Roosevelt backer, including his public support of the court reform plan and endorsement of the similar stand taken by Sherman Minton, Indiana's junior U. S. senator.

4. He has a political organization daily growing more powerful with new administration patronage. Also the very obvious efforts of the governor to compose all factions of the party into a united front for the 1938 election are bearing fruit, and he may be in a strong position to swing Indiana, a "pivotal" state, democratic in 1940.

Illustrative of the last point is the appointment of Pleas E. Greenlee of Shelbyville to the new federal coal control commission. Greenlee was Townsend's bitterest opponent for the nomination for governor. He was sponsored for the $10,000 a year job by Minton, Townsend's political ally and vociferous supporter of the court reform plan. Townsend did not oppose Greenlee for the appointment as far as is known, indicating in this stand, as well as by giving important jobs to several Greenlee gubernatorial backers, that he wants to heal the 1936 breach.

Townsend may be the beneficiary of the McNutt presidential activity, since if McNutt falls short of his goal Indiana may be given recognition nationally by selection of Townsend for vice-president.

The idea is being more than toyed with by close Townsend advisors such as Alex Pursey and no doubt Farley will be thoroughly informed of the governor's political virtues before he leaves Indianapolis in the morning.

ernment to aid in flood control. The city council forwarded a resolution to Washington asking that congress appropriate funds to help the program.

At Wheeling, the Ohio rose to 45.8 feet—9.8 feet above flood stage—and then remained stationary. It was expected to remain at that level for several hours and then recede. Wheeling

Plan Control
Washington, Apr. 28 — (U.P.) — President Roosevelt planned a program of quick-starting flood control projects today, but demands for an immense outlay which arose with the nation's newest floods appeared stemmed by his new economy policy.

Although the president ordered the army engineers to pick from their list of $500,000,000 worth of river control projects a few on which work can begin immediately, his budget for the coming fiscal year permits expenditures of only $52,500,000.

Even Rep. William J. Driver, D., Ark., new president of the national rivers and harbors congress, qualified his demands for $100,000,000 with the declaration that he is "substantially in agreement" with administration leaders in congress who seek to keep all appropriations, including those for flood control, at the budget level.

The waterways body adjourned its 32nd annual convention yesterday after demanding "ample" appropriations by congress to start immediate construction of a substantial part of the projects authorized last year by the omnibus flood control and the overton acts.

Island, home of 10,000 persons, was covered with water. About 2,000 fled from their homes and the remainder moved to upper floors.

The Ohio below Bellaire was expected to absorb the flood crest.

The Ohio river rose to 37 feet today at Marietta, O., and Parkersburg, W. Va., and was expected to go to 39 feet — three feet above flood level. The crest was expected about midnight.

Lowlands near Marietta were flooded and the tributary Muskingum river was dammed up by the Ohio. Cellars were flooded for several blocks back from the river but few residences had water on first floors.

The rapid run-off and "flattening out" of the river from Marietta to Cincinnati led weather observers to predict there would be no serious floods over that stretch. A 40-foot crest was predicted for Cincinnati, which has a 52-foot flood stage.
