution; you hear Democrat and Republican orators tell how they want to save it—but how much do you really know about it? Our Service Bureau at Washington has a 24-page booklet on "The Making of the U. S. Constitution." It contains in brief a history of how the famous document came to be drawn up; who its makers were; the full text of the Constitution itself; facts about the men who signed it, and those who refused to sign; the historic facts of its adoption; and the full text of all amendments, and how and when they were proposed and adopted. If you want this educational booklet, fill out the coupon below and mail as directed:
