YANKS RETAIN WORLD SERIES CHAMPIONSHIP

Beat Giants In Final, 4-2; Tony Lazzeri Named The Hero

New York, Oct. 11.—(U.P.)—Age before beauty, they always say, so today Tony Lazzeri, a homely, wrinkled hunchback of 34 years, emerged as the hero of the 1937 world series.

He led the New York Yankees to the baseball championship over the New York Giants—led them to their sixth world title, more than any club ever has won. He led them with his hitting, his fielding and his dashing play that stood out in every game.

"Poosh 'em up Tony" is at his best around second base and at the plate when the blue chips are on the line and the ball game's on the fire, and he stood on the peaks today, one of the most glamorous and valuable players of all time.

Lazzeri and his teammates collected approximately $5,336 apiece for winning their second straight "subway" series, while the Giants each pocketed the losers' share of approximately $2,891. The players' pool of $417,305.97, based on the receipts for the first four games, was the third largest in series history.

The 238,146 fans who watched the five-game series saw the Yankees walk away with the first three contests by scores of 8-1, 8-1 and 5-1, only to be stopped dead in the fourth Saturday by Carl Hubbell, veteran Giants' southpaw, who pitched his mates to a 7-3 victory.

Lefty Gomez, the goofy one, who has never lost a series game, fired his Sunday pitch past the Giants to win the final game, 4-2, before 38,216 fans on a bleak, chilly day. The Giants rapped Gomez for 10 hits, but they could not score in the clutch. The only way they ever got a man around was when Mel Ott hit the only Giants' homer of the series with Dick Bartell on base in the third inning to tie the score.

That was only drama for Gomez, fidgeting out there on the muddy hill (it rained all night before), he never for one minute looked like he was afraid of any of the Giants. When an airplane flew overhead, he gazed at it. When Johnny (Grand-ma) Murphy, Yanks' money-in-the-bank relief pitcher, started warming up in the bullpen, Gomez walked way out there and chuckled. When arguments raged about a catcher's interference with a hitters' bat, Lefty only laughed.

Every time the Giants threatened, Gomez slammed that fireball of his down the alley. And when things got really serious there was old Tony scampering around second base, saving the ball game.

The Giants had a man on in the fifth ready to start a rally when Lazzeri scooped up a grounder to retire the side. They had two men on in the sixth when Lazzeri gobbled up Burgess Whitehead's grounder to end the inning. In the seventh they put two men on again, when Lazzeri smothered Ripple's roller and threw him out at first.

The run which won the title, decided the series and kept the Yanks on baseball's pinnacle was scored by Lazzeri. He swung with all his might at one of Cliff Melton's pitches in the fifth inning. He met the ball solidly and it took wings. Hank Leiber and Jimmy Ripple chased it all the way to the right field bleachers, approximately 450 feet from home plate—one of the longest drives in world series annals.

Tony pulled up at third. Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, called the infield in on the grass to try to catch Tony, at the plate. Gomez, a .200 hitter who swings like a wash woman, was up there. He hit a hot drive toward Whitehead. The ball caromed off the Giants' second baseman's glove and Lazzeri scored the winning run.

The Yanks added another, which they didn't need but which helped Gomez in the clutch, when Lu Gehrig doubled Lefty home. Two home runs, one by Myril Hoag in the second and another by Joe Di Maggio in the third, were the opening blasts that greeted Mountain Music Melton when he stepped out to duplicate Hubbell's Saturday triumph. Melton was replaced by a pinch hitter in the fifth, and Smith and Brennan finished for the Giants.

Throughout the series—the first The Yanks played errorless ball team in history not to make at least one bobbie. The Giants finished with nine errors, distributed through the 1st, 3rd and 4th games.

Lazzeri, who sparkled in the field and at bat, wiped out the last stubborn stain of the 1926 series when he was the goat, a rookie whom the great Grover Cleveland Alexander struck out with the bases loaded in the big moment of the seventh and deciding game.

