

OLD-FASHIONED AQUAFORIUM FINDS FAVOR WITH MODERNS

Rosebuds, Gladiolus, Aster and Other Solid Centered Flowers Are Displayed Handsomely in This Novel Container.

An old-fashioned attraction in grandmother's crowded living room was the aquafiorium, a clear glass globe filled with water and usually containing a few rosebuds, or any garden flowers she happened to have.

The aquafiorium is coming back into favor, reshaped somewhat, with clearer glass, and a modernized pedestal. It is the same idea, reappearing after a few years like some of the fashions in dress, yet it produces a remarkably modern effect in the room.

The flower buds immersed in the globe filled with water give off a phosphorescent glow, which is more striking in its novelty than many a modernistic painting.

It is interesting to see how different flowers will appear in one. The florets from a spike of gladiolus, for instance, will take on elongated shapes from one angle, and seem almost round from another. The dainty petals of the aster will seemingly take on considerable weight, as water bubbles settle on them. The same is true of the carnation. Marigolds will appear much less bold, as their rich colors are tempered by the water and the air bubbles.

Almost any flower head which has a firm center will be displayed well in an aquafiorium, and in many cases they will be preserved for a week before replacement. Take a few flowers from the supply you get at the florists' for an arrangement, and put them in the aquafiorium. You will find the practice interesting as there are so many ways of arranging them inside the bowl, and they take on such different colors and shapes.

There are many preparations sold which can be added to the water to make it stay sweet for a long period of time. It is a good idea to procure one of these, although a pinch of charcoal dust will do almost as well.

FLOWER FASHION NOTES

The new flower vase bookends make a fine gift or bridge prize. They are usually made of pottery heavy enough to hold several vases, and are handsome with or without flowers.

Let flowers stand in a container of cold water for an hour or more before trying to make an arrangement.

A flower container should never be conspicuous—it's the flowers themselves which should be seen.
