New Ways To Light Dressing Tables

Hidden lighting above the mirrors softly smooths down upon milady's face when she sits at this built-in dressing table.

By Jean Prentice

Whether or not a dressing table is of the built-in variety, there are new ways to light it. I give you these ideas for possible use some day when you get the urge to redecorate your bedroom a new way.

For the built-in dressing table, surrounded by lots of cupboard space, there's a tricky sort of hidden lighting above the mirrors. The mechanics of the lighting include an opal glass roof above the table. Beyond this glass are six 60-watt bulbs in a ceiling box that is ten inches deep.

The light shifts smoothly down upon the face of the person who will sit here. The mirror top of the dressing table reflects the light back to the under part of one's face. For a dressing table fitting close to an alcove or window nook there may be built-in opal glass panels of light on either side of the wall. Behind these panels may be daylight blue bulbs for a daytime lighting effect, and regular bulbs for the lighting under which to apply rouge and lipstick for evening. These two sets of bulbs are on separate switches, of course.

For a kidney-shaped small dressing table, too, where table-top space is at a premium, portable wall lamps on either side are neat and convenient. The ones with translucent inner diffusing bowls give pleasant, softly-filmed illumination. I've seen some with crinoline shades that are darlings.

Three things should be watched in planning your dressing table lighting: The illuminator should be concentrated on your face and not upon the glass. It should be adequate in amount. And it should be glareless.

Government Deficit Less Than Year Ago

Love Is Forgetful

Chicago U. Students Favor Present Policy

Lyons Falls, N. Y. (U.P.)—Timothy hay measuring 7 feet, 3 inches in height has been cut on Leon Kelly's farm. Kelly said the hay grew on old meadow land which had not been plowed or fertilized for more than 9 years.

BE EXTRA CAREFUL

Treat Colds Proved Way

Doubly proved—in world's largest colds-clinic, and by everyday use in more homes than any other medication of its kind. No "dosing." Just massage VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. Relief begins almost at once. And long after sleep comes, VapoRub keeps right on working. Its poultice- and vapor action loosens phlegm, relieves irritation and coughing, helps break local congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

VICKS VAPORUB

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1937, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—When you see the Sonja Henie picture, "Hot and Happy," note one peasant dress that the star wears. It's a family heirloom that has been in possession of the Henie clan for 200 years. And, by wearing it, the star breaks an old Norwegian custom.

These peasant dresses are handed down from mother to daughter at the time of marriage.

Sonja is the first girl of her family who ever received the costume before going to the altar.

There's an old Hollywood legend that all film colony waitresses are disappointed actresses... who either failed to crash the gates or, having succeeded, found the going too tough. . . . Just a yarn, of course, but there is one waitress in a Hollywood restaurant, who is the daughter of a former director and the stepdaughter of a one-time star.

Her father's name begins with W and her stepmother's with R.

Insurance is a tricky business in Cinema City. Rosemary Lane and Dick Powell will be doing a wading sequence for several days in "Hollywood Hotel". In case they hold up the company by developing flu or pneumonia, Warner Brothers has taken out a $50,000 insurance policy. Half on each star.

After all the warnings that have been printed, Film Tough Guy Barker MacLane picked up a hitchhiker on Ventura boulevard two nights ago and was rewarded by having a gun stuck in his ribs. MacLane let go a punch and grabbed the bandit's gun. It wasn't until the fellow had jumped out of the car and disappeared that he discovered the weapon was a toy water pistol.

The J. Oakies will enter the publishing business via a monthly magazine about dogs. They'll call it "The Illustrated Animal News" and will feature film colony pooches... especially the afghan hounds from their kennels. Checks from advertisers will be turned over to a home for stray pups.

The day's screwy story. Charles Lang, cameraman on Crosby's "Badge of Policeman O'Roon", has asked Mary Carlisle not to get more than six hours' sleep a night while working in the picture. "Too much sleep, he says, makes the eyes puffy in the morning. Lang says he uses the same system on Dietrich.

At the Filmarte theater in Hollywood, they revive old hits. The other day it was Lubitsch's "Monte Carlo" and Jeanette MacDonald, passing by, stopped in to see one of her early vehicles.

The costumes of the day and the somewhat dated technique were too much for the star who broke into peals of laughter.

In the middle of it an usher tapped her on the shoulder. "Please," he said, "don't make so much noise."

Chatter. . . . The Garbo-Stokowski marriage rumors will help her picture, "Conquest", which is being released soon. . . . Did you know that Edgar "Slow Burn" Kennedy is a great-nephew to David Livingstone, the explorer? The comedian's middle name is made a nice thing of "Marco Polo". He was on the Goldwyn payroll for five months. . . . Now it's Lee Bowman who is taking Ginger Rogers to dine.

They were at Levy's tavern. . . . And, speaking of dining, it was quite a dramatic moment when Marcel Lamaze, of the Cafe Lamaze, supplied one of the courses at Eddie Sutherland's dinner for George Rector. Twenty-three years ago, Lamaze, wearing a uniform with brass buttons, sold cigars and cigarettes for Rector in his New York restaurant.
