

ORDINANCE
(An ordinance of the City of Decatur, Indiana, annexing contiguous territory to the City of Decatur, Indiana.)

SECTION I. Be it ordained by the Common Council of and for the City of Decatur, Indiana, that the following described territory in Adams County, Indiana, contiguous to the City of Decatur, Indiana, be and the same is hereby annexed to and declared to be a part of the City of Decatur, Indiana, and declared to be within the jurisdiction of the City of Decatur, Indiana, consolidated with and made a part of the City of Decatur, Indiana, to-wit:

Commencing at a point twenty (20) feet west of an iron pin located at the northeast corner of the north-east quarter of section ten (10) in township twenty seven (27) north of range fourteen (14) east, thence west along the north line of said section ten (10) township and range aforesaid for a distance of 123.5 feet, thence south for a distance of 264.6 feet, thence east for a distance of 265.5 feet to the place of beginning, being in the east half of the the northeast quarter of said section ten (10) township and range aforesaid.

SECTION II. Be it further ordained that this ordinance shall be in force and effect from and after its passage and publication for two consecutive weeks in a daily newspaper of general circulation printed and published in the City of Decatur in Adams County, Indiana.

Passed and adopted by the Common Council of the City of Decatur, Indiana, this 2nd day of February 1937.

Approved and signed by the Mayor this 2nd day of February, 1937.

ARTHUR R. HOLTHOUSE
Mayor

Attest: Ada Martin, City Clerk.
Feb. 4-11

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Lewton left today for Cincinnati, where they will visit for several days.

RED CROSS Flood Relief Fund

Winchester U. B.	$10.00
A friend	5.00
Geneva Church of Christ	20.61
Geneva school	69.19
Philo class, Baptist church	5.00
Berne, Indiana	24.00
Total	$6,251.79

Test Your Knowledge

Can you answer seven of these ten questions? Turn to page Four for the answers.

1. Can a person practice law in any state without being admitted to the bar?
2. Where is the Painted Desert?
3. What and where is Spuyten Duyvil?
4. Name the first Chief Justice of the U. S.
5. Who wrote, "The Sign of the Cross"?
6. What two bodies of water does the Kiel canal connect?

TODAY'S COMMON ERROR

Never say, "I can come most any day," say, "almost any day."

Public Auction

I am quitting farming and will sell at Public Auction 2 miles West and 1-4 mile South of Ossian, on Saturday, February 13, 1937.

COMMENCING AT 10:00 A. M.

—HEAD OF HORSES—

Sorrel Brood Mare, 10 yr. old, wt. 1900; Sorrel Gelding, 2 yr. old, light mane & tail, wt. 1800, a real horse; Chestnut Sorrel Gelding, 2 yr. old, wt. 1600, a good Colt; Light color Sorrel, coming yearling, a good colt.

—HEAD OF CATTLE—

6 good Shorthorn Cows, 1 with calf by side; 2 Shorthorn Roan Bulls, old enough for service; 2 Shorthorn Bulls, 5 mo. old.

IMPLEMENTS, ETC.—Good Farm Wagon & Hay Ladder; J. Deere 2 Row Cultivator, good; Manure Spreader; Corn Planter; IHC Side Delivery Rake; Tedder; Dain Hay Loader; McCormick Mower, 5 ft.; End Gate Seeder; Gang Plow, 12 inch; Double set Breaching Harness; Collars; Good Corn Shelter; Grass Seeder; South Bend Range Cook Stove; Oil Range, like new; Copper Kettle; Dining Table; Kitchen Table; Chairs; Sewing Machine; and many articles too numerous to mention.

TERMS—Cash. Anyone desiring credit make arrangements at Ossian Bank.

C. W. ALLEN, Owner.

ROY JOHNSON—Auctioneer,
Ossian Bank—Clerk.
M. E. Missionary Society Serves Lunch.

The Chittenden, located on High Street, adjacent to shopping and theatrical districts, offers large, spacious rooms and splendid service.

The Oasis and the Show Boat, both rooms featuring entertainment, are the centers of night life in Columbus. Large ballroom and private dining rooms are available.