He walked off the field yesterday after one of the greatest performances under fire in the world series history. He led every one in batting with an average of .400 in a 5-game series where every pitcher bears down all the way. In the field he played flawlessly, handling 27 chances without a bobbie. He raced over to second and made plays. He skipped over near first and gobbled up grounders. He trapped pop flies. He swung a dangerous, damaging bat.

Tony is packing his duds, the tools of his trade, and going home. He's through he says, hanging up his glove, never to come back to the majors again unless he gets a job as a major league manager. But there are some who say that after he looks at the record, he'll be back in there when the Yanks open their 1938 campaign.

NOTRE DAME IS FOUGHT TO TIE WITH ILLINOIS

Illinois Holds Irish To Scoreless Tie Saturday

Chicago, Oct. 11.—(U.P.)—Northwestern's Big Ten champions once more were at the top of the conference standings today but a new threat has fallen across their rough road to a second straight championship. The new obstacle is Illinois.

Talented but green, the Illini throttled Notre Dame's dreaded attack Saturday, bottled up its passes at crucial moments and earned a scoreless tie. Purdue, Minnesota and Ohio State already block Northwestern's path.

The Wildcats, who opened their title defense by defeating Michigan, will meet Purdue at Evanston this week while Minnesota invades Michigan. Illinois travels to Indiana, Iowa plays at Wisconsin and Chicago battles Princeton in the lone inter-sectional game in the middle west.

Michigan's stubborn defense forced Northwestern into the air and Capt. Don Heap, Bernie Jefferson and sophomore Jack Ryan promptly answered with a touchdown in the third period. The three completed eight of 13 passes, scoring on Heap's throw to Cleo Diehl, an end, in the end zone.

At Illinois, it was a battle of lines, Illinois with its inspired forward wall and Notre Dame with veterans striving to keep the Illini whirling from sweeping them off their feet. Illinois threatened in the first period and missed a placement after reaching the 14-yard line. Notre Dame clawed as far as the 12 in the second period but failed to get past the 40 for the remainder of the game.

Despite the fierceness of play, Illinois may be in better shape for the Indiana game than Indiana. The Hoosiers, with a smaller squad than Illinois, halted the Gophers for the second week in a row but finally succumbed to power, 6 to 0. Minnesota scored in the second period on a short march after a poor Indiana punt. Wilbur Moore carried it over.

Wisconsin's new found power gradually wore out Chicago and the Bedegs poured on two touchdowns in the fourth period as they rolled up a 27 to 0 victory. Iowa tapered off for its conference opener by coming from behind to defeat Bradley 14 to 7. Bradley scored on a 70-yard run after a pass interception and forced Iowa to march twice down the wet field.

Purdue, led again by Cecil Isbell, turned back Carnegie Tech, 7 to 0, on Lou Brock's touchdown run, after Isbell had passed the team into position. Ohio State lost the second inter-sectional game involving Big Ten teams, going down before Southern California, 13 to 12, on the coast. The Bucks scored in the fourth period and took the lead but failed to hold it.

Today's Sport Parade (By Henry McLemore)

New York, Oct. 11.—(U.P.)—Random thoughts on the late departed, but not lamented, world series: This series put an end to the talk about Bill Terry being a master mind . . . a master mind, as I get it, is a long-haired fellow who can think so brilliantly that he can take inferior material and "think" it to victory over superior material . . . Brother Terry's strategy was about as brilliant as a Woolworth engagement ring . . . He was a midas in reverse . . . Everything he touched turned to dross . . . The series just finished also gave quiet death to the accepted belief that National league pitching was superior to the flinging in the American league . . . The only Giants' pitcher who belonged on the same diamond with the Yankees was Carl Hubbell, and don't forget that King Carl's victory was scored when Yankees, in a burst of kindness, used gentleman named Bump Hadley, Ivy Paul Andrews, and Kemp Wicker . . . "Mountain music" Melton, who set something of a record by winning 20 games his first year in the National, was drowned out by a Yankee "swing" band every time he trudged to the mound . . . He was a ball of fire in the senior circuit, but just another fellow with flannel pants to the Yanks . . . Signor Tony Lazzeri probably will change his mind about retiring from baseball . . . The signor, who was supposed to be washed up, hit in the neighborhood of .400 and played a second base that made young Whitehead seem as unimportant as a Phi Beta Kappa key two years after graduation . . . Another quiet death: the belief that National league champions outclass American league champions in fielding . . . The Yankees, who blank on power, went through five games without an error . . . Their defense was as tight as a Scotch drum . . . The Giants, on the other hand, fielded strictly a la minsky, making enough errors to cause Jawn McGraw to turn over in his grave . . . The best ball player on the losing side was Jo-Jo Moore . . . He started the series with a reputation as a great player, and he came out of it with the reputation intact . . . The umpires should be given a rising vote of thanks . . . From the first pitch to the last one their decisions were well nigh perfect.