FIREPROOF JOHN R. DIGNAN Manager

HOTEL CHITTENDEN

One Of The

PICK HOTELS
4500 ROOMS IN 8 STATES

CHICAGO, ILL. .... GREAT NORTHERN HOTEL
DETROIT, MICHIGAN .... TULLER HOTEL
DAYTON, OHIO .... MIAMI HOTEL
COLUMBUS, OHIO .... CHITTENDEN HOTEL
CINCINNATI, OHIO .... FOUNTAIN BOULEVARD HOTEL
CANTON, OHIO .... BELDEN HOTEL

PICK, in print, should always suggest ALBERT PICK HOTELS

THIMBLE THEATER

7. Name the last Democratic President before Franklin D. Roosevelt.
8. Of what group of islands is Manila the capital?
9. How much does the blood in a human body weigh?
10. What degree do the initials J. S. D. stand for?

Trade in a Good Town — Decatur
Vatican City, Feb. 11. — (U.P.)

"LUXURY" MODEL by MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XVII

"Don't let's talk of me. I want to hear all about yourself. Where are you living?" Mrs. Vandaveer asked Jimmy.

"On Elizabeth street. Down in Greenwich Village. Elizabeth street used to be a fashionable residential street several decades ago. It's shabby now."

"But full of atmosphere," she supplemented. "I suppose you have a studio?"

"Of sorts. More of an attic with a good-sized skylight. But it suffices."

Mrs. Vandaveer clasped her hands dramatically together. He noticed she had beautiful, slim hands, extraordinarily white. An effect produced by hand cream carefully applied after every washing, and by sleeping in rubber gloves nightly that were fairly lined with tissue creams—but he was not to know that.

"I would adore seeing your studio. Would you think it a bother if I dropped in some afternoon to look at your work?"

What could he say but that he would be glad to see her, although he was afraid she would not think much of his abode?

"But I'm mad about artists. I mean," she corrected herself quickly. "I'm enormously interested in creative work. Over in Paris I've loads of friends who are painters and writers and sculptors, and some of them live in the Latin Quarter." A delightful memory came back to her. "I even had a studio once in Montparnasse where I hoped I'd do things. But I'm afraid I didn't accomplish much."

Which was an understatement. Unknown to her husband Joel, who was residing with her in Paris at the time on the fashionable Champs Elysees, Lorraine had done plenty in her Latin Quarter studio, on the fly.

There had been the young painter, Reoul Destouches...

Then Anton Karisloff, the Russian sculptor.

How fierce but how wonderfully had Anton made love!

"I may be going over to Paris very shortly," said Jimmy Randolph eagerly, "because the School of Architectural Design in New York often makes an exchange of students on a short summer course. Three or four French students come over here, you know, and New York ones take their place."

"But how wonderful! I may be going over shortly!" Lorraine gave him the full benefit of her beautiful jade eyes. "I usually go over to Paris for the late Spring meetings. Paris is romantic as a dream in the merry month of May. It would be fun to see Paris together, wouldn't it?" She smiled at him under her long thick lashes, and he had the curious, breathless sensation of drowning in shining green pools of light.

Luana Waters quickly gained the reputation of being New York's loveliest model.

Her success was amazing for an unknown girl. Needless to say, it aroused plenty of jealousy among the other mannequins in the House of Quackenbush.

Success brings envy and backbiting, and all the more so where beauty is involved.

The pick of the big social functions in the well-known "little season" fell to Luana. Mr. Quackenbush was shrewd. He wished his loveliest and most talked-of model to appear at all the newest and smartest haunts and nightclubs where the rich foregathered, dressed in his most exquisite creations.

She must appear, too, at the big charity balls, and at the smart race meetings. Indeed, everywhere that le monde qui s'amuse is found.

Luana soon grew accustomed to it, and lost some of her shyness, as was natural. What 19-year-old girl would fail to enjoy making a stir in expensive and exclusive places, secure in the knowledge that she was groomed and coiffured and dressed and shod exquisitely, and that the eyes of innumerable women—and men too—attractive, important men-about-town—were turned on her admiringly? It was dazzling to a girl who had been kept short of money all her nineteen years, and whose existence had been almost that of the convent in its seclusion.

Arranged in a dazzling gown, Luana would appear at the side of Adolphe Quackenbush on the opening night of plays—or perhaps her new friend, Jimmy Randolph, would be her escort.

Though Jimmy enjoyed the theater, he did not enjoy having his expensive ticket donated by Luana—or rather, by the House of Quackenbush. He resented that.

Which was foolish of him, as Luana often told him, but she was up against the well-known pride of a Southerner.

There was no hint of love-making. Memory of Gerald Bruton was still strong, though Luana realized perfectly that she had never really loved the man who had gone through a mean, glass marriage ceremony with her in Yuma, Arizona. She shuddered when she thought of its sequel in San Diego, when Gerald had been arrested.

Her one fear now was that the successful, much-talked-of young model, Luana Waters, might be linked any day in the newspapers with the erstwhile Elizabeth Harmon!

Mr. Quackenbush insisted on publicity, and the more the better, from the point of view of his business.

At the Spring meet of the United Hunts Association on Long Island she was repeatedly photographed. During an al fresco luncheon in the famous Turf and Field Club at the same place, the press photographers were busy with their cameras, and Luana had as much attention in her smart racing clothes as the best-known Society woman.

It was impossible to hide her face. Suppose someone from Los Angeles or San Diego would recognize her?

But after a time she grew accustomed to the risk. The only custom possible—if she was asked point-blank—would be to flatly deny the connection.

Jimmy's absolute honesty, his straightforward point of view, charmed her and yet made her afraid.

If he learned she had given herself what amounted to a new identity, under an assumed name, would her friendship with him come to an abrupt finish?

How much that friendship meant to her she did not yet fully realize. But the knowledge that at the end of a busy day she would see Jimmy, that he was accompanying her to some function, was like a little song in her heart.

The cheerfulness of one who, in the first days of their acquaintance, had been often strangely moody, whetted the curiosity of the French girl, Yvonne.

She thought Luana a fool to bother with a penniless youth like Jimmy Randolph when she could have her pick of many eligible men.

"Art-ests? Poof! Sel-dom do they have money, Luana. As bewte-ful as you are, you are wasting the time!"

She felt it magnanimous to tell her so, since—during the evenings Luana often spent with Jimmy that were within his narrow means—on riding on bus tops up by the side of the Hudson—Yvonne reaped the benefit of theater tickets, or tickets for big charity fetes or balls.

"He has a wonderful character," Luana would say quietly. "He's an architect, not the kind of artist you're talking of. One of these days he will make a great name for himself."

Yvonne had sniffed: "Yes, when you are old and faded waiting for him, my friend."

(To Be Continued)

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"I would adore to see your studio," said Mrs. Vandaveer. "Would you think it a bother if I dropped in some afternoon?"

recipient of the crumbs that figuratively fell from Luana's table, in the way of theater tickets, invitations to balls and parties, and smart functions, and fetes for charity.

Behind her back, Yvonne seldom lost a chance of belittling Luana to Armand, and even lying about her.

"She is so deep one. Ze steell water run deep. If she is so good, so prop-are, why she pick up a young man on ze roof-tops? The nights I go out, he come in and is alone with her for hours and hours. Armand, it is my belief thees young Jeemy Randolph is her lov-air!"

Armand fully believed it. Nothing would give him greater pleasure than to cut Jimmy out.

He believed, too, that Luana was merely coquetting with him when she repulsed him. Not that he had ever had a chance to put her to the test, since Yvonne had eyes like the proverbial hawk, and was jealous as a she-devil!

To allay any suspicions about Luana, and thus amatory feeling she had roused in him, he went Yvonne one better in his belittling of the girl when she was absent.

"American women have no fire, no emotion. Seldom is a Frenchman ever happy with an American," he would unctuously announce. "The women are all spoiled and selfish. They have no real passion."

"How clay-are you are, Armand! You are the clay-arest, handsomest man in New York." Yvonne would fall into his arms, secure in the knowledge that what American women lacked, she had... plus.

"This Luana is not really pretty. She has a flat bosom. She has no hips."

Yvonne would beam at that. Armand was a true artist. Yvonne was crazy about him. When an ardent girl of her type loves, she can be ruthless in the chase, and woe betide anyone who comes between her and her sweetheart!

The friendship between Luana and Jimmy Randolph flourished apace.

There was no hint of love-making. Memory of Gerald Bruton was still strong, though Luana realized perfectly that she had never really loved the man who had gone through a mean, glass marriage ceremony with her in Yuma, Arizona. She shuddered when she thought of its sequel in San Diego, when Gerald had been arrested.

Her one fear now was that the successful, much-talked-of young model, Luana Waters, might be linked any day in the newspapers with the erstwhile Elizabeth Harmon!

Mr. Quackenbush insisted on publicity, and the more the better, from the point of view of his business.