If you were at the Yankees' celebration party last year you understand why headache remedy stock jumped 227 points today . . . Colonel Ruppert really reared back and threw himself a shindig . . . If the owners are a little disappointed with the attendance they might listen to those observers who believe the business of making a $3.50 ticket seeker stand in line for his pastebord is fatal . . . When a man wants to spend that much for a seat he shouldn't have to shuffle along a sidewalk in front of a box office for hours . . . Joe DiMaggio was the best ball player on the field . . . His batting average was up with the best despite the fact that not once during the series was he given a good ball to hit . . . Terry rates the Frisco Italian as the greatest player he ever saw . . . This is praise, indeed, when you remember that Memphis bill has been around mirrors all his life.

BEARS, GIANTS PRO LEADERS

Chicago Bears And New York Giants Lead League Divisions

By United Press
The New York Giants and Chicago Bears held undisputed leads today in the Eastern and Western divisions, respectively, of the national professional football league.

The giants forged into the lead, from second place without playing. The Bears held first place in their division by scoring their third straight victory. A 20-12 triumph over the Cleveland Rams.

The Giants moved ahead when the Washington Redskins, who had held the lead, dropped a 14-0 decision to the Philadelphia Eagles who scored their first victory in six starts. That dropped Washington into a tie for second with Brooklyn, which was idle.

The Detroit Lions moved up into second place in the Western division, defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 on Dutch Clark's touchdowns pass to Ernie Caddell in the third period. The Chicago Cardinals fell back to third by losing to Green Bay Packers, 34-13.

SUPREME COURT

Although it was possible that at some later date a new challenge to Black might be advanced, the court's action today appeared to close the immediate legal phase of the fierce controversy which has raged about Black—a controversy which started with revelation in newspaper dispatches that the former Alabama senator once was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, with Black present on the bench, announced the decision.

He first rejected the motion presented by Albert Levitt, resigned justice department employee. Levitt, he declared, had failed to establish—as required by law—a personal interest in the case. Then, without further explanation, the chief justice announced that the motion of Patrick Henry Kelly, Boston attorney, seeking a hearing on Black's eligibility had been denied on the same grounds.

The court met at 12:01 p. m. Hughes announced the action on the Black challenges almost immediately to the crowded courtroom.

Speaking first of the Levitt motion, he said: "The grounds of this motion are that the appointment of Mr. Justice Black by the President and the confirmation thereof by the senate of the United States were null and void by reason of his ineligibility under article 1, section 6, clause 2, of the constitution of the United States, and because there was no vacancy for which the appointment could lawfully be made.

"The motion papers disclose no interest other than that of a citizen and a member of the bar of this court. That is insufficient.

"It is an established principle that to entitle a private individual to invoke the judicial power to determine the validity of executive or legislative action he must show that he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining a direct injury as the result of that action and it is not sufficient that he has merely a general interest common to all members of the public."

Then, without further ado, Hughes announced that Kelly's petition had been rejected on the same grounds.

Picketing Efforts At Italian Embassy Fail

Washington, Oct. 11.—(U.P.)—Police today dispersed a group of anti-fascist demonstrators who sought to picket the Italian embassy in protest against the visit of Vittorio Mussolini, son of the Italian premier.

Charging the group of nine demonstrators immediately after they appeared before the embassy, police seized their placards, shoved them off the sidewalk and forced them to leave the vicinity.