At the Spring meet of the United Hunts Association on Long Island she was repeatedly photographed. During an al fresco luncheon in the famous Turf and Field Club at the same place, the press photographers were busy with their cameras, and Luana had as much attention in her smart racing clothes as the best-known Society woman.

It was impossible to hide her face. Suppose someone from Los Angeles or San Diego would recognize her?

But after a time she grew accustomed to the risk. The only custom possible—if she was asked point-blank—would be to flatly deny the connection.

Jimmy's absolute honesty, his straightforward point of view, charmed her and yet made her afraid.

If he learned she had given herself what amounted to a new identity, under an assumed name, would her friendship with him come to an abrupt finish?

How much that friendship meant to her she did not yet fully realize. But the knowledge that at the end of a busy day she would see Jimmy, that he was accompanying her to some function, was like a little song in her heart.

The cheerfulness of one who, in the first days of their acquaintance, had been often strangely moody, whetted the curiosity of the French girl, Yvonne.

She thought Luana a fool to bother with a penniless youth like Jimmy Randolph when she could have her pick of many eligible men.

"Art-ests? Poof! Sel-dom do they have money, Luana. As bewte-ful as you are, you are wasting the time!"

She felt it magnanimous to tell her so, since—during the evenings Luana often spent with Jimmy that were within his narrow means—on riding on bus tops up by the side of the Hudson—Yvonne reaped the benefit of theater tickets, or tickets for big charity fetes or balls.

"He has a wonderful character," Luana would say quietly. "He's an architect, not the kind of artist you're talking of. One of these days he will make a great name for himself."

Yvonne had sniffed: "Yes, when you are old and faded waiting for him, my friend."

(To Be Continued)

Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"I would adore to see your studio," said Mrs. Vandaveer. "Would you think it a bother if I dropped in some afternoon?"

recipient of the crumbs that figuratively fell from Luana's table, in the way of theater tickets, invitations to balls and parties, and smart functions, and fetes for charity.

Behind her back, Yvonne seldom lost a chance of belittling Luana to Armand, and even lying about her.

"She is so deep one. Ze steell water run deep. If she is so good, so prop-are, why she pick up a young man on ze roof-tops? The nights I go out, he come in and is alone with her for hours and hours. Armand, it is my belief thees young Jeemy Randolph is her lov-air!"

Armand fully believed it. Nothing would give him greater pleasure than to cut Jimmy out.

He believed, too, that Luana was merely coquetting with him when she repulsed him. Not that he had ever had a chance to put her to the test, since Yvonne had eyes like the proverbial hawk, and was jealous as a she-devil!

To allay any suspicions about Luana, and thus amatory feeling she had roused in him, he went Yvonne one better in his belittling of the girl when she was absent.

"American women have no fire, no emotion. Seldom is a Frenchman ever happy with an American," he would unctuously announce. "The women are all spoiled and selfish. They have no real passion."

"How clay-are you are, Armand! You are the clay-arest, handsomest man in New York." Yvonne would fall into his arms, secure in the knowledge that what American women lacked, she had... plus.

"This Luana is not really pretty. She has a flat bosom. She has no hips."

Yvonne would beam at that. Armand was a true artist. Yvonne was crazy about him. When an ardent girl of her type loves, she can be ruthless in the chase, and woe betide anyone who comes between her and her sweetheart!

The friendship between Luana and Jimmy Randolph flourished apace.

There was no hint of love-making. Memory of Gerald Bruton was still strong, though Luana realized perfectly that she had never really loved the man who had gone through a mean, glass marriage ceremony with her in Yuma, Arizona. She shuddered when she thought of its sequel in San Diego, when Gerald had been arrested.

Her one fear now was that the successful, much-talked-of young model, Luana Waters, might be linked any day in the newspapers with the erstwhile Elizabeth Harmon!

Mr. Quackenbush insisted on publicity, and the more the better, from the point of view of his business.

At the Spring meet of the United Hunts Association on Long Island she was repeatedly photographed. During an al fresco luncheon in the famous Turf and Field Club at the same place, the press photographers were busy with their cameras, and Luana had as much attention in her smart racing clothes as the best-known Society woman.

It was impossible to hide her face. Suppose someone from Los Angeles or San Diego would recognize her?

But after a time she grew accustomed to the risk. The only custom possible—if she was asked point-blank—would be to flatly deny the connection.

Jimmy's absolute honesty, his straightforward point of view, charmed her and yet made her afraid.

If he learned she had given herself what amounted to a new identity, under an assumed name, would her friendship with him come to an abrupt finish?

How much that friendship meant to her she did not yet fully realize. But the knowledge that at the end of a busy day she would see Jimmy, that he was accompanying her to some function, was like a little song in her heart.

The cheerfulness of one who, in the first days of their acquaintance, had been often strangely moody, whetted the curiosity of the French girl, Yvonne.

She thought Luana a fool to bother with a penniless youth like Jimmy Randolph when she could have her pick of many eligible men.

"Art-ests? Poof! Sel-dom do they have money, Luana. As bewte-ful as you are, you are wasting the time!"

Happy because today was the eighth anniversary of the Lateran treaty with Italy by which the papal sovereignty was restored, Pope Pius was reported in excellent spirits after a sound sleep.

He was quoted as saying that he offered communion this morning as thanks to God that he saw another anniversary of the Lateran pact which he is said to have characterized as "one of the happiest events of our pontificate."

The anniversary was celebrated not only in Vatican City but throughout Italy as a holiday, and the Italian and papal colors were flown.

Markets At A Glance

Stocks: higher quiet after heavy early operation.
Bonds: irregularly higher, South American strong.
Curb stocks: irregular.
Chicago stocks: higher.
Call money: one per cent.
Foreign exchange: irregular.
Netherland guilders weak.
Cotton: 2 to 7 points higher.

Appointment of Executor No. 1750
Notice is hereby given, That the undersigned has been appointed Executor of the estate of Davidson Mattox, late of Adams County, deceased. The estate is probably solvent.

William Webster Eley, Executor.
C. L. Walters, Attorney.
February 9, 1937. Feb. 11-18-25

Appointment of Administrator With Will Annexed No. 3364
Notice is hereby given, That the undersigned has been appointed Administrator with will annexed of the estate of Arminia E. Cross Heckler, late of Adams County, deceased. The estate is probably solvent.

C. L. Walters, Administrator with will annexed.
C. L. Walters, Attorney.
February 9, 1937. Feb. 11-18-25

SALE CALENDAR

Roy S. Johnson

Auctioneer
Decatur, Ind.

Claim your sale date early as I am booking sales every day.

Feb. 12—Decatur Riverside Stock Sale.

Feb. 13—C. W. Allen, 2 miles West and 1/2 mile South of Ossian, closing out.

Feb. 15—Frank Morton, 1 mile East of Poe on Winchester road, closing out.

Feb. 16—Mrs. Clara Weir, 1 mile North of Haviland, Ohio on No. 127, closing out.

Feb. 17—Clint Hart, 1/2 mile East of Jefferson high school, closing out.

Feb. 17—William Bradley, 1 mi. West of Tipton, Ohio on State road No. 114, Carl Bartlett, auct.

Feb. 18—Otto Kuhn, 3 1/2 miles South and 1 mile East of Convoys, Ohio, closing out.

Feb. 19—Decatur Riverside Stock Sale.

Feb. 20—Ralph Etzler 2 1/2 mile South of Monroeville, closing out.

Feb. 22—Louis Vorrel 1 1/4 mile East of Zulu, closing out.

Feb. 23—Frank Orr, 3 mile North of Celina on No. 127, closing out.

Feb. 24—Herbert Buttemeyer, 3 mile Southeast of Poe, closing out.

Feb. 25—Homer Mills, 3 miles North and 1/2 mile East of Bluffton, large stock sale.

Feb. 26—Decatur Riverside Stock Sale.

Feb. 27—Bert Marquardt on Lincoln Highway, North of Monroeville, Registered Chester White Bred Sow sale.

Mar. 1—Jim Dutton, Mendon, O. Farm Implements.

Mar. 2—Joe McDuffee, 1 mile South of LaOtto on No. 3.

Mar. 4—Paul Bobay & Son, 1 mile West and 1 mile North Nine Mile House, closing out.

Mar. 5—Decatur Riverside Stock Sale.

Mar. 6—Otto Huebner, Monroeville, closing out Dairy Herd.

Mar. 8—Austin McMichael and William Maulier, 5 miles east of Decatur on the Piqua road.

N. A. BIXLER
OPTOMETRIST

Eyes Examined - Glasses Fitted
HOURS
8:30 to 11:30 12:30 to 5:00

Saturdays, 8:00 p. m.
Telephone 135.

By SEGAR

TAKE HIM